Worthington Tour Of Homes Features Art, Guns, Records

Focal point for the Worthington Tour of Homes on Sunday, July 25, will be the Sharon Township Building, 137 E. Granville-rd. Visitors taking the tour may purchase tickets at the building which also serves as the museum of the Worthington Historical Society, sponsors of the tour.

More than 50 local artists will be exhibiting their work in an outdoor art show featuring paintings, wood carvings, ceramics and sculpture. Many of the artists will be on hand to talk with visitors; among them, Bill Arter, Sarah Carr, Leland McClelland, Mildred Loar, Ann Garver and Alice Lorms.

To emphasize the historical aspect of the tour, Mrs. Timothy G. Armstrong, museum director, has arranged a special exhibit of paintings by Frank Welling, 117 W. New England-av, whose hobby is painting old homes and buildings that once stood in Worthington and were a part of its history. Painting from memory of his childhood, almost 80 years ago, as well as from old photographs, Welling has made a pictorial record of many old landmarks that no longer exist.

Inside the building, a fine collection of guns belonging to Dr. William L. Craver, 516 Hartford-st, will be displayed. Two of the guns, which range from 1680 to the present, are old fashioned blunderbusses.

Old records that list the price of eggs at six cents a dozen, beef at eight cents a pound, handmade boots at $1.50 a pair, and the fine for drunkenness and disorderly conduct at $1 are always items of interest.

Advance tickets for the tour will be on sale at the following homes: Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Tuller, 5830 Sawmill-rd; Mrs. Eli Long, 653 Oxford-st, and Mr. and Mrs. V. N. Holderman, 380 Tucker-dr.

It's Vacation Time— Or 'Last Resort'

By Adeline Daley

With the travel sections of today's newspapers filled with alluring advertisements to join group tours to Europe, the South Seas and the Orient, I just might organize a "grand tour" of my own. After all, I have a pretty fair head start, what with seven kids, my husband and myself already "booked."

You might call ours the "misery-loves-company tour," because it would consist of a personally conducted motorcade to the resort we stay at each summer, "Simpering Pines," oft called the "last resort" but famous for its wide choice of fun-filled activities —at other nearby resorts. Care to join us?

First Day—Motorcade gathers in front of our home for a get-acquainted party and also to help us get loaded. In the car, that is. Any extra luggage space you have, incidentally, will be appreciated.

First Stop—Numerous comfort stops have been arranged by your tour director, the first being at a gas station two blocks from our departing point. Those wishing to return to their homes to pick up forgotten articles and also to check whether the gas is really off, may do so at this time.

Arrival — After a scenic ride on the freeways in which we will bypass all of the quaint villages but will view a breathtaking vista of highway billboards, we will arrive at "Simpering Pines" sometime in the late afternoon. How late, depends on how many comfort stops are made. We will be greeted by our host, the genial owner of the "Pines," who will ask for a week's rental in advance. Please pay.

Second Day — To acquaint you with the resort's facilities, a tour has been arranged of the grounds. This should take about five minutes, thus leaving you with ample time to enjoy some of the advantages —pitching horseshoes or playing the pinball machines in the luxurious "Simpering Pines Lodge," which you may have noted also houses the grocery store, post office, feed store, sheriff's office and garage.

Third Day—Your guide will call for you this morning for a trip by motor to the charming village of Flatsville in which you will browse around in the many shops which vend such items as comic books, candy bars, ice cream and soda pop plus a supply of two-day-old newspapers for any man wanting to keep up on the major leagues.

Fourth Day—Today's itinerary consists of a trip to the closest laudromat, a very popular tour feature. Also a side trip to the supermarket to stock up on groceries.

Fifth Day—A tour of other resorts has been planned to partake of their recreational activities, such as a swimming pool. However, secrecy must be observed in gaining admission. Pretend you are a guest at that resort and quietly drift into the background.

Sixth Day—Hey, where did everybody go?

THIS SMALL New England maple highboy has been purchased by the Worthington Historical Society for use in the Orange Johnson House after it is restored and open to the public. It is to be displayed in the Sharon Township Memorial Building, 137 E. Granville-rd, between noon and 5 p.m. Sunday, July 25, when the society will conduct its 10th annual tour of homes and buildings.

$35.4-MILLION FUND UNDER WAY

Expansion Program Will Add Hospital, Improve Others

Hospital planning experts in many parts of the nation are watching developments in the $35.4 million expansion program now under way at Columbus' eight general hospitals.

One out of six people in the Columbus area will need a hospital bed this year, and unless they are admitted as emergency cases they will have to wait up to six weeks for a hospital bed.

The problem of overcrowded hospitals is not just a local factor, but exists everywhere a community is growing and progressing.

As far back as the late 1930's, hospital facilities in Columbus were considered inadequate and in many respects unsafe.

And Columbus was growing then. The 1940 census recorded 306,087 persons here, and today the population stands at 532,000.

Predictions which have proven accurate in the past show there will be 950,000 in Metropolitan Columbus by 1970, and well over a million by 1975.

But to go back to the end of World War II, hospitals here were having difficulty meeting fire and building code standards. Entire wings of some hospitals were condemned, and at one point five Columbus hospitals could not qualify for maternity licenses.

At that time a hospital consultant, Fred G. Carter, M.D., was engaged to conduct a survey. His report stated:

". . . less than one bed existed to meet the requirements of two. Some structures are so antiquated as to present serious safety hazards."

Dr. Carter recommended a $14 million improvement program "if adequate facilities were to be provided." He also recommended that a permanent organization be set up to consider the health problems of the community.

Founded in 1945, the Hospital Federation had three major functions:

Aid hospitals in planning.
Secure capital financing.
Improve hospital services.

Although Dr. Carter set the price of Columbus hospital needs at $14 million, the planning committee felt that a good start would be to raise $6.7 million in a capital campaign.

The result was the first United Hospitals campaign, out of which came one completely rebuilt hospital, a new wing to an existing hospital, and improvements or additions at five others.

In 1954, Columbus businessmen and members of the planning committee decided, after a hard look at the situation, that continued improvement of health care facilities could not be adequately financed by capital funds campaigns alone.

The late Edgar T. Wolfe, pioneer Columbus businessman, then helped develop a plan of legislation which would permit the building of hospital facilities through the use of public funds.

However, such funds are limited to use for new construction only, and remodeling and renovation of present facilities must be financed by supplementary capital campaign funds, raised voluntarily.

Since then, the people of Columbus have approved two $15-million bond issues for hospital expansion.

The current $35.4 hospital expansion program will add one completely new hospital, and increase the bed capacity at the eight Columbus hospitals by 915.

Local Girls Arrive In Idaho For Senior Scout Roundup

EDITOR'S NOTE: Cheryl Porter, 2904 Crescent-dr, is representing The Spectator as its official correspondent at the 1965 Senior Girl Scout Roundup, which is being held through July 28 in Farragut, Idaho. This is the fifth of a series of articles on the roundup.

By CHERYL PORTER

Arriving in Athol, Idaho, after a two-and-a-half-day train ride, we were whisked away on buses to the Senior Girl Scout Roundup site at Farragut. Signs welcoming us all along the way from Athol to the site greatly increased our enthusiasm.

Cheryl

The Ohio delegation arrived on the second day, to be greeted by 4,500 girls already settled and were eagerly awaiting the 4,500 who would complete the canvas city.

After our arrival, we immediately began to pitch tents and set up the patrol site. The sister scouts from Iowa in my patrol asked us over for dinner on our first night of settling in. This is only one of the friendly gestures that can be seen throughout the many girls.

The country is huge and beautiful. For many of us, this is the first time we have ever been west. Snow-capped mountains topped with huge pine trees surround the area. In a wide deep valley, Idaho's sixth largest city is a colorful spectacle with tents of blue, green, yellow and red.

Some of the first problems encountered were the rocky soil which caused tent stakes to break, the dust and hot weather. Despite these incidents the patrols are finding Farragut to be the greatest.

Demonstrations were our first camp activities. Here we were able to see the different parts of the country represented in skits. New Hampshire scouts making apple cider, gold mining in Idaho, and Indians from Oklahoma were just a few of the skits that were presented.

Troop pictures were taken soon after our arrival. The spectacular site of all the scouts in their bright green uniforms and yellow hats marching to the picture-taking area was very impressive.

Talking about crowds, the telephones are examples, for each girl in very anxious to call home and tell the family about the fun and excitement of the 1965 Roundup.

From the girls of the Columbus delegation, many of these comments were heard: "It is so unbelievable," "It's the greatest opportunity of my life" and "The scenery is out of this world."

Thus, as we settled in, we began to await the arena events, forums and exhibits that will be crowded into the next few days.

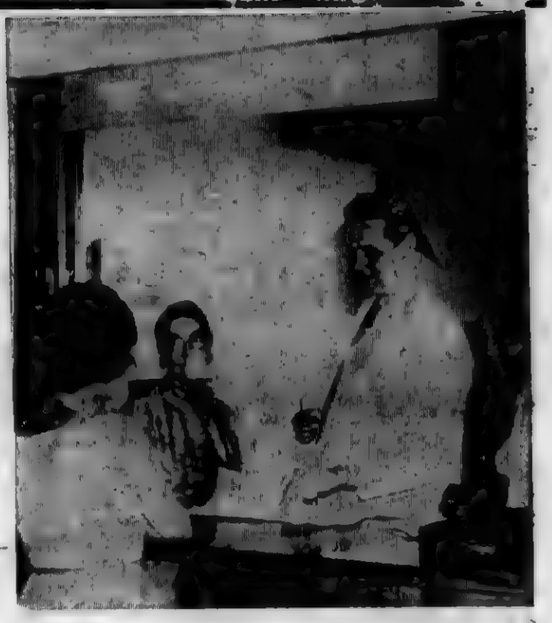
Columbus Hospitals Serve YOU



No one is immune to the possibility of facing hospitalization or using the many and varied services operated by the eight Columbus hospitals and their satellites.

Therefore, you should be concerned about the current United Hospitals Expansion Campaign.

- The campaign seeks to raise $5,500,000 for remodeling and renovation of present facilities.
- New hospitals and satellites will be built with monies from the $15 million bond issue passed in November 1964.
- However, bond issue money can be used for NEW construction only. If a new wing is built, the existing wall must be torn down with funds from another source.
- There will be no house-to-house solicitation. Businessmen and industries are being contacted. Private donations will be gladly accepted.

For further information on donating to this cause, call

Scholarship Program For Actors Planned By ABC

The American Broadcasting Company is launching a nationwide scholarship program to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York City in order to encourage young people in the United States and Canada to become actors.

WTVN-TV, ABC's affiliate station in Columbus, will hold auditions for those interested in the program on Thursday and Friday, July 29 and 30. Local winners will take part in a final regional screening in Detroit later on in the summer to select the scholarship winner. All expenses for this trip will be paid by WTVN.

Winners will be presented a grant in aid of $750 covering tuition for one year and, if asked by the Academy to return for the second and final year of study, an additional $750 will be awarded. This does not cover living expenses or transportation.

The only prerequisites for applying for the scholarship are a high school diploma or its equivalent, a doctor's certificate of health and three letters of recommendation from responsible sources.

All applications or inquiries should be addressed to Joseph Jenkins or Charlene Gallatin at WTVN-TV, 753 Harmon-ay, Columbus. A self-addressed, stamped envelope should be enclosed for a reply. Deadline for applications is July 23 at 5 p.m.

WMNI TOUR OFF FOR HAWAII

CARRYING CAMERAS, flight tickets and a dreamy look in their eyes, forty-four Greater Columbus vacationers boarded TWA's 727 Star Stream flight 119 Saturday morning at Port Columbus and that evening watched Hawaii, our exotic 50th state loom out of a breeze-kissed Pacific sunset. Members of WMNI's Hawaii '65 tour, they were personally escorted by the station's genial "Good Morning Man," Bill Robinson and Edie Balyeat, general manager of Arlington Travel Service. Tour of the Polynesian paradise will include Oahu, Waikiki and the fascinating outer islands of Hawaii and Kauai. On the return leg they'll stop off two days in the "show capitol of the world," Las Vegas, and arrive home Saturday, July 31.

Women Voters Oppose Council's Sewer Plan

The League of Women Voters of Metropolitan Columbus told City Council Thursday it favors an increase in sewer rates to finance the expansion of Columbus' sewage system.

Speaking on behalf of the League, Mrs. Robert Platt pointed out that total costs would amount to $20-million less under the plan favored by the League than for the proposal which Council has placed on the November ballot.

"In order to finance the less expensive plan," the League statement said, "an increase of 24 percent in sewer revenues would be necessary. In view of the favorable financial climate of this area, we believe we can afford to pay increased rates now, an dthus avoid obligating ourselves and our children far into the future.

"Since continued rapid growth of this area is anticipated, it would seem prudent to plan for this additional expenditure now. Should a rate increase of 35 percent be accepted, it would not only pay for the present expansion, but also allow another $20-million for sewer growth between 1969 and 1974."

PUBLIC LIKED FESTIVAL OF ARTS

IF ATTENDANCE and lively public interest is a gauge, the 1965 Columbus Festival of the Arts must be measured an unprecedented success. Interested observers lined up before the displays hours before the Festival officially opened as shown by this Spectator photo taken during early preparations. Along this row were displayed exhibits from the Bryson Gallery, and the popular works of Emerson Burkhart. The SRO sign was out for each of the performances of the performing arts. Jane Cook, static arts chairman, indicated that more space will be requested for next year's Festival so that a wider segment of the exhibitors' collections may be shown. Co-ordinator between the Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Area Committee for the '65 Festival was David Limen.

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Jets 'A Go-Go - - -

If that old "outlook wasn't brilliant" tag fit any better than side by side with the Columbus Jets four months ago, we'll publicly announce our last three golf tallies right behind the Western Union series when the Buckeyes open up in the Stadium next September.

Let's see now: We were going to open up at shortstop with a returnee who had walloped the ball at a .221 clip in '64; we had a guy back at first base who "somehow" hit over .300 but, at 32, couldn't be expected to do it again; we had traded an outfielder for the '64 loop All-Star second baseman (that's like expecting a National League pennant winner to repeat) and we had a pitching staff that either nobody had ever heard of or (with the exception of Sam Jones) had lost more games than they had won one short painful summer before in Jet Stadium.

Wittenmeier

TO TOP IT off, the overall age average on the team initiated rumors that most of the '65 Jets were probably still using "greasy kid stuff."

How in the devil do you explain, then (four months later): (a) more requests for this reporter's Jet pass than for his Indian and Redleg passes put together, (b) several grumbles by friends during the recent homestand that you can't get a decent seat in Jet Stadium anymore and (c) a report that Harold Cooper hasn't once gone near the edge of the Stadium roof all season long.

THE ANSWER, dear Watson, is elementary.

The Jets are in first place?

You're getting warm.

The '65 Jets are keeping you on the edge of your grandstand seat, lawnchair, bar stool etc.

That's close!

The Jets are GO-GO!

Jackpot!

WE'LL JUST take one for-instance, if you please. Opening game last week against the second-place Crackers.

The Jets are ahead but Altanta's got men on every base in the ballpark. To complicate matter's, nobody's out.

There's a hard shot toward Wissman at third. Remember last year how you cringed when that happened? Well, Wissman scoops it up, throws for the force at the plate. One out.

OH, OH — there goes a pop fly toward left center field. That 34-year-old fellow out there, name of Powers, how's he gonna' catch up to that one?

He does. Two down.

The youngster out there on the mound — 21-year-old John Gelnar — looks tired. Shouldn't he come out? Wait till next inning, he just struck out the batter on four pitches to end the inning.

And what about all these fans jumping up to their feet and wildly clapping their hands? You look around. Yep, it's Jet Stadium all right.

THE JET front office proudly announced that 36,800 fans watched exciting, GO-GO baseball during the late seven-day home stand. The smallest crowd was just over 3500.

Total Jet home attendance this season now stands at 110,519 or roughly 84,00 short of the Jets' best gate year (1955).

The old long division isn't what it used to be but that figures out to be something like 4000 fans per game to chalk up a new mark.

THE ALL-TIME Stadium mark (309,869 in 1932) might be asking for a little too much but we'll tell you what we'll do if that one's eclipsed.

We'll sit out there on that unarled-up section of the Mound-st Expressway, turn off our motor, roll down our windows and laugh like a fool — no matter what the damage to our nose.

Worthington Edges Sailfish Swimmers

The Swimland Sailfish toppled more pool records than their opponents from Worthington (6-5) but the latter came out on top in the final score department, 211-209, last week.

Steve Goddard and Sue Graeler paced Sailfish scoring, the former racking up three firsts (100-yd. backstroke, 50-yd. butterfly, 50-yd. free style) in the 14 and under boys competition, the latter nabbing a pair of firsts (50-yd breaststroke and backstroke) in the 12 and under girls division.

Record breakers at the meet included: Swimland — Mike Fowler (50-yd, breaststroke, 10 and under boys, 44.6); Mark Heater (50-yd. free style, 12 and under boys, 27.5); Steve Goddard (100-yd. backstroke, 14 and under boys, 1:11.1); P. Stewart (50-yd, butterfly, 14 and under, 33.5); S. Sims, M. Stimmel, P. Stuart, B. Singer (200-yd, medley relay, 14 and under girls, 2:19.8); R. Gentles, M. Stimmel, P. Stewart, B. Singere (200-yd, free style relay, 14 and under girls, 2:05.1).

Worthington — V. Rogers (50-yd. butterfly, 12 and under, 31.0); Carol Maki (50-yd. backstroke, 14 and under girls, 37.1); Baby (100-yd. breaststroke, 14 and under, 1:16.0); McCormick (100-yd. free style, 17 and under, 53.8) and Beth Arter (100-yd. breaststroke, 17 and under girls, 1:22.3).

Ross Hurls Nats Into State Babe Ruth Slot

The two-hit pitching of Dale Ross, combined with a hitting attack paced by Jack Malone, Rick Carruso and Jim Pierce (two hits each), paced the National Babe Ruth All-Star team to a 7-0 win over their American counterparts Sunday in the showdown game of the double-elimination tourney.

The National All-Stars will compete in state meet play Saturday at Fairborn.

Sequoia Swimmers Splash To Victory Over Glengarry

SEQUOIA won seven of the relay events while Glengarry captured five.

Individual winners for the evening were: 12 and under butterfly girls: Cheryl Schilling (G), boys: Frank Furie (S); 14 and under butterfly girls: Becky Bischoff (S); boys, Scott Schilling (G); 17 and under butterfly girls: Sue Redman (S), boys, Steve Bokros (G); 12 and under backstroke girls: Pattie Schleup (G), boys, Greg Weirich (S); 14 and under backstroke girls: Becky Bischoff (S) boys, Bill James (S); 17 and under backstroke girls: Jeannie Bohlander (S), boys, Hayden Decker (S); 12 and under breaststroke girls: Polly Adkins (G); boys, Ron Biddle (G); 14 and under breaststroke girls: Delores Vitullo (S), boys, Scott Schilling (G); 17 and under breaststroke girls: Mary Jo Vitullo (S), boys, John Vollmer (S); 12 and under freestyle girls: Pattie Cook (G), boys Greg Weirich (S); 14 and under freestyle girls: Becky Bischoff (S), boys, Scott Schilling (G); 17 and under freestyle girls: Sue Redman (S), boys, Steve Bokros (G).

The Columbus El Rancho Polo Team came from behind Sunday to upset the powerful Cincinnati club, 6-5. Cincy had led 4-1 through the first half.

El Rancho upped its season mark to 3-2—with all three wins coming in a row. The next home polo game is scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 1.

As is in every home game, proceeds will benefit the American Cancer Society.

Under Buckeye Skies

By KEN MACK McCREARY

On Catchin' And Cleanin' . . .

With those lazy, hazy days of summer, more commonly known as "dog days," upon us many Spectatorland fishermen have given up until fall.

Let's face it — these are the doldrum days when angling is pretty unproductive, and many of us wonder if we've lost our touch, and what we can do to get it back.

THE FINNY critters can be caught during these puzzling, plaguing periods, but to do it the experts agree that you have to change your tactics, and go at the business of fish-catching in a more selective manner.

The grizzled ol' veterans offer these suggestions:

Mack

(1.) Concentrate your fishing to the hours of dawn, dusk and darkness. Fish lie deep in the cool water during the daytime and usually feed in the shallows from early evening until morning.

(2.) Begin with top-water lures, working them slowly and patiently. If this doesn't produce, change to floating diver plugs. If your luck stays bad, switch to deep-running, bottom-bumping lures.

(3.) THEN, try live bait, fished near the bottom on long points and around cover. Softcraws often produce the answer to waking up the lazy largemouth bass who isn't an eager eater. A small green frog, on a weedless hook, trolled slowly just over weed beds or the bottom will sometimes turn out to be the winner.

(4.) If nothing works, join the fish and take a siesta — there are better days ahead for both fish and fishermen.

* * *

If you do figure the winning fish-fetching combination, you'll probably want to make the trip really worth while by enjoying a delicious fish dinner.

IF YOU'RE a veteran fisherman, you already know the best ways to prepare your catch, but if you're a casual angler or heading on vacation, the food specialists of the U. S. Agriculture Dept. have prepared some good tips on cleaning and dressing fish.

First, wash your catch; then remove the scales by scraping gently with a fish scaler or dull edge of a knife. Work from the stern to the head of the fish.

Next, cut the fish the entire length of the belly, from vent to head and remove the entrails. Then, remove the head by cutting above the collarbone and breaking the backbone over the edge of a cutting board.

REMOVE THE large back fin by cutting the flesh along each side and pulling the fin out. (Never trim the fin with shears or a knife because the bones at the base of the fin will be left in the fish.) Wash the fish thoroughly in cold, running water and it's dressed, ready to cook.

Large dressed fish may be cut crosswise into steaks for freezing. Cut the steaks about ¾ inch thick.

For fillets, cut down the back of the fish from tail to head; then cut down to the backbone just above the collarbone. Turn you sharp knife flat and cut the flesh along the backbone to the tail, allowing the knife to run over the rib bones.

LIFT OFF the entire side of the fish in one piece. Next, turn the fish over and cut the fillet from the other side. Finally, skin the fish by placing it flesh up on your cutting board and simply cutting next to the skin. In the case of some fish, such as catfish, the skin may be removed with a pair of pliers.

If you're planning to freeze fish steaks and fillets, give them a 30-second dip in a solution made up of two-thirds cup of salt to one gallon of water. Then, dry in paper towels, wrap and freeze quickly.

ONE OF Ohio's great conservationists is gone. Former State Senator J. Frank Atwood died at his Columbus home at 4426 Shields last week, following a long illness.

While serving in the General Assembly during the early '20's, Senator Atwood authored may of the fish, game and conservation laws which are still benefiting Ohio's sportsmen.

Even many of his friends didn't know that Frank had an artificial leg; it certainly didn't stop him from enjoying his share of hunting and fishing.

Ohio's outdoors will miss Frank.

$3,000 Purse Offered In Scioto Invitational

Scioto Downs has come up with the "piece de resistance" Saturday night as the main course of an outstanding nine card race.

Headlining the program will be a $3,000 invitational pace with a small but quality packed field.

Trying to select an early pre-race favorite in this talented field is a job for only the canniest of prognostirators. Off of his past performance, the slight morning line nod will have to go to Tuxedo Hanover, the brilliant son of Bullet Hanover, owned by Dale Miller and J. E. Martin of Troy, O. Trained and driven by the crafty Curly Smart, Tuxedo Hanover has been to the post three times this season. In his first trip he won in 2:03 3/5.

Then last Friday Tuxedo was one of the victims of the fabulous Bret Hanover. He finished second to the undefeated Bret, timed in 2:01 4/5 over a race track rated no better than "good."

A surprise entry in the invitational was Gee Lee Hanover, the powerful son of Adios, owned by the Dixie Stable of New York City. Trained and driven by Harold "Sonny" Dancer, Gee Lee Hanover finished third in the Bret Hanover race but has a 2:01 blazer at Liberty Bell, and a 2:02 1/5 victory at Laurel Raceway this season.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Record Crop Of Peaches, Plums

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruit — watermelon, peaches, plums, nectarines, cantaloupes, bananas.

Mrs. Franks

Peaches, heaped in abundance now on produce counters, promise pleasures of eating that are possible only in summer time.

Peach production in the nine southern states is more than triple last year's short crop, and four percent above average. Most of the increase is in the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama. These states are shipping heavily now, and California will ship a heavy volume of fresh market freestone peaches during July and August.

Ohio peaches will be less plentiful than last year because cold weather in January damaged the buds, but growers say they will harvest about 300,000 bushels. These are available from now on through September, as Ohio peaches are grown from the most southern counties to the Great Lakes.

The many Ohio varieties differ a great deal and it's best to select them for a specific use. Sunhaven, Redhaven, Richhaven and Kalehaven are suitable for freezing, canning and fresh use. Golden Jubilee, Fairhaven, Belle of Georgia and White Hale are good for either canning or fresh use. Summercrest, Ranger, Redskin and Lizzie are desirable for fresh use, but are not as suitable for canning and freezing.

Using the recommended varieties for freezing and canning will give you the best results. Notice the background color when you select them. It should be a creamy yellowish color. Ignore the pretty blush—it varies with the variety and is not a sign of ripeness. Hard peaches with green background are immature, lack flavor and will never ripen properly.

Harvesting of a near-record crop of fresh plums is at the peak in California and in all producing areas are ripening ahead of schedule.

This fruitful abundance is made up of a number of varieties, each distinctive in color and flavor.

For example, the Santa Rosa that is so abundant now, is a large, conical, purplish-crimson plum. It is considered best for fresh use—perhaps because of its rich, sweet-tart flavor and juiciness.

Let's Answer Sewer Financing Questions Now

Columbus city councilmen made a right decision Monday night in pulling from the November ballot their ill-conceived sewer bond financing proposal. But to congratulate them would be something akin to commending a card shark for bringing an honest deck into play after he has been caught.

News stories may refer to "council's" action on matters relating to the bond issue scheme. But the truth is that one man, alone, has called all the shots — Council President William R. Fornof. We respect the need for strong, aggressive leadership on any council, irrespective of the political party in control. But leadership should never be so absolute that it supersedes basic responsibilities of the individual members of council.

In Columbus, the phrase "City Council" and the name "Bill Fornof" are synonymous. If the consequences weren't so serious, Fornof's operation would make a good carnival act. He regularly maneuvers five "puppets" without the aid of any visible strings.

In "suggesting" to council that the bond issue be removed from the ballot, Fornof said:

"Experience has demonstrated that bond issues are successful only when public officials are united along with civic organizations in active support. Certain organizations, including the Chamber of Commerce and the Development Committee, have supported the Mayor's demand of an immediate increase (in sewer rates) and the Mayor has announced that he will strenously campaign against the bond issue.

"With City Hall so divided it is apparent that there will be a torrent of charges and countercharges, information and misinformation, which will strike at the understanding and confidence of the voters. This is no climate for consideration of a needed public improvement which has no place in the political arena."

This statement by Fornof is almost fantastic when viewed in relation to the history of the sewer bond issue proposal. It was Fornof who brought the issue to the ballot stage as a political move to avoid the unpleasantness of a rate increase in a year when he faces a re-election bid. Now, because his plan has not been found worthy of any responsible support outside of council chambers, and because it has reaped the scorn it deserves, Fornof has dumped it as a political liability.

And his (not council's) appointment of a civic committee to give further study to the area of sewer expansion is the beginning of another cruel political hoax on the voters. In effect, he wants the civic groups to hold his "political football" outside the playing area while he runs up and down the field saying "You can't tackle me — I don't have the ball."

The question of how best to finance the city's expanding sewer program has been under continuous study since council hired a consultant in October, 1961, almost four years ago. The alternate plans have been crystallized. The time for action is now.

Most of the same groups Fornof wants represented on "his" committee have already given much study to the problem. There is no valid reason why they should be asked to "sit" on a decision for six months. They could reasonably be expected to reach a decision in 30 days — certainly a maximum of 60 days. This would provide Columbus voters with some important answers before they choose the candidates who will represent them for the next four years.

Fornof's decision to take the sewer issue off the ballot will not remove the question of sewer financing from the fall political campaign. In fact, the matter cannot now be properly resolved unless the people of Columbus have some straight answers before November.

The voters have the right to know who is right and who is wrong on this vital issue before they cast their ballots. Someone should see that this right is protected.

Sewer Bond Issue Is Taken Off Fall Ballot

MT. CARMEL'S NEW SATELLITE hospital, to be built on E. Broad-st, near Noe-Bixby-rd, will, when completed, place an accredited hospital emergency room within five miles of every Columbus resident. The building, to cost $3.5 million, is one of the projects in Columbus hospitals' $35.4 million expansion program.

By FRANK RYAN

Columbus city council's controversial sewer bond issue has been taken off the November ballot, but the controversy apparently will not be taken out of this fall's councilmanic races.

Council President William R. Fornof noted opposition to his plan from the Development Committee for Greater Columbus and the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce in a statement he read to his five fellow Republicans on council. All five subsequently voted with him in rescinding a previously-passed ordinance placing the bond issue before the voters.

The action was taken after Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner sent a stern message to council in vetoing the final legislative act toward placing the issue on the ballot. Council's choice was to override the mayor's veto or rescind their resolution. They chose the latter alternative.

Fornof's decision to pull the sewer issue from the ballot was reached after conferences with Paul R. Gingher, chairman of the Metropolitan Committee and William Schneider, chairman of the Franklin County Republican Executive Committee.

Fornof said the bond issue question could be delayed until next year because City Auditor John Price has certified the availability of an additional $10 million for sewer expansion financing.

Price told The Spectator Tuesday that he could certify sufficient funds to continue the city's sewer program through 1966, but that his certification is contingent on council action to gain new sewer funds.

He said council must pass legislation diverting acreage fees from a trust fund to a sewer bonding fund. Price said that council must also authorize use of bond money to pay costs incidental to sewer capital improvements, and not now included in any bond fund. He said such items as engineering, land acquisition and inspection costs would be affected.

Price told The Spectator that Fornof influenced his decision to certify the additional money. "I never figured on using it that way," he said, "but when Fornof approached me last week I used their figures and mine to come up with the solution.

"I think they felt the bond issue was not getting a very good response, and I think they wanted to get out from under," Price commented.

Fornof, during Monday's council session, secured approval to appoint a committee "representing all points of view" to recommend a course of action to council. Fornof indicated the bond issue might be placed before voters in May, 1966.

Fornof's committee would include representatives from the following civic groups and city divisions:

Metropolitan Committee, Chamber of Commerce, Development Committee for Greater Columbus, Home Builders Association, Industrial Association, Real Estate Board and organized labor. Also included are a councilman, and the city's auditor and service director.

Mayor Sensenbrenner expressed himself as being "disgusted" with council's action. He said that Fornof, in setting up his committee, "didn't include the most important member — the finance director."

Sensenbrenner quoted a portion of a letter from Price to Fornof which said: "By some close figuring we might be able to issue enough in 1967 to keep up with the (sewer) capital improvement program."

"What kind of conclusion is this?" Sensenbrenner asked.

The mayor pointed out that most of the groups represented on Fornof's committee have already studied and rejected council's plan. Sensenbrenner said that his position on the sewer issue was to a great extent on the advice of the committees which have rejected council's plans. "And

New $3.5 Million Hospital Slated For Far East

A new satellite hospital with a minimum of 140 acute care beds, operated by Mt. Carmel Hospital, is one of the major projects in the $35.4 million expansion program at Columbus' eight general hospitals.

The new facility will be built on E. Broad-st, near Noe-Bixby-rd, to serve the eastern areas of Columbus and Franklin County.

Frederick W. LeVeque, vice-chairman of the $5.5 million United Hospitals Expansion campaign, said the project means that an accredited hospital emergency room will be within five miles of every resident of Columbus, and within 15 minutes of every resident of Franklin County.

The parent institution will supply the top level administrative and operating personnel, and will handle such supporting services as accounting, laundry, purchasing, central supply and the main laboratory.

The new satellite hospital will also have all the services required for operation of a 140-bed acute care facility, supplemented by those directly available at the present Mt. Carmel Hospital.

Cost of the new hospital has been set at $3.5 million. Along with $1,655,000 in improvements planned at the present Mt. Carmel facility, the hospital's total expansion program will come to $5,155,000.

Operated by the Sisters of the Holy Cross, of Notre Dame, Ind., Mt. Carmel was the dream of a farsighted physician, Dr. W. B. Hawkes, who established it in 1885.

In the ensuing years, Hawkes Hospital of Mt. Carmel, so named in honor of its founder, developed into a major medical center.

Mt. Carmel today covers nearly two city blocks, at 793 W. State-st, and has 462 beds and 55 bassinets.

John D. Connor, president; George W. Byers, vice-president; Harrison M. Sayre, secretary, and Norman J. Altman, Thomas J. Carroll, Gen. Carlton S. Dargusch, John Falter and Frederick E. Jones, Sr.

Other members include Msgr. William Kappes, Charles Lazarus, James W. Shocknessy, Dr. Edwin J. Stedem, Everett Reese, Dr. Bertram D. Thomas and Richard R. Rodenfels.

Requiem Mass Sung For Ralph Hammar, 68

Requiem Mass for Ralph A. Hammar, 68, 727 Chelsea-av, was sung July 27 in St. Catharine's Catholic Church, followed by interment in Green Lawn Cemetery by Leach and Son Fueral Home.

Hammar was the chief of police in Bexley from 1933 until 1942. He was a veteran of both World Wars and the Korean War, and retired from the army as a colonel.

He is survived by brother, sister and daughter.

Eastgate Work Delayed

Eastgate petitioners led by Marguerite Wagenbrenner, 169 N. Nelson-rd, have until 10 a.m. Aug. 4 to file an amended petition opposing city plans to pave streets and install street lights in the north Nelson-rd area.

The Aug. 4 deadline was set by Common Pleas Judge Charles R. Petree who took no other action on the matter at a hearing Monday night. A new hearing will be held if the amended petition is filed.

Baptists To Break Sod For Wing

Ground-breaking service for an educational wing to East Baptist Church, E. Broad-st at Pinewood, will be held Sunday, Aug. 1, at noon.

The L-shaped addition, to house the nursery and youth departments, will be constructed on the Broad-st side of the church.

The congregation met at Broad Street School from 1932 to 1954 when the church was constructed.

Rev. Francis McCarty is pastor. Richard Meyer, architect, will be introduced at Sunday's ceremony, and representatives of George Moore and Sons, contractors, will be present.

Mrs. Edith Laff, a charter member and lifetime honorary member of the Board of Deacons will participate.

Turning ground will be John Wellbaum, representing the Board of Trustees, and members of the building and planning board, George H. Jones, chairman, and Perry Sparks, Bob Miller, Harold Kelley, Ken Landis, Dick Maxim, See Lock, Mrs. James Dellinger and Mrs. William Reed.

Other charter members of the church will also be present.

IN BEXLEY

Zone Request Is Withdrawn

Opponents to a plan to rezone the northeast corner of Bryden-rd and Parkview to permit construction of town houses, armed with an additional 54 signatures to a protesting petition already filed, appeared at Bexley Council Tuesday night only to find the rezoning request had been withdrawn.

C. G. Auer, owner of the property, and Walter Knapp of 1052 Berkeley-rd, notified council last week that they wished to withdraw the request, at least temporarily. They indicated that they might submit the matter again in the fall.

Council also set a special meeting for Tuesday, Aug. 17, 7 p.m. in order to take action on ordinances that would place two amendments to the city charter on the fall ballot.

The meeting was set during council's traditional vacation month because members must vote on the measure in time for filing before the Sept. 3 deadline.

The town houses, proposed by Auer and Knapp, would be of the luxury type, and contain three bedrooms, two and a half baths, family room, private patio and have an open fireplace in the living room. Rental would be about $250 a month.

The two explained that they would personally occupy two of the units, and that they felt there was a need for this type of residence in Bexley.

Neighbors protested, in spite of apartments on the west side of Parkview, south of Bryden-rd. These, they argued, were an improvement to the street since they were built on vacant land or replaced neglected properties.

Proposed changes to the city charter would give council the power, should the office of mayor become vacant, to name one of their own members or a qualified elector of the city in the event council president could not serve.

Presently, the charter requires that the mayor's office must be filled by council president until the next general election.

And council would also, if the amendments were approved, be able by majority vote to separate the duties of service and safety director from the office of the mayor, should it be necessary.

At this time the duties must be performed by the mayor.

Letters from residents encouraged council in its efforts to devise an ordinance to control excessive noise in the city.

Committee is currently studying the problem, including control of the placement of outdoor units for air-conditioning to minimize the nuisance to neighbors.

Residents Unite To Protest Olde Orchard School Delay

About 100 residents, representatives of their neighbors in the city's farthest east side, met with a Columbus Schools' administrator Tuesday night to discuss the construction delay of an elementary school on McNaughten-rd.

Warren E. Beers, coordinator of fiscal and school plant studies, explained the land acquisition problems leading to the delay in building Olde Orchard Elementary at 800 McNaughten-rd. He set a Nov. 15 completion date.

He also discussed the schools' problems and progress in supplying schools in step with a community whose school population is growing at the rate of 400 to 500 a year.

The meeting, organized by the Triple R Protective Association, formed by four civic groups — Olde Orchard Estates, Laurel Canyon, Greenbrier and Ravenwood Civic Associations — was also attended by representatives of Red Coach and Glenmeadows areas.

Cause for their concern was the pressing need of an elementary, and of safe transportation for their children.

Construction start of Olde Orchard Elementary, expected to be completed by September, was delayed because of problems in acquiring a different site than the one originally selected.

Beers told the group Tuesday night that the school should be ready by Nov. 15.

Dan Cohen, president Olde Orchard Association and spokesman for the entire group said, however, "Construction has not even started. I don't see how it can be finished in four months' time."

Meanwhile, Beers assured the group Tuesday night, the children would be transported by bus to nearby schools, such as Maybury and Woodcrest.

Members of the group also questioned why the planned elementary would contain only 14 rooms. "It is anticipated that there are already enough children in the area to fill the building to capacity," Cohen said.

Site of the school is a 4.6 acre tract about 200 feet north of McNaughten, and about the same distance from Cherry Hill-rd, main entrance to Olde Orchard area.

Questions concerning the safety of children walking to and from the school were also posed at the meeting. The need for a walkway from Ravenwood, where children must cross McNaughten, was a concern to the parents.

And a one and one-half block stretch from Cherry Hill-rd to the school, bordering a dam over the lake, would be completely fenced, Beery promised.

Fare At The Gayety Has Little To Offer

The fight of the Driving Park Area Council and the Berkely - Kent Neighborhood Club against the recent transition of the Livingston Theatre, 1571 E. Livingston-av to the Gayety Theater and all the name implies has gained a lot of moral support in the past week.

But in the opinion of city officials and the civic group, led by Clifford Tyree it's going to take more than moral support to close the doors.

Presently "adult only" films are being shown. The posters in the front promise that live burlesque will soon be added to the menu which at the very best can be dubbed as in poor taste.

The trouble began recently with the lease of the theatre to the G & A Enterprizes by F. W. Rollins, owner.

G & A is reported to be a corporation out of New York with outlets in that city and in Miami.

The absentee owners, according to Tyree, have stated that they intend to stay open indefinitely and that legal action is no immediate threat as similar cases have been dragged through the courts for five or six years.

Among the Gayety's Monday night audience were Capt. Herman Beck of the vice squad; Fred Simon, city safety director and John Young, City attorney.

None of them liked what they saw, but they aren't sure just what can be done about it.

Part of the difficulty comes with the Supreme Court decision which make obscenity extremely difficult to pin down. Another weakness lies within the Ohio law which protects an operator from conviction unless he "knowingly" exhibits obscene material.

Still more difficulty comes with the knowledge that the city ordinance prohibiting live burlesque within one mile of a church or school is vulnerable as to its constitutionality.

The consensus of city law enforcement officers at the present seems to be that a move must be made against the type of "entertainment" being offered, but there is little sense in filing a case only to have it thrown out of court.

However, Simon and Beck both indicated that action will be taken.

In the meantime, the board of movie examiners is being asked to undergo the unpleasantness of sitting through the current double feature.

According to Young this board can file a court action. Also it has been intimated that one or more private citizens are considering similar moves.

The groups headed by Tyree are weighing the advantages of picketing the theatre against the disadvantages. Although they heartily condemn the films and the idea of live burlesque, they hesitate to act as publicity agents for this type of "theater."

Tyree as supervisor of delinquency, Department of Franklin County Juvenile Court, is well qualified to evaluate the potential effect of such entertainment.

Only last week was appointed as a part-time staff member of the Columbus Metropolitan Area Community Action Organization to help develop programs under the EOA in youth areas.

Few Repeat Customers Predicted For Gayety

By JANE ROBINSON

Although anyone you talk to has an opinion on the matter, the average person is talking through his hat, because he has never seen just what is offered.

Here's a steak dinner to a plugged nickel that once would be enough for anyone but a kook who enjoys wallowing in slime.

The photography is nothing to brag about, the films have about as much plot as a telephone directory and reel after reel of buttocks and mammary glands can be a pretty lack-luster sight.

For the normal, mature adult such fare has no attraction, and he is about as likely to get an overdose as he is to swallow a quart of castor oil.

It just won't go down.

What the average person does have to worry about is what effect such entertainment may have on the immature, the kooky, the neurotic, the twisted mind with psychotic tendencies.

Such fare can spell trouble and plenty of it. If you don't believe me, ask Capt. Beck of the vice squad how little it takes to bring dormant criminal tendencies to the surface.

He's in a position to know—he's seen plenty of it.

the funny part of it is that almost all the people on these committees are Republicans," he added.

Sensenbrenner said that he had "always respected" past information from the city auditor's office, and had felt a friendship toward Price. "But," Sensenbrenner said, "how can anyone get a straight picture when in three months Price has gone up $20 million" in the amount of money he will certify for sewer expansion expenditures.

"Early this year," Sensenbrenner continued, "Price said he could certify only $9.5 million for sewer expansion projects. Under admitted pressure from Fornof, he later upped the figure to $19.6 million. Now he has come up with a total of $30 million, $20 million more than he would certify three months ago."

The mayor also bristled at the role played by William Schneider, county Republican chairman.

"What's Bill Schneider got to do about running the City of Columbus? These councilmen should stand on their own feet. If Bill Schneider wants to run the City of Columbus, he should run for council," the mayor concluded.

Area Boy Receives Eagle Badge Monday

The Eagle award — Scouting's highest rank — was presented to Larry L. Sinsabough Monday, July 26, in a court of honor held by Troop 277 in the Fellowship Hall of the Reynoldsburg Methodist Church, the troop's sponsor.

Larry, 17, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Sinsabough, 7381 E. Broad-st. He was an explorer in Post 277 of Reynoldsburg until it was discontinued earlier this year, and since then he has served as a junior assistant scoutmaster in the troop.

While in the post, he served for two years as its president. Before this he had served as patrol leader, quartermaster and senior patrol leader in the troop.

Larry has completed 28 merit badges in earning the Eagle — seven over the required number. This makes him automatically eligible for an Eagle palm after six months. The merit badges he liked working on most were in the nature group and First Aid to Animals.

A June graduate of Gahanna Lincoln high school, he is studying to be a veterinarian at Ohio State University.

Minerva School Annex Contested

Plans for Columbus City Schools to annex the Minerva Elementary School district near Westerville were challenged by the Westerville Board of Education last week.

A 287-acre tract of land which includes the school was annexed by the city of Columbus in February.

Although the school now is located in Columbus, the majority of its 180 students live in Minerva Park, part of the Westerville school district.

Harold C. McDermott, Superintendent of Westerville schools, and his assistant, Ray Mooris, appeared before the State Board of Education last Wednesday as representatives of the Westerville School Board.

They asked state board officials to examine the situation and consider granting the contested school to Westerville district. The state board has not yet acted on the request.

IN THREE well-played games Wednesday night in the Under Thirty League, the Pussycats beat "Them" 10-9 in extra innings, Wilson Auto Parts defeated Williamson Furniture 4-1, and Superior Die and Tool defeated the Red Dogs 10-6.

Steve Cartwright provided the power for the Pussycats with two home runs and a single. Mike Kilbourne hit safely four times and Sig Munster had three for four—one of which drove in the winning run.

Sonny Darguscb, Leon Friedland, Ed Weston and Charlie Burkham had two hits apiece for "Them."

WILSON AUTO pitcher Dick Goldstein gave up only three hits as Wilson's maintained its undefeated record. Second baseman Bob Doak of Wilson's hit the game's only home run and center fielder Bob Benjamin sparkled in the field with some fine catches.

Superior Die and Tool jumped off to an early 8-0 lead only to have the Red Dogs whittle away at the lead to make the score 8-6 going into the final two innings. But Superior found its batting eye again to gather a couple of insurance runs.

Superior pitcher Fred Midors led his team with three for four at the plate. He received fine support from shortstop Nick Cooper, who made several nice plays in the field, had two hits, and scored three runs.

SLAMMIN' PAM WINS GALS' GOLF TITLE

NINETEEN-YEAR-OLD Pam Higgins proved herself the "sweetheart of the Southeast" last week by capturing the Franklin County Women's golf crown with a three and one finals verdict over defending champ Jane Polil. The Groveport lass is pictured above (left) extending a final "good luck" handshake to Miss Polil before the pair tackled the Brookside C.C. course Friday. Pam was back shortly later for another handshake — this time as Women's champion.

Bays, Thomas Pace Sox But... Oh—Those Nats!

Steve Bays' clutch pitching, backed up by George Thomas' three-run homer, provided the Red Sox with a 7-4 win over the Braves in a battle of the Major League "unbeatens" in the Whitehall Boys Baseball Association last week.

The unbeaten Nats (12-0) of the Pee Wee League have compiled some enviable batting statistics so far this season.

RUSTY BROBST and Jerry Pollard, for example, have each cracked six homers apiece this season for the Nats, who have 10 of 15 players on their roster hitting over the .300 mark!

A total of 600 WBBA baseballers attended a "Little League Day" last Sunday at the Norton Church of Christ. The boys were well rewarded, receiving free passes to the Jets game with Syracuse next Tuesday.

The Nats of the Pee Wee League were best represented of the WBBA teams with 10 players present for the day.

Mid-Season Champ Races Set At CMS

A newcomer to the Columbus Motor Speedway — Jim Martin of Ft. Wayne, Ind. — roared to victory in the late-model feature Sunday night, but "Demon Don" Gregory continued on his merry way as he racked up his 13th straight sportsman headliner and his 16th of the year.

Speedway officials announced that Friday night racing has been discontinued for the balance of the year but Sunday night racing will continue, probably into October.

This Sunday the South Side oval will be the scene of the "Mid-Season" championship races for both late-models and sportsman. It will be an eight-event program, highlighted with a 50-lap late-model and a 35-lap sportsman championship feature.

There'll be $500 in cash in the Speedway's free game of "Total," for the fan or fans able to pick the first five finishers, in order, in the late-model feature.

Time trials will get under way at 7 p.m. with the first race set to get moving at 8.

WHITEHALL PLAY:

'Comebacks' Featured In Slo-Pitch League

Darnell, the Police Department and the Recreation Department got off on the right path Sunday, each passing opening round two tests in the Whitehall Slo-Pitch League.

Top game of the week came as the Recreation Department came from behind to edge luckless Holy Spirit, 5-4.

TRAILING 4-2 going into the sixth frame, the Recreation "boys" put together six hits, including a homer by John LaCorte with Don Sapp on second base to tie the score.

Vince Savoia sounded the loss gong for winless Holy Spirit shortly later with a double that drove across Phil Allen, who had singled to keep the rally alive.

The losers were credited with a fine defensive game, especially on the part of third sacker Father Jim Ogurcheck and second baseman Rich Summers.

FIRST-ROUND champion Darnell continued on the win path with a 10-3 win over the Fire Department as the brothers Dorsett (Ron and Don) each collected three hits in as many tries.

Jack Gilmore, the man with the "mystery" pitch, went the route for the mound win, allowing only six hits. Harrington whacked out a homer and two singles for Darnell.

The WBBA Coaches almost slipped out of the 'cuffs before the Police Department got 'em behind bars, 12-8.

TRAILING 12-2 going into the final frame, the Coaches kicked off a six-run rally, almost stealing the game from the Police.

Paul Dillon, who had a homer, single and double in three at-bats for the Coaches, unloaded his four-bagger in that big inning with the bases full.

For the Police, Paul Clifford went four-for-four, including a triple and a double. Teammate Paul Cordle pounded out three hits — one a triple.

THIS WEEK'S schedule finds:
Darnell vs WBBA Coaches (E. Main-st), 1:30 p.m.
Recreation Dept. vs Fire Dept. (E. Main-st), 2:45 p.m.
Holy Spirit vs Police Dept. (Rosemore), 1:30 p.m.

Aprile No-Hitter Sparks Giants

Hits were scarce Tuesday in a battle between the Braves and Giants in the Shadywood Pony League.

The Giants won 3-0, as Mark Aprile fired a no-hitter, fanning seven, walking three and hitting one batter.

Darrell Smith, hurling for the Braves, allowed only one hit.

Aprile scored the only run he needed to win himself as he walked, stole second and third and came home on a sacrifice bunt.

AREA DIVERS SWEEP OLYMPIC HONORS

SWIMLAND QUARTET RIGHT IN (FREE)STYLE

ALTHOUGH 2/10th of a second made all the difference between first and third place in the 200-yard free style relay for boys 10 and under at the Junior Swimming Olympics last week, this quartet of Swimland swimmers got there first (2:18.7). This first place helped Swimland to a third-place (177 points) behind winner Arlington (309) and runnerup Newark (209). From left are: Mike Fowler, Tom Hester, Mike Jones and Mike Toomay.

Central Ohio All-Star Game Set Saturday

The Central Ohio Baseball League will hold its third annual All-Star doubleheader Saturday at Jet Stadium with the first of two seven-inning games getting under way at 1 p.m.

The All-Star teams, divided into Saturday and Sunday Division nines will represent the 14 teams in the league.

Saturday Division All-Stars will contain the cream of players from Arlington, Spartan A.C., Pope's Inn, Gahanna Merchants, Big City Garden, Columbus Falcons and this year's league leader, Shade-Link. The Saturday circuit manager will be Arlington's Jack Figgins.

Sunday Division All-Stars, managed by Whitehall's Don Marcum, include players from Washington C. H. Colts, Lancaster Anchor-Hocking, Whitehall Merchants, Columbus Plutes, American Welding, Columbus Southwest Airport and Stacy Hall's Sheriffs.

Admission to the All-Star game is free.

Jets Put IL Lead On Line For Home Stand

The Columbus Jets, battling to protect their International League lead, return home Monday for their eighth home stand with eight games divided between Syracuse, Toronto and Toledo.

The Chiefs, who have given Larry Shepard's crew headaches at the stadium all season, kick off the home stand with single night games Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday (8 p.m.).

THE TORONTO Maple Leafs, figured by most IL experts as the Jets' chief contender for the loop flag, follow Syracuse into the park for a vital three-game night set with singletons through Saturday.

Toledo's Mud Hens will conclude the stand with a Sunday doubleheader (1:30 p.m.).

The opener with Syracuse will be "Dollar Night" with everyone admitted to the grandstand for $1. Children under 12 free if accompanied by parents.

OTHER "special nights" include: Tuesday — "Kid's Night" (pony and other prizes to be given away). Wednesday — "Sporting News Night" (first 800 fans receive free Sporting News). Thursday — "Electric Co. Night." Friday — "County Engineers Night."

After the home twin-bill with Toledo Sunday, Aug. 8, the Jets will buzz up to the Mud Hens' park for single games Aug. 9 and 10, before coming back home (Aug. 11) to open a six-game stand against Rochester and Buffalo.

FISHIN' FACTS

Untold thousands of fishing licenses will be sold in the next month to vacationers who will try their luck in summer resort waters during those "two weeks off."

The vast majority of once-a-year anglers will find this fishing pleasant, but catches may be lean. To assist these folks, the experts at Mercury outboards, offer the following advice:

Fish early — the crack of dawn is generally the most productive time, not because of surface activity that develops later in the day, but because water temperatures are at their lowest point.

Tepid waters that delight swimmers and water skiers are unsuited to game fish. So even without disturbances going on overhead, fish still will seek the more temperate depths. During night, as the water loses some of its heat, fish make feeding forays into the food-filled shallows.

Fish late — for this reason, evening and night-time temperatures are most favorable to many species. Bass and walleye, particularly, are extremely active during the dark hours. This is the best time to fish for them in summer, resort area or not.

Fish deep — if you do fish during mid-day, go down into the depths where temperatures and oxygen levels are more tolerable to the quarry. By drifting slowly with a bottom bumping minnow, good catches may be taken.

Compared to other places and other seasons, resort area fishing in mid-summer is usually quite challenging. But, they add, it probably wouldn't be much different if the resorts weren't there. Time of year and type of water pose the problem.

Even with these general rules you shouldn't expect too much. But be ready when the unexpected happens . . . it usually does!

Jewish Center Sports Roundup

Green Cabs ended round one in the Pony League with a 5-1 record and now pace round two at 3-1. Last week the Drivers defeated Jetcoats, 14-2, as Berliner collected five solid hits. Silberman and Chambers banged out three hits apiece for the winners.

Jetcoats' Hammeroff tried hard to douse Green Cab by homering in the first inning and collecting three more hits later, but he was the lone spark plug.

WITH HIGH hopes after Wednesday's forfeit win over Barney and White, Bargainland defeated Jetcoat 12-3.

Katz was Bargainland's big star accumulating five hits during the game. Clayman, Berg and Gurvitz each collected three hits while Gurvitz accounted for the only homer.

Bromberg and Engelman each collected two hits for Jetcoat.

Elsewhere Green Cab edged out Barney and White 16-14.

WEINER, HAAS, Zieve, Goodman, Kramer, Gurvitz and Golden of B&W all had at least two hits to their credit, and Weiner, Zieve and Kramer had home runs.

THERE WAS some real dusty action in the YYA softball circuit last week as Richfield Construction tromped league-leading Dick's Barber Shop, 16-10.

Gaory Beim, Corky Friedenberg, Ron Shkolnik and Mark Levine were Richfield's big quartet of players, credited with at least three hits, while Mark Levine was the lone man on the team to hit a home run.

Joel Engelman, Jerry Topy (home run) and Ron Berman were Dick's only players to be credited with two hits which was insufficient to bring up their six run lag.

HARRIS Construction edged Raybo Vending, 18-16, in a slug-fest.

Dennis Oppenheimer, Shasvitz, Levinson, Alan Sterling and Wood were the big guns for Harris — each collecting three hits in the game.

Al Pressman, Ken Solomon, Steve Goodman, Ken Zuckerman, Dutch Simpson and Bob Blue each collected two hits for Raybo.

AFTER ENDING the first series with a 4-0 mark, Pegasus was upset Sunday night by Pops Dworkin, 8-6. It took the combined efforts of Klein, Rosen and Levy, who collected three hits apiece, to down the driving Pegasus.

Stern, Topolosky and Calmen, credited with two hits, tried to keep their team's league-leading position but couldn't douse Pops rampant fire.

Epsilons won over Capital 21-12. Epsilon's star player was Ruben who collected seven hits during the unusually long game. Rinkov, Reinhorn, Masser, Gold, Rosen and Shell were credited with at least three hits.

BLAZAR, Timens, Goldhammer, Boster and Snyder, having at least three hits to their credit, tried to narrow the ninth run margin but couldn't slow the moving Epsilons.

Spectator Columnist Joins Ducks Unlimited

Ducks Unlimited, one of the nation's most prominent conservation organizations, will elevate two more Ohioans into its executive ranks next month — one of them The Spectator's outdoor columnist, Ken Mack McCreary.

Ken will assume his duties as executive secretary of the organization Aug. 1 at DU's new national headquarters in Des Plaines, a suburb of Chicago.

JOINING McCREARY will be Ben H. Anderson, present assistant chief of the Ohio Division of Wildlife and associated with the division for the past 19 years.

Anderson will become DU's promotion director.

Ducks Unlimited was organized in 1937 and has since grown to a membership of 30,000, completing over 750 projects to provide nesting and breeding areas for waterfowl in the meantime.

McCREARY, better known as Ken Mack to listeners of WTVN Radio, was selected as "Ohio Outdoor Writer of the Year" in 1961.

Garland Ups 'Shoe Margin; Season Closes Tomorrow

Garland Equipment maintained its first place hold on the City Recreation Horseshoe League standings by trouncing New Rome I last week, 5-1.

T. Harris (97-447) paced the Caskey win but had to give honors to Rome's J. Boesch who turned in a 101-479 effort.

Garland now holds a four-game lead in the horseshoe standings but has a busy schedule in the loop's final week of play.

A popular song is usually one which we wish was not so popular.

Sporting Chances

Muskelunge must be at least 40 in. in length and 20 lbs. in weight to qualify for regular membership. A measurement of 30 in. or more qualifies a fisherman for Honorable Mention.

Ludwig snagged a 35 in. 11 lb., 13 oz. muskie at Hargus Lake in Pickaway County two months ago.

LATEST National High Point standings of the American Power Boat Association show Columbusite Buddy Byers (1563) in second place — a scant six digits behind leader Rex Manchester.

Buddy picked up 1000 of his points by piloting his sleek racer, Miss Madison, to first place in the Dixie Cup competition late last month.

Byers picked up $5 thousand in prize money at the Dixie Cup race.

FLYAWAY IS GREAT FOR BIRDS
But not for hair! If your hair is healthily vibrant and just chock full of electricity, or simply coarse and wiry, it is bound to be a nuisance at times. It's amazing what some kitchen beauticians recommend. One of them suggests that generous applications of mayonnaise will keep away that flyaway look. Another suggests a nice thick mix of ordinary cooking gelatin. You can imagine the mess mayonnaise makes. It's practically impossible to get out of your hair! And the gelatin! It dries hard and breaks the hair when you try to comb through it. If you have flyway hair we have safe brand name products made especially to control it. Take the advice of a professional beautician.

OUR SALON IS NOT FOR EVERY WOMAN
The woman of taste prefers having a small, perfect gem rather than a diamond with a flaw even though it is as big as the Ritz. She favors two course dinners beautifully prepared and served, over showy oppulence. AND she prefers a beauty salon where she is sure to get correct advice on expressing her own individuality with subtlety and good taste. These women, our patrons, cannot praise us enough. Perhaps you should be one of them.

By defeating Woodcrest 13 to 4 last Tuesday, the intermediate boys' softball team is now 2 and 1 in the Far East Playground League. The Junior boys' softball team had a bye.

In the Junior Jet action, Team 3 stayed on top in the eight and nine year old league by winning one game and losing one last week. They pulled a tight one out from Team 2 with the score of 9 to 8. New Buckeye Mart Store Under Way At Berwick Plaza

Ground was broken this week for a new Buckeye Mart Department Store being constructed at the Berwick Plaza Shopping Center in southeast Columbus.

The Buckeye Mart store, first of three to be constructed here by August, 1966, is scheduled for opening this fall according to Carle R. Wunderlich, president and general manager of Buckeye Mart, Inc., a division of Cussins and Fearn.

Berwick Plaza, located at Refugee-rd and Winchester-pk, is a development of the Don M. Casto Organization. Don M. Casto, Jr., president, said, "It was our plan from its inception to have a full-line department store at Berwick Plaza. We are happy that such a fine and successful firm as Buckeye Mart selected Berwick Plaza for their first store in the Columbus market."

With 88,000 square feet, the new Buckeye Mart at Berwick Plaza will offer convenient one-stop shopping and a complete selection of merchandise in 60 different departments.

More than 50 percent of the sales floor will be devoted to clothing. Shoppers will find latest fashions in dresses, suits, coats, sportswear, lingerie and millinery. Other departments will include girls' and teens' fashions, children's and infants' wear.

The exclusive Crystal Room will feature finer quality ladies' wear at appreciable savings to the shopper.

Men and boys will be offered a large display of coats, jackets, accessories and work clothes. Shoes for the entire family will also be featured.

In other full-line departments, famous brand appliances, housewares, domestics, jewelry, furniture, floor coverings, tools, hardware, toys, sporting goods, records, cameras, health and beauty aids, tires and auto accessories, plumbing and heating equipment and a large array of other merchandise will be available.

Self-service or the attention of trained sales people, plus store-front checkouts will facilitate rapid Buckeye shopping.

Frank S. Benson, Jr., vice-president of the Don M. Casto Organization, who is in direct charge of the operation of Berwick Plaza, said, "This new department store, which is a great addition to our center, is scheduled to be opened to the public on Nov. 1, 1965."

Other Stores Planned

A second Buckeye Mart store to be located at the intersection of Henderson and Reed-rds, together with a third at 3600 Indianola-av, will be completed by August, 1966. Arrangements for these stores are being handled by William Hadler of Hadler Realty, with Jack Morgan representing Cussins and Fearn.

The three new Buckeye Mart department stores together will create over 225 new local employment opportunities.

Recently, over a half-million dollars of IBM data processing and computer equipment was installed at the Cussins and Fearn - Buckeye Mart office and warehouse at 3636 Indianola-av. Besides increasing the efficiency of stock movement and inventory control, it will enable the company to further extend their current credit and time payment service to include a new 30-day revolving credit plan.

Cussins and Fearn, Buckeye Mart's parent organization, is well known throughout Ohio. From a humble start in 1893 on Columbus' west side, it branched out and now operates 35 outlets under the Cussins and Fearn name. Nine of these are local.

Began in 1962

Only three years ago, recognizing that customers wanted to do all their shopping under one roof, company officials began to formulate plans for an entirely new concept in full-line, one-stop department store design and operation. Plans were made combining the firm's own 72 years of experience with knowledge gained from a careful study of successful department store operations all over the country. Where needed, experts from other top retail organizations were selected to join the Buckeye Mart management team.

From this combined and concentrated effort, the Buckeye Mart image quickly took shape. The first store of this type was constructed in Wooster, O., in 1962. Its immediate success soon led to the opening of other Buckeyes in Lancaster, Fostoria, Mt. Vernon, Fremont, Zanesville and Athens.

By the end of the year the total will be 10, with plans already in progress for a minimum of 15 more within the near future.

"We now have more to offer Columbus than ever before," said Buckeye Mart President Wunderlich. "We have no tricks or gimmicks, just everyday hard-to-beat prices. Our secret is efficient operation and a fast turnover of merchandise. Service to our customers is of prime importance. Everything is first quality and satisfaction is guaranteed."

He said, "Our large buying staff is constantly searching the markets for new items that will insure our customers higher quality at greater savings."

FIRST SHOVELFUL OF EARTH for the new Buckeye Mart being constructed at Berwick Plaza is tossed out by County Commissioner Henry M. Koontz. From ... William A. Trayte, executive secretary, county commissioners; Charles E. Angles, general superintendent, Don M. Casto Organization; William M. Hicks, county commissioner; Frank S. Benson, vice-president, Don M. Casto Organization; Commissioner Koontz; and Carle R. Wunderlich, president of Buckeye Mart, Inc. Berwick Plaza is located at Refugee-rd and Winchester-pk. The new Buckeye Mart Department Store is scheduled for completion by Nov. 1.

Ohio Bell Opens New Network 'Travel' Route

A brand new route linking Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati was opened recently but only a handful of engineers know its whereabouts.

Moreover, when Ohioans in the three big cities and dozens of connecting communities travel the new path (as many undoubtedly will in coming years), chances are they won't even know it.

This mysterious and virtually invisible route is a new microwave communications network, capable of carrying 6,000 simultaneous long-distance telephone conversations, or the equivalent in other communications services.

Roughly paralleling new Interstate Highway 71, the microwave network has been a year in building and represents a total investment of $4 million. Ohio Bell and Cincinnati Suburban Bell Telephone Companies cooperated in the venture.

William E. MacDonald, operations vice-president for Ohio Bell, said the new network was built to relieve the load on existing long distance circuits.

Most of the construction along the new route was between Canton and Cincinnati where Bell Telephone buildings in those cities and in Zanesville, Lancaster, Columbus and Dayton were equipped with new receiving and transmitting antennas. Between these cities 10 more repeater stations were erected with towers ranging from 100 to 270 feet.

Besides long distance calls, the network eventually will be used for transmission of special broadband services such as educational and commercial television and high-speed data. All services will be moved on a line-of-sight basis via radio relay signals.

MacDonald said the new network was engineered with an eye to the future so as Ohio grows the system can be expanded to an ultimate capacity of 12,000 circuits.

Small Craft Lands At LAFB But Question Is, 'Just How?'

It's 'SOP' for the tower at base operations to help guide giant C-130 Hercules and other military craft to "happy landings" at Lockbourne AFB.

But recently a small aircraft circled the field several times and made a perfect landing on the runway—unannounced and without aid from anyone.

"It appeared to be a glider," cracked S/Sgt. Robert E. Freeman who with A2/C Floyd Claypool spotted the craft about 400 feet above the field.

As it made an expert landing Sgt. Freeman, watch supervisor, hurried to the flightline to check out the unidentified object.

Was it friendly?

The inscription borne told half the story.

A phone call to Harrold gave some more of the answers.

Harrold, who dabbles in making such planes, had lost control of the glider in the wind when flying it a mile north of the base. The model, with a wing span of 21 inches, was one of a dozen or more he has made in the past five years.

While Harrold asks himself what happened ("I never lost one before.)" another question is nagging Freeman, 3148 Penfield-rd.

"In seven years as air traffic controller, I never saw anything like it," the sergeant exclaimed.

"That glider made as perfect a landing as if some one were guiding it."

Harrold wasn't! Freeman and Claypool weren't!

Then, how or who . . .?

I WOULD like to buy a boy's bike if it is not too expensive. Carol Griffin, 1064 Parsons Ave. 444-8562.

KIDS' WANT ADS BROUGHT RESULTS!

11-YEAR-OLD wants odd jobs: babysitting, washing windows, mending, yard work, etc. Carol Voelker, 207 S. Southampton, HE. 4-2226.

EARLY THIS SUMMER, the Spectator offered kids in our circulation area a chance to advertise in the paper — free. They knew we weren't joking around, either, when we said that ads in the paper brought fast results, for five columns were filled with want ads by the kids. For instance, Carol Griffin of 1064 Parsons-av, in the photo at the left, wanted to buy a boy's bike and placed an ad in the paper. She settled, however, for a girl's bike when the offer came along, and bought it quickly, before the seller could change his mind. Too quickly, though, because another reader called her up and also offered Carol a bike — this one free. Carol took the bike anyway, and gave it to her girl friend, Sharon Fillinger of 533 Stewart. Many of the kids who advertised wanted summer work, but Dave Bohn, 1454 S. Weyant-av, didn't exactly want the lawn mowing or errand running jobs most boys his age want. So far he has had four enrollees for his guitar lessons. In the center photo he is instructing Frank Krebs, 500 Robinwood-av, center, and Bob Gyke, 324 Beechmill, right. Among Dave's credentials for teaching are three years of experience and his membership in a group called the "Bonaviilles." Dave also sold a loud speaker system he advertised in another kids' ad the same week. Carol Voelker, 14, 207 S. Southampton, photo at right, wanted more ordinary work, such as yard work, babysitting or mending, but for a special reason. She needs to raise $325 before Jan. 1 so she can go on the Horizon Club Conference Afloat. a cruise of the Caribbean next summer sponsored by the Camp Fire Girls. As a result of her Spectator ad, she has a steady job throughout the vacation every Tuesday and Friday babysitting and doing light housework for her neighbor, Mrs. Arlene Ryan, 215 S. Southampton. In the photo she's washing the breakfast dishes while her charge, eight-year-old Brian Ryan, looks on. Carol has also gotten other babysitting jobs and one for washing windows, and is eagerly looking forward to the cruise a year from now.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Mid-Summer Corn Harvest Heavy

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruit — Watermelon, peaches, plums, nectarines, grapes, cantaloupes, summer apples.

Other Foods — Milk and dairy products, frozen orange juice and lemonade.

This is mid-season for homegrown sweet corn; sweet as its name. Now is the time to let yourself go, put on plenty of fresh butter, and eat all you want. Sweet corn will never taste better and probably be no cheaper this season.

Mrs. Franks

Harvest is heavy on summer varieties such as Gold Cup, Golden Cross Bantam and Northern Belle. And, since the bulk of sweet corn in this area is grown under irrigation, the kernels are sweet and succulent and the ears well-filled regardless of the dry weather. As this is written, growers without irrigation say the ears will not fill properly unless rain comes soon.

Sweet corn can be a gastronomic delight or a sad disappointment, depending upon freshness. Corn is sweet when pulled from the stalk, but as you have probably learned, the sugar content is lost fast at summer temperatures.

Most commercial growers are doing a bang-up job of sending good corn to market. They pick in the early morning hours and cool it immediately with ice water (hydrocooling), then pack it in ice. The grocer must continue quality maintenance by keeping the corn iced or refrigerated until sold.

Buy only that quantity that can be consumed by tomorrow is a good rule for buying sweet corn. When possible, buy corn that has been cooled soon after leaving the field. Make it your last purchase and keep it refrigerated until cooking time.

When you cook sweet corn be stingy with the cooking fuel. Over-cooking toughens the kernels and destroys the sweet, delicate flavor you paid for. Three minutes at a rolling boil is all that is needed for small, tender ears; large well-filled ears a minute longer. Corn is done when the milk is set.

'Educational' Experience

Ross County Representative Myrl Shoemaker (D) cast what must be classed as a "reluctant yes" vote for the Rhodes' Administration-sponsored school foundation bill. The measure determines the extent of state support for primary and secondary public school education.

In a speech prior to passage of the bill in the House, Shoemaker candidly admitted he was voting for the best the current Republican leadership would offer — not what was actually needed.

He reminded his fellow legislators that candidate Rhodes had promised a 50-50 partnership between the state and local school districts in financing education needs. He then related the sad, unchallenged fact that the state now provides only 28 percent of total costs for public school support.

And Shoemaker told of a man who once sold him on a partnership by saying "You have the money and I have the experience."

"Pretty soon," Shoemaker concluded, "he had the money and I had the experience."

We joined the legislators in a hearty laugh at Shoemaker's "experience." Perhaps many of the legislators felt as we did — "it could be worse, it could be happening to us." Then we thought of the state's shameful lack of a mental health program; of the continuing deterioration of the juvenile correction structure, and of the many other areas where our state government is breaking faith with the people.

Our ears rang with the misleading cry "no new or increased taxes," while our mind contemplated the senseless, inevitable waste built into $1 billion of bonded indebtedness foisted on all Ohioans.

And suddenly there was nothing to laugh about. Shoemaker's message was all too clear. It IS happening to us.

Road Decision 'Off The Berm'

Columbus city council is doing a good job of assuring a much-needed highway construction project — for some other section of the state. That will be the net result if councilmen continue to stall Ohio Highway Department plans for construction of the Olentangy River-rd freeway.

Council recently passed a meaningless ordinance asking for further study of alternate routes for the controversial freeway between King-av and State Route 161. A review of alternate routes would have been automatic under an ordinance council tabled. The stalled measure was an agreement to participate with the state in the $14 million project.

There is a limit to how long the state can reserve for a reluctant Columbus the $7 million it has earmarked for the proposed highway. The state is not short of willing applicants for its highway funds.

The real problem before council is to tell state officials that they do or do not want the road built. And if councilmen do not answer that question soon, they may not have a choice.

Guest Pulpit . . . Christian Life Demands Love

Need we say that to be a Christian is to be Christlike, a follower of Christ? In reading of Christ in the Sacred Scriptures we can without a doubt summarize His life as a life of love.

Fr. Corcoran

Of all His qualities, love stands out like the full moon among the stars. He is God. He is Love itself. All of His words and actions were motivated by love. It was undoubtedly His love for us that made Him suffer and die on the cross. "Greater love than this no man has than to lay down his life for his friend."

I have heard the remark that "you must give up an awful lot to be a Catholic." Can sacrifice be anything but Christlike if it is inspired by love?

Catholics do not eat meat on Fridays. It could have been ice cream or pie. Most people care for meat. It is a sacrifice not to eat it. It is not a sacrifice meant to distinguish Catholics from non-Catholics. Christ died for us on Friday. He died for our sins. Being Christian, here is an apropos way to show our love, our appreciation to Him for His supreme act of kindness toward us.

Besides this, can anyone of us say that sacrifice is not essential in our lives in order to counterbalance the weakness of our wills?

Catholics attend mass every Sunday. It may not happen to be convenient some particular Sunday because of interest in a golf game, a vacation away from home, or a late movie Saturday night. But love is not dictated by whim of will. If love is anything, it is fidelity.

If you consider the fact that at each moment of the day and night, seven days a week, God gives us our life and breath, existence and heartbeat, food and shelter, and an almost endless number of gifts, would we begrudge God one hour of public worship a week? We are His creatures. He is our Creator. This is an obligation of justice as well as that of love.

Love is expensive. It is bold, generous and forward. The greater the love, the more it is free and imaginative, both physically and spiritually.

Religion based on fear alone or whim alone is not the religion founded by Christ. I follows then, that if we wish to walk in the footsteps of Christ, if we want to be worthy of the name Christian, love must permeate our live.

Since God's love surrounds us as a body submerged in water, our every action as a Christian must be one of love, real, practical, sacrificing, persistent, personal love.

An Editor's Outlook . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

England's Royalty Is Expensive Eccentricity

Recently I watched a television account of the Queen Mother presenting new colors to the Scottish Regiment of Toronto. The breathless TV crew bubbled with awe and delight that the lady had occasionally stopped to talk to ordinary people.

Jones

"So gracious!" exclaimed the girl commentator. "So informal!" marveled her male colleague.

Now, if you were the beneficiary of a marvelous racket that made your family the richest in the United Kingdom without requiring either effort or ability, it would seem that you could afford to be gracious and informal.

But the fact is that British royalty has had great difficulty in finding the middle ground between rake-hellism and utter stuffiness, and the present generation, with the exception of the raffish Meg and the earthy Philip, is far gone in stuffiness. The Queen Mother and the Queen may indeed be gracious, but they are about as informal as Napoleon's tomb. Every effort is made to perpetuate the idea that royalty possesses a built-in excellence that puts it in an ethereal sphere.

How is this marvel maintained? How is this ancient fraud and delusion held together in an age that sends its hardware to the planets? You look at a motion picture of British royalty deigning to notice their subjects and the faces of the people are alight with joy. Glowering industrialists and cynical professors simper and stammer like five-year-olds meeting a department store Santa Claus. Here is a phenomenon that is rooted neither in stupidity nor ignorance, for among the world's most brilliant people are those who prostrate themselves before the House of Windsor, ex-Brattenberg, ex-Saxe Coburg und Gotha. How come?

The chief reason, perhaps, why the British royal system has lived so long is that in a good hour, and over the strenuous objections of the palace, Parliament removed all power from their rulers except the power to pack the House of Lords. Thus British royalty can neither exercise tyranny nor be held responsible for errors of policy. It has been a blessing, for there is no point in sending to the guillotine he who can only strut.

The intelligent admirers of royalty and all the complicated "establishment" of dukes, marquesses, earls, viscounts, barons and baronets say that it serves three purposes. First, it provides a device for recognizing and rewarding those who have made conspicuous contributions to the state. Secondly, it maintains a tradition of noblesse oblige which uplifts the morale of the whole kingdom. Thirdly, the monarch provides a focal point for loyalty and veneration above party and faction, and serves, so to speak, as the spiritual glue, binding together the people of all races, religions and colors who comprise the Commonwealth.

But the republics seem to find public-spirited citizens who are impelled to give their best to the state without being led on by the carrot of a peerage. And too often the peerage, and even the royal family itself has fallen short of providing examples of noblesse oblige. And a monarch is not necessary to generate patriotism. Those Americans who cuss the President are no less ready to leap to the defense of the nation, and there is nothing lacking in the motherland enthusiasm of the average Russian.

Besides, the adhesive qualities of the Crown were overestimated. It didn't hold Ireland or South Africa of Pakistan or India, and the allegiance of the new African states is fragile at best.

Not only is royalty's value for welding the Commonwealth together questionable, but there can certainly be no doubt that the system of overrewarding and over-praising those of little ability and sometimes not even good intention has given rise to an unhealthy cynicism among Britain's "angry young men" and rebellious intellectuals. Malcolm Muggeridge may have spoken out of turn, but he spoke for quite a few

Look at the map of the old Empire. See how many beautiful islands, noble mountains, and splendid provinces bear the names of wenches, drunks and driveling idiots. Our own Virginia honors Elizabeth I, a lady of great parts but whose virginity, alas, was the most suspect of her virtues. Our Carolinas were named after Charles I, a king so arrogant he was beheaded, Maryland after his incompoop Queen, and Georgia after George II who couldn't have run a successful popcorn stand.

And in spite of the clouds of bishops who attended the christenings, marriages, coronations and burials of the British monarchs, these frantic ministrations have not always clarified the moral codes. Edward VII, who kept roaring away from his red-eyed Alexandra to disport himself with French "actresses," was interred during a cloudburst of holy water, but Edward VIII, who wanted to marry his Mrs. Simpson, was driven away for disgracing the throne.

Constitutional monarchy is a strange institution, and like the dragons in a Chinese parade, which no longer frighten but are still colorful, thrones may intrigue the mob for generations yet. Call it a gaudy, expensive, national eccentricity. What else?

THE OTHER SIDE

Of The Story

By Robert W. Reider

Some interesting points on the quality of Ohio's educational program were raised the other day by Steve Exrati, a veteran newspaperman who has a reporter's natural curiosity in the realm of public affairs.

A public hearing on proposed new standards is scheduled for Oct. 12 by the State Board of Education. There will be strenuous objections. Change of any kind usually is resisted, particularly in Ohio where stand-patism has been a deterrent to progress for many years.

But progress of some sort is sure to emerge after the board acts following the October hearing. It may not buy the whole package being proposed, but every little bit will help to improve the schools of our state.

It is significant to note, too, that no discussion of costs has yet begun on the program. Very likely, as Esrati says, the argument of opponents of reform will be "We cannot afford it." That seems to be a classic way to answer almost anything in Ohio.

One evening last week, we stayed up way past our bedtime to pass the time in front of the TV set — a past time we had relinquished somewhere back in the post-Jack Parr days.

Wittenmeier

The object of our attention was a movie, starring Bette Davis which was strangely intriguing for a reason we couldn't put our finger on until the next morning.

It seemed so foreign somehow from the usual fare projected these days on the motion picture and TV screen.

The story was simple enough — a spinster teacher arrived in a Welsh mining town to open a school. She discovered a "diamond in the rough" and the rest of the film dealt primarily with her dedicated polishing of the lad into a top prospect for Oxford.

Nobody was murdered, beaten or maimed in the course of the film. Discourse, rather than intercourse, took an early lead in the plot and was never headed.

Old fashioned qualities like compassion, sacrifice and dedication to a cause loomed predominantly in the script.

In short, the theme was "positive" rather than "negative."

It was almost the kind of film which might goad a viewer to go out and do something good for somebody else.

We felt better about life until the next morning when we figured out why the movie seemed so intriguing yet foreign.

We took a mental inventory, trying to remember the last time we saw a movie with such qualities on a local screen.

The result was so disasterous, I almost went back to bed.

Wants To See More Of 'Other Side'

To the Editor:

Like a gentle rain on parched earth, I appreciated your column "The Other Side of the Story" on the front page of The Spectator. Please continue your column because there has been so much loud screeching from other news media about the Rhodes program.

You never hear how Jim Rhodes turned his back on Billy Graham last year when Billy wanted to use Ohio Stadium for only one day. To my knowledge, Rhodes never attended any of the services at Jet stadium.

OSU Stadium is owned by the people of Ohio and all religious organizations should be allowed to use it. Billy Graham filled the Cotton Bowl at Dallas and many other large stadia all over the world. But Jim Rhodes and the trustees at OSU turned their backs at Billy and said "Only for football."

Hunger's High Cost

To the Editor:

Ira B. Joralemon, engineer and geologist with 50 years' international experience, sent the text of a unique study made in 1962 and 1963 to James Burnham. The figures, which must impress even the most visionary liberal, have to do with the extent of the effort necessary to bring the food supply of the poorer nations of the world up to minimum levels conducive to health.

"The 1961 per capita use of chemical fertilizers, for example, in Latin America, Africa and Asia (excluding Japan and Siberia) is about 1/20th that of North America, Western Europe, Australia and New Zealand." (James Burnham.)

"Even with their present population," Mr. Joralemon demonstrates, "if (the poorer countries) are to acquire all the raw materials and manufactured goods that must precede freedom from hunger, they must increase their income by more than a thousand billion dollars a year." (Burnham quoting Joralemon.)

May I add that the figures given by Mr. Joralemon are in accord generally with those appearing in farm journals and newspapers available to anyone willing to read.

Jet Fan Has Advice

To the Editor:
(Open letter to Harold Cooper)

I read the write-up you had in The Spectator about the poor attendance at the Jet Stadium. Now I'm no Miss Abby. I think what you should do is have a drawing for a door prize. You say you sold 100,000 tickets. Why not pick out one of the tickets for a prize once in a while. I've been in a few other towns. I've seen the Fort Worth Cats go down the drain because of poor attendance. I think if you give the people a chance to gamble on something to win themselves, this may help the attendance.

You could more than likely get these prizes from local stores in Columbus.

Say for a grand prize you could give away a car. You could have some prizes, like stoves and washing machines, etc.

Maybe this will be the answer to the Jets' attendance woes.

Premium Hike Cited

To the Editor:

While Gov. Rhodes has been gallivanting over the state and nation with his junketeers, hawking his slogan, "no new taxes," he has failed to sponsor a forceful highway program to reduce traffic accidents.

So what has happened? Traffic accidents in Ohio in 1964 have increased 11 percent, 2,095 deaths and 108,270 injured. This has caused a considerable increase in automobile insurance premiums.

Mr. Rhodes' boasting "no new taxes," is a joke so far as several million automobile owners are concerned. They are paying over $30,000,000 more per year for car insurance.

PIONEER EDUCATORS

Recently we saw one of West Virginia's standard historical markers on U.S. 40 in the Panhandle Triadelphia. It told of the nearby birth, in 1807, of James Ray who came to Ohio at age 27 and published the first of his series of textbooks on arithmetic and algebra. They were used extensively in Mid-west public schools for many years.

Ray was one among others who exerted a profound influence on American education in the 19th Century and early 20th. Styles, customs and techniques change in education as in other things. But it's good to remember, if only as history, some of the people and their accomplishments a century ago.

Mark Hopkins, Charles W. Eliot, and others were leaders in higher education. But in the elementary field, despite Ray and others, no one was better known than William Holmes McGuffey.

Born in 1800 in Washington County, Penn., McGuffey was raised near Youngstown, O. But he went back and was graduated from the Old Stone Academy at Darlington and from Washington College.

Blessed with a nearly perfect memory, as an ordained Presbyterian minister, McGuffey preached 3000 sermons without writing down a single word.

McGuffey's academic career began at Miami University, covered others and ended at the University of Virginia with his death in 1873. He was once president of Ohio University.

McGuffey compiled his famous readers from the best in the world's literature, including the Bible, to his time. More than 122 million copies were sold in more than a half-century from 1836. (Attention, 20th century publishers.)

It says here . . .

Never in the history of American education has any one man been more influential than William Holmes McGuffey.

Under Buckeye Skies

By KEN MACK McCREARY

Don't Float It, Bag it . . .

So, what's new under the summer sun of Spectator-land? Plenty.

Ever hear of a "boaterbag"? It's a new go-afloat litter bag designed specifically for Ohio's boaters.

Mack

Twenty-five thousand of the plastic boaterbags are bing distributed by the Ohio Contractors Association as a public service.

The waterproof waste containers are about the size of a shopping "poke", 19 inches deep by 15 inches wide, with a hole at the top to hold the bag in place.

The new boaterbags will be available at marinas tackle stores, and from members of the OCA. In announcing the anti-pollution project, John W. Baltes, President of the Ohio Contractors Association, stated: "Efforts to keep Ohio clean and beautiful should include our lakes and streams as well as our highways and streets."

If every one of Buckeye Country's 150-thousand-plus watercraft carried and used the litter container, it would certainly go a long way toward abating aquatic litterbugging.

Another something new for Ohio skippers will make its appearance next spring; instead of a new plastic license plate for your boat, you'll be getting a small, postage-stamp-sized sticker to signify that your craft is licensed.

It will be very similar to the outboard motor tag now in use. One thing to remember — at the end of the boating season, don't rip this year's license off your boat. The new plastic tag will have to be attached to it next year.

ALSO FOR boating fans, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has some brand new Lake Erie maps off the presses. Chart 364 is a standard navigational chart showing the Lake Erie island area, at a scale of 1:40,000. Chart 365 covers the Sandusky Harbor and surrounding area.

For the big picture, the Corps has issued a new edition of Chart No. 0; it covers all the Great Lakes, Lake St. Clair, Lake Champlain, the Hudson River and the St. Lawrence.

This overall map would be a valuable aid in planning a long range boat tour. Each chart is available for $1, by sending a check or money order to: U.S. Army Engineer District, LAKE SURVEY, 630 Federal Building, Detroit, Mich. 48226. Make the check payable to the Treasurer of the U.S.

ELSEWHERE on the "what's new" scene — scientists at OSU say the prized game fish, the rainbow trout, may help find a cure for dreaded cancer of the liver.

According to Dr. Dante G. Scarpelli, who's working on the project, a common cause of the disease in both the trout and humans may be moldy groundnuts and grain.

For this reporter, there's also something plenty new. As noted elsewhere in this edition, effective next Monday I'll be leaving Spectatorland to assume the position of Executive Secretary of the international conservation organization named "Ducks Unlimited."

DON'T EMBARK without a "Boaterbag," a litter bag for boats, say Boaterwomen April Aubora and Sharon Goodman, before untying from the dock. The girls are members of the staff of the Ohio Contractors Association, which is distributing 25,000 of the "boaterbags" in a "Keep Ohio Clean Program."

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

A Sad Swan Song . . .

Something's "going down the wrong way" this summer in the National League. It's Warren Spahn.

The ageless lefty had some handwriting put on the wall and all over the scoreboard last season before the Braves dealt the last remnant of the old '48 NL pennant winners to the lowly Mets.

THE SONG goes "the days grow short as you reach September." But for a pitcher over 40, the innings grow longer.

They were long enough last season when the guy who was always good for 20 could not finish over .500. The consensus was that Spahnie would lean heavily on the part of his Met contract which stipulated 'coach" and gracefully bow out of the active picture.

Wittenmeier

But the consensus was wrong and Spahn and Casey Stengel came eventually to a parting of the ways that found Warren's suitcase ticketed for San Francisco by mid-season.

IN HIS initial appearance with the Giants, Spahnie was no more effective.

It isn't that Spahn needs the money. Like most established baseball stars, he'll "want not" the rest of his life.

But the greater the player, the more pride there is to choke down — the harder that long, final walk to the bench.

WHO CAN forget Early Wynn's sad struggle to get number 300 a few seasons back? Sure you were pullin' for the guy but it was uncomfortable — like sweating through your six-year-old's initial stage appearance at P.S. 27.

Spahn has all the reachable records in baseball he can ever get. He can pitch till his arm falls off and never come close to Cy Young or Walter Johnson.

It took Yogi Berra just a few days in spring training this year to find he just couldn't hack it any longer. Greats like DiMaggio and Musial bowed out while fans could still taste the flavor of stardom.

SPORTS FANS gobble up courage but don't like to swallow the mediocrity that eventually must eat away at the super-star that hangs on.

Maybe Enos Slaughter said it best when he hung 'em up and sadly pronounced, "When your legs go, you go." With pitchers it's a scarcity of goose eggs on the scoreboard that speeds up retirement.

No one could be happier than us if Spahnie regained his old touch but in athletics —1965 style — miracles like that are generally limited to the young.

BASEBALL FANS, like everyone else, enjoy happy endings. We hope Warren Spahn will write one to his active sports obit — before it's too late.

There are people whose watch stops at a certain hour and who remain permanently at that age.—Charles Sainte-Beuve.

Linden Grid Little League Schedules Headpin Event

The Linden Meadow Gold Little League football organization will sponsor a Headpin Tourney at Amos Lanes the next two weekends, July 31-Aug. 1 and Aug. 7-8, in order to provide funds to add a third team to the organization —the 125-lb. Ohio Bearcat League-affiliated Longhorns.

In order to uniform the players (10-14 years old), the Linden Booster Club will conduct the weekend tourney with kegling times set for 1 p.m. till midnight on Saturdays and 1 p.m. till 9 p.m. on Sundays.

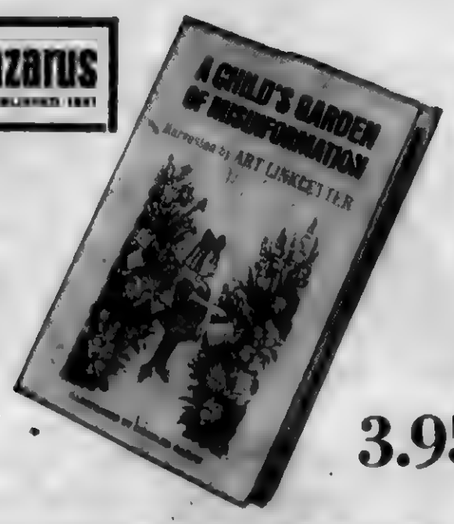
Daily prizes for men's and women's highs will be $25 and $12.50 respectively. Trophies will be awarded to first and second places in the Junior and Bantam boys' and girls' divisions.

Cost for the headpin tourney will be $1 per line of bowling.

Besides the Longhorns, the Linden LL program also contains two entries in the Ohio Boys Football Foundation (90-lb. Steers and 110-lb. Bulls), providing football for some 100 boys.

Lancers Eye El Rancho's Win Streak

Columbus El Rancho, undefeated in home polo action, will try to maintain its win string against the Cleveland Lancers Sunday.



El Rancho upset the Lancers in Cleveland earlier this season by a score of 9-6.

The Lancers are expected to bring a string of 15 polo ponies into Sunday's action. Many are considered to be the best ponies in Ohio.

Game time is 3 p.m. El Rancho is located on Route 161 just west of the Freeway. Polo proceeds benefit the American Cancer Society.

TAKE IT EASY, OLD DAD

CLEO THE LIONESS, of Columbus Municipal Zoo, presented her mate Trix (the benevolent-looking beast pictured) with a cub last Wednesday and Dad is delighted. In fact, he's so affectionate that he makes everyone but Cleo nervous. Just how can you be sure what happens next when a creature the size of Trix decides (which he does frequently) it's time to bathe the baby? And when he begins to tumble the infant with a massive paw, will he keep in mind that cubs, though tough, do break? The sex of the wee one, (shown at the left) remains a family secret, as it is considered impolite as well as rash to intrude at this point.

What's Wrong With An Occasional White Lie?

By ADELINE DALEY

One sure-fire method of convincing your husband that your home needs refurbishing from top to bottom is to announce casually:

"Dear, I just got a letter from my Rich Sister, Joanne, informing me that she and her Wealthy Husband and Debutante Children are flying out this summer for a three-week visit. I know we can't hope to compete with the lovely home they have, but I was wondering whether we could afford new kitchen curtains from Woolworth's and maybe I could fix up a couple of orange crates for dressing tables . . ."

And as the next panel in the comic strip would denote — the husband hits the roof shouting, "WHAT! We can't let your relatives see the house the way it is now!" (The same domicile that two days before he had described so lovingly as "But it's home isn't it?")

As a result, for the past week we have had a parade of renovators arriving daily to show us samples of rugs, drapes, upholstery fabrics and paints, to name but a few. It is no wonder that everybody is saying we're trying to keep up with the Joneses, The Anthony Armstrong - Joneses, that it. I think the neighbors believe that we hope to entertain them.

Before the letter arrived from my sister (you remember her — Princess Joanne), our place didn't look TOO bad. Oh, the linoleum in the kitchen had buckled somewhat, but now the entire floor looks as wavy as if it had just received a Toni home permanent. Overnight, every minor flaw seems to be accentuated.

For instance, we had been getting by using scatter rugs to cover the holes in the living room carpeting — and scatter rugs on top of the scatter rugs with worn spots. However, I was afraid that at that rate anybody over five feet would eventually bump their heads on the ceiling.

We also felt it was asking too much of the kids to assign them seating positions on the furniture that needs recovering. Nor could we expect anybody to risk getting whiplash from sitting on the dining room chairs which keep springing apart.

Our teen-agers are complaining, too, that their furniture is beneath them. I have to agree that as cute as the Three Little Bears decals were on their chests of drawers, they have outgrown them.

As the costs keep going up-up-up, my husband has figured that it would be cheaper for us to visit Joanne. But, oh no, now it's my turn. We visited her two years ago. Why do you think my sister (who's really a commoner) was able to have her place look so gorgeous?

Girl Scout Roundup Is Beehive Of Activity

EDITOR'S NOTE: Cheryl Porter, 2904 Crescent-dr, represented The Spectator as its official correspondent at the 1965 Senior Girl Scout Roundup, which was held through July 28 in Farragut, Idaho. This is the sixth of a series of articles on the roundup.

By CHERYL PORTER

The friends we have made, the country we have seen and the fun we had together these last two weeks will never be forgotten.

Cheryl

The first all-camp arena event was probably the most impressive performance any of us attending the 1965 Senior Girl Scout Roundup had ever seen. Over 9,000 girls, 2,000 adults, and 1,500 guests piled into the only really non-rocky and grassy green area in the camp.

Songs were sung by this 9,000 girl "choir." The program began with the advancing of 50 American flags, then 44 flags of the member countries of the World Association of Girl Scouts and Girl Guides represented at Roundup, followed by the World Association and Roundup flag.

A red cardboard train manned by campers moved across the stage with girls calling out the names of the states. Shouts and cheers went up from the girls as their home state was named. Mrs. Frances Humphrey Howard, the sister of Vice-President Hubert Humphrey, brought a message from her brother. The National President of the Girl Scouts Mrs. Holton R. Price and Governor Robert E. Smylie of Idaho were also present.

The show ended when a gigantic American flag 20 feet by 30 feet was raised surrounded by colorful sparklers.

A tree-planting was held during the past week and each patrol planted onePonderosa pine. Along with this pine, something of meaning to the patrol was planted with it. My patrol planted a red plume signifying th estate bird of Ohio, the cardinal. Over 1,200 small trees were planted. These trees will, in years to come, grow as a reminder of the great times we have had at Roundup.

Thousands from all over the world have come to visit and see the Girl Scouts in action. Among these friends were Mr. and Mrs. Osmer Ulrich and their family, 373 Charleston-av, Columbus, who came to see their daughter Sue.

Visitors and Rounduppers have been entertained by the friendly local residents of the rural community at the Roundup area named Rendezvous. They have put on fiddling shows, dances, horse shows and exhibits typical of the Pacific Northwest.

Each day last week 56 bus loads of girls pulled out for a conservation tour of the Kaniksu National Forest. We went 150 miles into the Idaho Panhandle observing the nature of the West. The pines and mountains were everywhere and were the biggest many of us had ever seen. We saw Lake Pend Oreille, ate in the rain on the shores of Priest Lake and crossed into the state of Washington.

Of course our tents have no electricity, and we carry water in buckets from the central faucets. Our biggest problem is the cold, cold showers. Shrieks, giggles and cold chills are the result.

Dozens of activities are scheduled for us daily. Among these are hiking, demonstrations, tours through the commissary and hospital, song fests and camp fires. Never is there a dull moment at Roundup.

One of the more popular activities is the forum. These are discussion groups that revolve around girls' interest and topics related to the Girl Scout Promise and Laws. Noted speakers have come from all over the United States to be with the Girl Scouts here.

DUST, MUD STILL PLAGUE HAMILTON RD. RESIDENTS

IT'S BEEN A "LONG HOT SUMMER" on Hamilton-rd for residents and motorists who must cope with the chuck holes and, depending upon the weather, mud or dust accompanying street improvement work. Residents south of Livingston-av are now faced with the aggravation, but most all concede, reluctantly, that the end will justify the means. The road from Broad to Main-st has been torn up more than a year, first for sewer installation and then for street construction. Two newly-paved lanes are now open on that stretch, and work proceeds on the rest of the road.

$3.8 MILLION APPROVED

O.K. Area Sewer Jobs

Columbus City Council flashed the green light for three major sewer projects Monday night by appropriating a total of $3,800,000 and authorizing execution of three separate contracts. Two of the projects mark the beginning of three-stage construction of Alum Creek and Big Walnut Creek sanitary trunk sewers between Williams-rd and Livingston-av. The third project approved was the second of six sections of the Big Walnut sanitary outfall sewer between the Southerly Sewage Treatment Plant and Williams-rd.

Council authorized expenditure of $1,100,000 for the first phase of the Alum Creek project, beginning at Williams-rd. It calls for installation of 102-inch and 120-inch sewer lines, the latter being the biggest pipe sewer constructed in Columbus.

Bids on the project were opened Tuesday. Carl W. Schoene, superintendent of the city's division of sewers and drainage, reported that Haddad Construction Co., Columbus, submitted the apparent low bid of $996,450. Schoene said work would begin in six or seven weeks, and that completion is set for May, 1966.

Council appropriated $1,200,000 for the Big Walnut sewer project to begin just north of Williams-rd. Schoene said bids will be opened on Aug 10. The project calls for installation of a 96-inch sewer line, and completion is expected in June, 1966.

Construction contract bids for the Big Walnut Outfall project will be opened Aug. 24, Schoene said. Council authorized $1,500,000 for the project. The first section of the project extends from the Southerly Sewage Treatment Plant to Parsons-av at State Route 665. The project approved Monday will carry the 108-inch line to Lockbourne-rd.

The project carries a completion date of July, 1966.

All funds approved by council included the costs of engineering and contingencies in addition to estimated construction costs.

Barnett Center Open Soon

Racing to have the new Barnett and Livingston-rd Recreation Center ready for use by mid-September, Columbus City Council this week passed important legislation for the center.

Authorized was: An appropriation not to exceed $1,500 to hire a consulting engineer to design refinements to the exterior of the center (as well as at Cook and Barack centers.)

Purchase and installation of stage curtains — $999.

Acceptance of a warranty deed from the Columbus Board of Education for land to be part of Barnett-rd.

Purchase and installation of a cyclorama ($999); office equipment, public address system, record player, movie projector, electric kilns, piano, tumbling-wrestling mats, trampoline equipment, volleyball standards, weight-lifting equipment, floor machine and furniture, totaling $4,788; chairs, tables, table and chair trucks, lockers and benches totaling $6,384.82.

Pre-Registration, Orientation Program Urged In Whitehall

All students new to the Whitehall School System, those who have moved to another district, and high school students who wish to change their schedules are urged to check with the school they will be attending.

High school students who have moved into the city should register at Whitehall-Yearling High the week of Aug. 9, and elementary students new to Whitehall, who have moved or entering kindergarten or the first grade, should register immediately.

All school offices will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays.

Ninth grade students are urged to attend the orientation assembly at the high school Friday, Sept. 3, 9 a.m. They will be given their schedules and will attend each class for ten minutes, and will be dismissed at noon.

Students eligible for first grade must be six years old before Sept. 1, and kindergarten pupils must be five before the same date.

Whitehall Schools have an exception policy to the age limits for kindergarten and first grade. Interested parents may obtain information by contacting the office of the superintendent.

Information on the attendance area for the city's five elementaries is also available from the superintendent's office, as well as bus schedules.

Whitehall elementaries and their locations are:

Beechwood, 455 Beechwood-rd, BE. 7-3184; Broad Street, 3877 E. Broad-st, BE. 1-1311; Main Street, 3589 E. Main-st, BE. 1-1516; Etna Road, 4531 Etna-rd, BE. 1-1291 and Kae Avenue, 4738 Kae-av, 866-3371.

FACILITIES READIED

School Year Starts Sept. 8

School officials' 18th annual phrase, "record-breaking enrollment," was again pronounced this week as they tallied up 106,228 headed for classrooms Wednesday, Sept. 8, in their yearly nose-count.

One hundred and twenty-nine new classrooms, staffed with as many additional teachers, will be ready for the onslaught on opening day. Another 14 classrooms will be ready in November when Olde Orchard Elementary opens.

The increase in student population, an accurate index to the city's growth, has rocketed to its present figure over 1950's enrollment of 46,406. About 4000 more pupils will be added this fall.

And the end is not in sight in the foreseeable future—the 1966 school building program will see a junior-senior high, three junior highs and an elementary completed.

This year's teaching staff, totaling 3702, has now outgrown the facilities at Veterans Memorial Auditorium, traditionally the scene of the annual superintendent's convocation.

Dr. Harold Elbling's message to teachers and staff will be presented, instead, over WBNS-TV, Channel 10, Tuesday, Sept. 7, 10 to 10:30 p.m.

NEW SCHOOLS

New elementaries making their debut in the Columbus system this September are Cedarwood, 775 Bartfield-dr, with 14 classrooms, and Gladstone, 1965 Gladstone-av, with 10.

Construction cost of Cedarwood was $380,860.88 and Gladstone was built at a cost of $289,695.

Olde Orchard Elementary, under construction near Cherry Hill-dr and McNaught-rd, will contain 14 classrooms and is scheduled for completion in November.

Addition and remodeling work will add 105 classrooms and other special learning facilities to 17 existing schools at a cost of about $2.75 million. The schools are:

Brookhaven, four classrooms; Linmoor Junior High, four classrooms and shop facilities; George C. Beery Junior High, four classrooms, a gym and auditorium, shop and cafeteria and music facilities.

Arlington Park, seven classrooms; Berwick and Brentnell, four classrooms each; Devonshire and Forest Park, six classrooms each.

Georgian Heights and Kent, eight classrooms each; Lindbergh, four classrooms; Main, six classrooms and a multi-purpose room; Salem, six classrooms; Valley Forge, 12 classrooms; Scioto Trail, four classrooms; Southwood, three classrooms and a multi-purpose room, and South High, extensive remodeling and addition of some facilities.

1966 CONSTRUCTION

Five new schools are scheduled for completion in 1966.

Two of the junior highs are Sherwood, 1400 Sandy Lane-rd, and Wedgewood, 3771 Eakin-rd Each will house about 750 students.

Northland Junior-Senior High, north of Morse-rd and east of Karl-rd, will accommodate about 1200 pupils and is scheduled for completion in September, 1966.

Also scheduled for opening in the fall of '66 is Ridgewood Junior High, adjacent to Marburn Elementary, to house about 750, and the 10-room Hudson Elementary, located in the area south of Hudson-st and west of Lexington-av.

A new professional growth policy, designed to keep teachers in step with advances in education, will be instituted this fall. Purpose of the program is to encourage teachers to increase their competence through in-service education, and they will earn credits for activities that have professional-growth value.

"Cybernetics," the study of man's relationship to mechanical systems such as computers, will be the theme of the pre-opening teachers conference Tuesday, Sept. 2, in Mershon Auditorium.

Pre-Registration, Schedule Changes Must Be Completed

All students who did not attend a Columbus school last year, or who have moved from one district to another in the city during the summer, must register early at the school they expect to attend.

Information on the attendance area of city schools is available from the administration office, CA. 8-3821.

Respective elementary and junior high school offices will be open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., starting Aug. 16.

Pre-registration of students not already enrolled in the high school they will attend is immediately necessary, and offices are now open and principals on duty during usual school hours.

Some classes have already been closed due to heavy enrollment. A better choice of electives is assured now, and students will avoid a long waiting line on opening day.

Students who wish to check their schedules or to make changes must also do so at this time.

IMMUNIZATION

The immunization record of a new student should also be submitted to the school at the time of registration.

In compliance with Ohio's immunization law, students entering junior or senior high must have, or be in process of receiving, a successful smallpox vaccination and three injections for poliomyelitis.

Two injections for diphtheria and tetanus are required in the third through sixth grades, two injections for tetanus in the seventh through 12th, and a diphtheria and tetanus booster is required at least one year after the basic series has been completed.

IN WHITEHALL

Mayor Dons Service Director 'Hat'

No official comment on the abrupt resignation of Whitehall Service Director Joseph Shannon or the surrounding circumstances was made by city council at its Tuesday night meeting.

However, Mayor William Holzhause informed members during their caucus that he himself would assume duties of the office during the remaining five months of his term.

Whether or not the mayor would act as purchasing agent for the city, a post also filled by Shannon, was open to speculation.

Shannon submitted his resignation Monday after charges had been leveled that he had built a patio at his home at city expense. The accusations had been supported by a confidential, unpublished report of an investigation.

"I resigned voluntarily," Shannon said, "because things were so distorted that they conveyed an entirely different picture. I will not subject my family to this."

Shannon denied the accusation that he had ordered concrete to be billed to the city, and that he had knowingly used city workers on city time.

"I had intended ordering the concrete Friday, July 23, for delivery Saturday," he explained, "so the patio could be built on Saturday afternoon when the men would not be on city time.

"However, someone else ordered the concrete from the Anderson firm and it was delivered around noon Thursday, the 22nd. The city workers told me they were 'off the clock.'

"When I learned that the concrete had been mistakenly billed to the city, I immediately called Anderson's and had them bill me directly."

"And I question," Shannon said, "that the bill was actually sent to the city so soon—they (Anderson's) don't bill orders of the 22nd before the first of the month."

The confidential police investigation was conducted at the direction of Safety Director Darrell Todd, after he conferred with Paul Haytcher, city solicitor.

"We felt the mayor should have the facts of the case," Todd said in explaining the probe. "Shannon works under the mayor, was appointed by him, and it is his (the mayor's) responsibility."

The mayor said that, after examining the report, he offered Shannon the alternative of resigning or being fired. The report has not been made public.

In official action, council approved an ordinance levying $1400 in assessments against Westphal-av residents for the construction of a storm sewer, and prohibited parking on both sides of Maplewood-av from E. Broad-st 600 feet south.

A measure was also adopted to appropriate property necessary for extending Langley-av eastward.

An ordinance to prohibit the issuance of any more liquor licenses in the city, again up for its final reading, was tabled once more by Gilbert O'Shaughnessy, who said it was felt the measure in its present form would not accomplish its intention.

Council also sent to committee for study a complaint from Parklawn Manor residents that golf balls from Town and Country Golf Driving Range, 4500 E. Broad-st, were a hazard.

Residents complained that a year-old child had been struck by a ball as he played by his home.

Kotzin 'Returns' To Nail Down UGA Jr. Title

Brian Kotzin, 16-year-old ex-Bexleyite, finally won the UGA Midwest Junior golf title Sunday — but he had to move to Chicago to do it.

Kotzin, captain of the Lions' golf team as a junior last spring, toured the soggy Raymond Memorial layout, recording a nine hole total of 36 before the rains came on number 13 and halted play.

Brian's Saturday effort was a four under par 69 which, coupled with Sunday's abbreviated round, provided a winning 27 hole total of 105.

Kotzin's win qualified him for the UGA National competition in Detroit, Aug. 26-27.

The youth had tried for the crown when his family resided in Bexley but found that success came only by returning to Columbus as a visitor.

The future is purchased by the present. (Samuel Johnson)

It's 'Ruble Day' At Koslov's Dept. Store

By ROYCE BRIER

Under Lenin and Stalin, the production and distribution of consumer goods in the Soviet Union went about like this:

The goods were manufactured in factories which were state-owned and operated, and released to retail outlets which were state agents. The quantity to be produced, and to be allocated to outlets, was determined by central bureaus by line, sitting in Moscow. These allocations were made on a basis of regional populations and supply — and not on a basis of demand, seasonal or otherwise.

The primary purpose of this system was to insure that the bulk of raw materials available, or imported, could be diverted to heavy industry, of which the most vital and hungry segment was the arms industry.

As it turned out, this was a fortunate course, because 24 years after the Revolution the Russians had to stand off the Germans.

The result, however, coupled with rigid, collective agricultural controls, was the lowest standard of living in the Western world, an economy of consumer scarcity. A byproduct was that goods were universally shoddy, particularly in necessities such as clothing and household furnishings.

After the war, and despite the cold war, the rehabilitation of western Europe provided the Russians with an exemplar of what was possible in consumer goods production. Consumer demand then worked a second revolution in Russia, which has been going on apace in the past decade.

Today the Soviet authorities are starting an experiment in this revolution, nothing less than a try at supply and demand, which Karl Marx excoriated endlessly.

In a pilot project, 400 garment and footwear factories, and some thousands of retail stores will produce and sell on a basis of direct orders from store to factory.

This means that when there is a demand, or lack of it, for certain goods at regional outlets, the request for increase or decrease will not go to Moscow for a strait jacket ruling.

The result is expected to be an even flow of goods on retail shelves, more and better window displays, and even advertising. Another hope is for more solicitous clerks and less of the notorious clerical indifference of modern Russia. The plan entails a revision of trade discount and cost accounting practices by store managements.

The new system may run into difficulties. For instance, factories are geared to long-range planning taking little account of consumer need. They will be plunged into a fluctuating market taxing their ingenuity, if not their ideology.

It may require a decade to get a comparatively free consumer market working. But barring reversal it may gradually diminish consumer scarcity, and end in a better life for the Russian mass. A pure Marxist won't like it, though.

Asks Transfer

Farmers To Begin Tomato Crop Harvest

Next week Ohio will start volume harvesting of a bumper crop of 27,000 acres of processing tomatoes worth an estimated $18 million to the state's farm growers.

Despite threats of a farm labor shortage, Ohio growers planted 27,000 acres of tomatoes for processing this year, the highest on record, and about 6,700 more acres than were harvested last year.

Prices also are at a record high, up about $3.50 a ton from last year. With favorable weather this spring and early summer, yield of tomatoes is expected to hit at least 20 tons per acre, compared to about 16 tons per acre last year and 18.9 tons an acre in 1963. The harvest will continue until around Oct. 10, or the first killing frost.

Tomato pickers still will be needed during the peak of the season and every effort is being extended to recruit enough workers to harvest the crops, reports the Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation.

MRS. MICHAEL KARR, (second from left in front), president of the Columbus Chapter of Hadassah, will head the local delegation attending Hadassah's 51st annual convention at the Waldorf Astoria in New York City, Aug. 15 through 18. Also attending will be, front row, from left, Mrs. Robert Paine, Mitzvah; Mrs. Karr; Mrs. Ben Shafran, Shalom; and Mrs. Herman Seff, Jessie Sampter. Back row, from left, Mrs. Donald Cohen, Lilah; Mrs. Morris Swedlow, Szold; Mrs. Carl Mellman, Chai, and Mrs. Perry Sinton, Ziona. All are group presidents. Also attending, but not present for the picture, are Mrs. Norbert Kruger, regional area vice-president of the Central States; Mrs. Melvin Rackoff, chapter education vice-president, and Mrs. Bernard Morganstern, vice-president of Mitzvah.

Hadassah Presidents To Attend Convention

General theme of Hadassah's 51st convention, "Today's Challenge — Tomorrow's Achievement," will be keynoted at the opening banquet on Sunday, Aug. 15, in New York. Augmenting this dominant theme will be a diversified convention program. Its unusual features will be galvanized by men and women of international renown—Israel's ambassador to the United Nations, Michael Comay; Mrs. Zena Harman, chairman of the board of UNICEF; Dr. Moshe Davis, head of the Institute of Contemporary Jewish Affairs; Dr. Judah Shapiro, secretary of the National Foundation for Jewish Culture; Dr. Kalman J. Mann, director-general of HMO and Moshe Kol, world head of Youth Aliyah.

Delegates will participate in plenary sessions devoted to the UN's 20th anniversary, the Great Society, the future of Jewish youth in America and the new vistas for Hadassah's projects in Israel. A preview of "A Way to Grow" will be shown at the convention. This new film presents a kaleidoscopic view of Hadassah's half century of service interwoven with the great events and giant personalities of world history.

Among the memorable highlights of the 51st convention will be an art show featuring the work of Israel's young artists who are Youth Aliyah graduates, an introduction of the United Nations Singers and the premier of the 1965 Hadassah Fashion Show.

RED SOX CINCH FLAG IN WBBA'S MAJOR LOOP

COACH ROY BAYS and his Red Sox sluggers cinched the pennant in the Major League of the Whitehall Boys Baseball Association last week. The Sox (team batting average of .486) players include (sitting, from left): Terry Bays, Joel Bishop, Dave Brobst, Dave Heinmiller, George Thomas, Mike Darr and Lennie Wallack. Standing: Steve Bays, Kirk Gillespie, Gary Moberly, Kenny Schwam, Bobby Winegardner and coach Roy Bays. Assistant coach Jim Brobst is not pictured.

WHAT'S NEW IN THE WBBA?

The Vees are currently pacing the Babe Ruth section (8-1) of the Whitehall Boys Baseball Association but coaches Marvin Graeler and Dick Petty are wondering how to keep their club upstairs for the final six games of the season.

Changes of residence and vacations have cut deeply into the Vee roster and may make it difficult for the leaders to field nine players per game for the remainder of the season.

Graeler says of his team: "Offsetting a lack of home runs and individual stars this season has been the fact that this well-balanced team has played well as a team and has capitalized on timely hitting and good fielding."

• • •

TERRY BAYS got a big assist from older brother Steve last week as the younger Bays started his first Major League game for the Red Sox.

Terry blanked the Yankees, 8-0, on a four-hitter, fanning four and walking but two. The big assist came on Steve's three-run homer. The Sox now stand 14-0.

• • •

THE MINOR League Reds might not be on top in their circuit but they still hold the distinction of being the only loop team with a win over the Red Sox.

Top hitters for coach Ted Schenz's Reds this season have been: Jim Schenz (.648), Jim Forrest (.621), Brian Hughes (.552) and Bob Bruny (.319).

• • •

THE MAJOR League Dodgers are just about the hottest club around the WBBA these days. After getting off to a slow start, the Dodgers moved above the .500 mark last week with their fifth straight win.

Mike Gilmore picked up the mound win as the Dodgers beat the Giants, 17-11, with 13 runs coming across in the first two innings.

• • •

ELECTION of officers for the '66 WBBA session was held last week with the following results: president — Bill Darnell, 4476 San Joselin; (moved up from vice president); vice president — Roy Bays, 4209 Chandler-dr; secretary — Emery Mahaney, 5060 Winslow-dr, (re-elected); treasurer — Thurrel Thompson, 880 Westphal-av (re-elected); coaches' representative — Ted Oyler, 4106 Seigman-av (re-elected).

• • •

ANYONE WHO wonders how those Red Sox wrapped up that Major League division flag only need look at batting and pitching averages.

In the pitching lineup: Steve Bays (3-0, 38Ks, 1.00 ERA), Terry Bays (2-0, 5Ks, 1.50 ERA), Gary Moberly (4-0, 32Ks, 1.66 ERA), Dave Heinmiller (0-0, 4Ks, 3.00 ERA) and George Thomas (3-0, 18Ks, 3.25 ERA).

• • •

RUSTY BROBST, Joey Pollard, Mike Clickinger and Allan Harmon are the bigwest "beer" drinkers in Whitehall this summer (Stewart's Root Beer, that is)!

All four boys have seven homers this season in WBBA and that means seven FREE quarts of the foamy kids' stuff from Mrs. Idola Keller of Stewart's Drive Inn. (One quart of root beer for every home run hit).

The "thirstiest" group in the league must be the Babe Ruth boys who haven't been able to manage a single homer in league play this season.

Who says the batter has all the advantage?

Salt, Wilson Clubs Gain Ground In Bexley Summer Leagues

After the regulation game ended with the score knotted 13-all, Susil led off the eighth inning with a six-run rally. But Central Ohio Welding made a comeback effort that fell only one run short as it scored five times in the last of the eighth.

SUSIL was led by Wayne Hamrick's two home runs and a single, Bill Payne's four hits (including a homer) and Bill Davis who had three hits, including a four bagger.

Central Ohio Welding's 20-hit attack was led by Mike Kilbourne who had two home runs and a single. Steve Cartwright, Bill Jones and Dick Linson each had two hits and a home run.

In the battle for first place in the second round Brad Salt Realtors downed Christ Lutheran 8-2. Even playing on the Montrose diamond, which is tailored for the Lutherans' long ball attack, didn't help as the Lutherans could manage only five hits off the pitching of the Realtor's Bill Sutton.

A DOUBLE by Leo Gerhold which drove in a run, and a home run by Bill Burget accounted for all of the Lutheran scoring.

Salt, in pounding out eight runs on 10 hits, gained sole possession of first place. John Jones and Hal Ridenour had two hits apiece to lead the Salt players whose strategy seemed to get men on base rather than swinging for the long ball.

In the third game Bexley Methodist clobbered Dollar Federal Savings, 19-4. Leading the Methodist attack were Paul Morris with four hits and Jack Prather, Bill Manterre, and Roger White with three hits apiece. Manierre, Ken Kauffman, and Sig Munster each hit home runs.

DOLLAR FEDERAL didn't get the hits from its power hitters and ended up with only one extra base shot. Bob Whetstone, with two singles, was the leading Federal hitter.

UNDER THIRTY

IN GAMES played last week first-place Wilson Auto Parts had to beat down the Red Dogs before pulling the game out of question, 11-8. The Red Dogs took an early 6-0 lead largely on the hitting of Cal Hamrick and John Schmidt.

Finally Wilsons, who could manage only four hits off the pitching of Jeff McClelland, started to score some runs and took the lead for good in the bottom of the fourth.

Leading hitters in the game were Don Wilson of Wilsons with a home run. For the Red Dogs, Chris Taitouris (three-for-three) and Chip Green (two-for-two), including a homer, set the pace.

AT MARYLAND, Williamson Furniture clobbered "Them" 14-6. Six Williamson players had two hits apiece, and Jerry Topy hit a home run. Tim Greiner led "Them" with a home run and a double.

Superior Die and Tool defeated the Pussycats 7-3 in the night's third game. Behind the hitting of pitcher Bob Medors and rightfielder Sandy Simpson (three hits apiece), Superior built up an early lead and kept it the rest of the game.

Larry Metz, with a home run, double, and single, provided the power for the Pussycats.

MOTOR COLUMBUS SPEEDWAY

Frye, Sark, Ambruster Share Spotlight At Junior Olympics

Some 325 boys and girls, ranging in age from six to 18 years, participated in Whitehall's Junior Olympics last week.

Beechwood piled up 529 points to run away with the team (playground) title, Etna Road finished second (157) with Kae Avenue (102), Norton Field (76), East Main (25) following in order.

Teresa Frye, Butch Sark and Ray Armbruster shared top point honors—each gaining firsts in three events.

Teresa, competing in the girls 12 and 13 division, took gold medals in the 50-yard dash (6.9), 75-yard dash (10.1) and standing board jump (7'7").

Butch's "triple" (12 - 13 boys) came in the high jump, pole vault and running broad jump while Ray (14-15 boys) topped all comers in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and the hop, step and jump event.

TERESA and Ray ran for Etna Road while Butch competed for Norton Road.

Other highlights of track and field events were: Janet Steele's (12-13) softball throw for Beechwood (144½-feet), Claudia Wilson's (Zips) running broad jump of 14'1", Allan Francis' (Etna Road, 12-13 boys) wins in the 50 (6.1) and 100-yard (12.0) dashes, Dave Fowle's (Beechwood, 10-11 boys) high jump (4'3") and standing broad jump (6'7") and Gary Murphy's (Etna Road, 10-11 boys) running broad jump of 13' 5 3/4".

(Individual event results are listed elsewhere in this edition).

Twyford Blasts City Tax Dodge By State Legislature

Wants Legislation Enacted To Proctect Every Ohioan

By FRANK BYAN

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford leveled a blast Wednesday at state legislators who voted to exempt themselves from payment of the Columbus city income tax.

Terming the legislative action "both unconscionable and unconstitutional," Twyford asked: "Just who do those people think they were elected to represent?"

Twyford predicted that the new law would be overturned by the courts if tested, and that such an action would mark "the beginning of the end for the arbitrary Columbus method" of taxing non-residents.

"When the members of the legislature find that they cannot excuse themselves from paying the tax through special laws designed solely for themselves, then they will be forced to protect everyone," Twyford said.

"It is now possible," he continued, "that the legislature next session, will do just what Columbus officials fear — limit income taxing powers to the community of residence. If they want this type of law for themselves, can they now deny equal treatment to all Ohioans?"

The measure enacted by the legislature last week prohibits collection of income tax by any community other than the area of residence. It applies only to members of the Ohio General Assembly, legislative employes and Lt. Gov. John Brown.

The law was rushed through both houses by lopsided margins after an Ohio Supreme Court ruling which directed Columbus officials to collect income tax from that portion of a legislator's salary earned while he is in Columbus.

A spokesman for Governor James A. Rhodes said the measure would not reach the governor's office until after the legislature re-convenes on Aug. 9. He would not predict what action Rhodes will take. The governor could veto the measure, sign it, or let it become law without his signature by holding it 10 days without action.

Twyford has battled for city income tax statute reform for the past two years. Through his efforts, a bill was introduced into the Ohio Senate last March. The measure called for a 25 percent tax rebate (to the resident community) on all taxes collected from non-residents.

The measure was assigned to a sub-committee, where, Twyford charges, "it has been buried."

"I am amazed," Twyford said, "That our state lawmakers can now see so clearly what we have been telling them for two years; that city income tax statutes are arbitrary and unfair to non-residents who work in the taxing districts.

"But I am appalled at the audacity of these same lawmakers, who seek only to protect themselves, while ignoring the people who put them in office. This is something the people will remember when they vote for state legislators in 1966."

Twyford says the Columbus-imposed city income tax is particularly oppressive to Reynoldsburg because 99 percent of that city's work force is employed in Columbus. The lack of reciprocity in the Columbus tax ordinance has the effect of pre-empting such a tax in most satellite communities, Twyford says.

Citing an Ohio Supreme Court ruling that both the city of residence and the community of employment may impose an income tax on the same income, Twyford said:

"The Supreme Court ruling makes it more imperative than ever before that legislation be enacted to protect all Ohioans, and particularly those residents of suburban communities, from having to pay a legalized double-tax."

Highway Patrol Recruiting Cadets For New Academy

Now as the present class of 38 recruits enters the third week of training at the old Academy, the Ohio State Highway Patrol is seeking qualified applicants for the next training class scheduled to begin in November in the new modern Academy under construction in Columbus.

Col. Anson B. Cook, superintendent State Highway Patrol, said applications are now being processed for the November class which will initiate the new Patrol training facilities — the most modern in the nation.

Prospective Academy cadets must be at least 21 years of age, have a high school education, and be at least 5'9" in height, 160 pounds, in good physical and mental condition, and have good moral character.

Cadets receive a salary of $330 per month while attending the academy with quarters, meals, uniforms and training equipment furnished without charge.

Graduate patrolmen receive a salary of $5520 per year with all uniform equipment furnished. Annual pay raises increase a patrolman's salary to $6600 per year.

Full information and applications are available upon request in person at any patrol post.

The 14-week training period of the present class is scheduled for completion Oct. 22.

Eastmoor Youth Dies In Accident

Funeral service for Joseph Grodner, 16, of 351 Napoleonav, was held Aug. 2 in Snider Memorial Chapel, followed by interment in the New Beth Jacob Cemetery.

Grodner was killed instantly Saturday night when he was struck by an automobile after he fell off his motorcycle which had struck a parked car. The driver of the car left the scene of the accident, perhaps unaware of the accident.

The youth was a member of the track team at Eastmoor High School, where he would have been a senior this fall.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Grodner, three brothers, sister and two grandparents.

Permit Transfer Asked

The application to transfer the D-2 and 3 permits held by Russell B. Temple, 62-64 Granville-rd to Betty J. Eads, doing business as Daves Bar at the same address, is being procesed by the Ohio Department of Liquor Control

A. K. LEAGUE

Victorious first-round A.K. champ B.V.D. (5-0) saw its second-round unspotted mark go down the drain last week at the hands of a happy group of Ontario players, 14-8.

Jules Vogel, Larry Lawrence and Dave Sinai collected three hits for Ontario.

B.V.D. tried to keep its perfect mark intact by collecting 18 hits during the game. Howard Byer, Ray Hoch and Stan Freedberg topped B.V.D. hitting.

Leon Mark, Marv Uretsky, Jack Weiss, Julius Margulis, Bob Grad, Irv Flox and Marv Glassman each collected three hits while Grad and Flox were also credited with homers. Marv Glassman, along with his five hits, also collected a broken wrist when sliding into third.

ELSEWHERE, Friedman, Cummins and Stern dumped Martin's 29-9.

For FCS, Mel Kent, Harv Roth, Sandy Stern, Jerry Burman and Jules Garel and Burman collected homers.

Martin's only star was Aaron Dachner who collected three hits.

CASSINGHAM TO HOST FIELD DAY IN BEXLEY

A day of track and field events, sponsored by the Bexley Recreation Department, is slated at Cassingham playground Monday, Aug. 9, 9 a.m.

All Bexley boys 15 years of age and under are eligible to compete for their playground. Montrose, Cassingham and Maryland playgrounds will enter teams.

The 14 events include base running, softball distance throws, baseball accuracy pitching, chinning, running broad jump, sprints, the hop, skip and jump and team relays.

Each contestant may not enter more than three events, in addition to competing in the four-man team representing the playgrounds in the relays.

The meet will be both a teeam and an individual event since contestants will receive recognition for five places in each event, and these placing will also contribute towards their team's score.

Each playground may enter as many in the meet as are able to compete.

Midget League...

In an exciting game played at Montrose playground Tuesday morning, the Montrose team edged first round winner Maryland by a score of 6 to 5.

Going into the last inning, Montrose trailed 5 to 4. Then, with two men on base, Montrose shortstop Tom Arnold hit a triple over the leftfielder's head to drive in the winning runs.

Leading hitters for Montrose were Doug Klie, Tom Lambert, Cliff Davis and Tom Andrian with two hits each. Catcher Wes Thomas led the Maryland attack with three for three at the plate.

Tom Hall of the Montrose team pitched the first no-hitter in many years in the Bexley Midget League as he led his team to a 14 to 0 win over Cassingham team Thursday morning. Hall's fastball pitching accounted for 14 struck out and only four walks in an outstanding performance.

Hall received solid backing from his team as third baseman Shawn Griffin hit a grand slam home run, and second baseman Jan Arnold and catcher Tom Lambert had two hits each.

Electric Rate Reduction Vote Set In Columbus

The electric rate reduction negotiated between the City of Columbus and the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co., will set the pattern for residential and small commercial rates throughout Franklin County.

Columbus Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner announced Monday that the new proposed rate will reduce the average residential bill by about 32 cents per month. Total annual savings for all users was said by Sensenbrenner to total $1,360,000 annually.

Electric Company representatives are offering the same rate reduction in all areas of Franklin County. Contracts are to be made with councils of all incorporated areas over the next 30 days to gain legislative approval.

In Columbus, city council approved placing the proposed rate reduction on the November ballot for a final decision by Columbus voters. A ballot approval of the rates is called for in the Columbus City Charter. Voter approval of the new rate is not required in Franklin County outside of Columbus.

While the same residential and small commercial rate reductions will be offered in the unincorporated areas of Franklin County, the Electric Company must file its rate schedule with the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio for approval.

If Columbus voters approve the rate reduction in November, first bills rendered after Nov. 10 will be reduced to reflect the Aug. 31 effective date of the reductions.

Twyford Blasts City Tax Dodge By State Legislature

Wants Legislation Enacted To Proctect Every Ohioan

By FRANK RYAN

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford leveled a blast Wednesday at state legislators who voted to exempt themselves from payment of the Columbus city income tax.

Terming the legislative action "both unconscionable and unconstitutional," Twyford asked: "Just who do those people think they were elected to represent?"

Twyford predicted that the new law would be overturned by the courts if tested, and that such an action would mark "the beginning of the end for the arbitrary Columbus method" of taxing non-residents.

"When the members of the legislature find that they cannot excuse themselves from paying the tax through special laws designed solely for themselves, then they will be forced to protect everyone," Twyford said.

"It is now possible," he continued, "that the legislature next session, will do just what Columbus officials fear — limit income taxing powers to the community of residence. If they want this type of law for themselves, can they now deny equal treatment to all Ohioans?"

The measure enacted by the legislature last week prohibits collection of income tax by any community other than the area of residence. It applies only to members of the Ohio General Assembly, legislative employes and Lt. Gov. John Brown.

The law was rushed through both houses by lopsided margins after an Ohio Supreme Court ruling which directed Columbus officials to collect income tax from that portion of a legislator's salary earned while he is in Columbus.

A spokesman for Governor James A. Rhodes said the measure would not reach the governor's office until after the legislature re-convenes on Aug. 9. He would not predict what action Rhodes will take. The governor could veto the measure, sign it, or let it become law without his signature by holding it 10 days without action.

Twyford has battled for city income tax statute reform for the past two years. Through his efforts, a bill was introduced into the Ohio Senate last March. The measure called for a 25 percent tax rebate (to the resident community) on all taxes collected from non-residents.

The measure was assigned to a sub-committee, where, Twyford charges, "it has been buried."

"I am amazed," Twyford said, "That our state lawmakers can now see so clearly what we have been telling them for two years; that city income tax statutes are arbitrary and unfair to non-residents who work in the taxing districts.

"But I am appalled at the audacity of these same lawmakers, who seek only to protect themselves, while ignoring the people who put them in office. This is something the people will remember when they vote for state legislators in 1966."

Twyford says the Columbus-imposed city income tax is particularly oppressive to Reynoldsburg because 99 percent of that city's work force is employed in Columbus. The lack of reciprocity in the Columbus tax ordinance has the effect of pre-empting such a tax in most satellite communities, Twyford says.

Citing an Ohio Supreme Court ruling that both the city of residence and the community of employment may impose an income tax on the same income, Twyford said:

"The Supreme Court ruling makes it more imperative than ever before that legislation be enacted to protect all Ohioans, and particularly those residents of suburban communities, from having to pay a legalized double-tax."

Now as the present class of 38 recruits enters the third week of training at the old Academy, the Ohio State Highway Patrol is seeking qualified applicants for the next training class scheduled to begin in November in the new modern Academy under construction in Columbus.

Col. Anson B. Cook, superintendent State Highway Patrol, said applications are now being processed for the November class which will initiate the new Patrol training facilities — the most modern in the nation.

Prospective Academy cadets must be at least 21 years of age, have a high school education, and be at least 5'9" in height, 160 pounds, in good physical and mental condition, and have good moral character.

Graduate patrolmen receive a salary of $5520 per year with all uniform equipment furnished. Annual pay raises increase a patrolman's salary to $6600 per year.

Full information and applications are available upon request in person at any patrol post.

The 14-week training period of the present class is scheduled for completion Oct. 22.

Electric Rate Reduction Vote Set In Columbus

The electric rate reduction negotiated between the City of Columbus and the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co., will set the pattern for residential and small commercial rates throughout Franklin County.

Columbus Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner announced Monday that the new proposed rate will reduce the average residential bill by about 32 cents per month. Total annual savings for all users was said by Sensenbrenner to total $1,360,000 annually.

Electric Company representatives are offering the same rate reduction in all areas of Franklin County. Contracts are to be made with councils of all incorporated areas over the next 30 days to gain legislative approval.

In Columbus, city council approved placing the proposed rate reduction on the November ballot for a final decision by Columbus voters. A ballot approval of the rates is called for in the Columbus City Charter. Voter approval of the new rate is not required in Franklin County outside of Columbus.

While the same residential and small commercial rate reductions will be offered in the unincorporated areas of Franklin County, the Electric Company must file its rate schedule with the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio for approval.

If Columbus voters approve the rate reduction in November, first bills rendered after Nov. 10 will be reduced to reflect the Aug. 31 effective date of the reductions.

INSIDE THIS MODERN REHABILITATION CENTER is located the pre-vocational evaluation program. Resident students attend "related work" classroom studies for 22 weeks during this phase of their training. The other half of their day is spent "sampling" work areas on the grounds. Enrollment averages about 40 boys and girls, 17 to 27 years of age. Graduate teachers guide them in studies and training directly related to the job they will assume if they graduate to the vocational phase of the program and, later, to work outside the school. Here, too, they receive a battery of manipulative tests and are evaluated on their ability to perform in society through a psychologically planned series of shows, dances and other social activities. Some of the resident students carry an added burden in their uphill fight — the added disadvantage of physical handicaps. If there is an outstanding characteristic common to the group, it is a spiritual manifestation within them which reaches out and motivates others to pause, and help them in their struggle against an inscrutable fate.

HUMOR AND PATIENCE, knowledge and hard work are combined with sunshine and fresh air on the curriculum at the greenhouse. Here, as in other vocational areas, two "job sampling" classes spend a half-day for about five weeks under the able guidance of Lloyd Wilcox, vocational instructor. Wilcox, who worked for one local florist 36 years, contributes 56 years of green thumb experience to the program. He says, "The most important thing is to teach boys how to follow instructions."

DURING THE "JOB SAMPLING" phase of pre-vocational evaluation, some students may express interest and the ability to perform the duties of a hospital orderly. Here, in the school's Emerick Hospital unit, they receive "on-the-job" instruction and are evaluated by Albert Roberts, hospital orderly training instructor. Bed making, bed bathing and the feeding of helpless patients is part of the important "sampling" performed by both student and instructor to determine the potential orderly's proficiency and adaptability to this type of work.

GIRLS, TOO, have an opportunity to "job sample" and receive pre-vocational evaluation on their ability to perform the duties of a nurse's aide. Attendant Margaret Lee enjoys nothing more than seeing a pre-voc student "make the grade" in hospital training. Patients in the Emerick Hospital unit are not medical cases. They are permanent residents who, because of additional handicaps, must live there.

CRIPPLED BY A FALL, this youth learned in the shoe shop to build his own orthopedic shoe. Now he walks without a limp. If he continues his present progress, and someone offers him a chance, he may one day walk through the door into our community — a skilled workman who has earned his right to be here.

A 'DIFFERENT' SCHOOL

Offers Life's Toughest Exams

Sunday, May 2, will be "Open House" for the public at the Columbus State School at 1601 W. Broad-st.

Many years ago, as everyone knows, this school like others of its kind, was discussed only in whispers. A resident there, a "shadow of shame" on some community or family, was poked into the school, then into the back of the mind — and forgotten.

Advancements in social sciences, the compassion of a few dedicated public servants, greater public understanding and a few tax dollars have changed the picture.

Today, the doors at the school still open inward for the mentally retarded who are committed there by families and by community officialdom. But today, unlike a few years ago, the same doors open outward—toward hope and a new existence for many of the school's residents.

The change has occurred gradually but it has occurred.

It came about when a few tax dollars were put to good use, along with a thought best expressed nearly a hundred years ago by England's essayist and critic, Walter Pater:

"We need," said Pater, "some imaginative stimulus, some not impossible ideal such as may shape vague hope, and transform it into effective desire . . .?

The imaginative stimulus, so to speak, at the Columbus State School was the knowledge that handicapped human beings can be trained and "refitted" so that they might live as useful members of the human race. To "shape vague hope and transform it into effective desire," they devised a very humane and scientifically-integrated academic and vocational training program.

The program is operated under the direction of Dr. Roger M. Gove, superintendent of the Columbus State School. Director of education and training is Roy E. Ferguson. Quentin Widener is supervisor of vocational training.

Officials at the school admit that the program is not a panacea for all residents. But approximately 200 at any one time are being fitted for a job, a probationary re-entry into society, and perhaps eventual release from official custody.

Within the program are a number of occupational areas such as a print shop, a shoe repair shop, upholstering and tailoring, landscaping and horticulture, janitorial, laundry, hospital and food service training.

Assignment to these jobs under the vocational training program is often a long, heartbreaking affair. Some fail in the academic program. But some make it. Those who do are assigned to pre-vocation training.

Here, during the course of 22 weeks they sample various job areas on the grounds. They are given related classroom work. During this time they are under the guidance and observation of experienced teachers.

They are subjects of numerous reports on such things as behavior, job skill, social aptitudes and attitudes. Periodically they are taken to the Health Department, and to the Employment Service for practice in interviews and job applications.

They participate in "mixers," parties on the grounds arranged by the school, so they may mix socially, and become acclimated to this phase of life.

Later they listen to doctors, psychologists, chaplains. The talks are generally about "knowing yourself," and "seeing yourself as others see you."

They hear job-oriented talks by vocational instructors in the various work areas. By the school's security personnel, by the police, by businessmen sometimes willing to give a kid a break if he makes it through training.

Some make it through the pre-vocational period. These are referred to the vocational training section. Their temperament, tolerance levels, skills and mentality are summed up in recommendations for training in particular areas.

Here, under the guidance of full-time vocational instructors they are prepared to perform semi-skilled or unskilled work satisfactorily within a community.

Eventually, if the program has succeeded, they are referred to Community Services. Their case is assigned to a social worker. The case worker attempts to place the "graduate" on a full- or part-time job. Many are employed today in our community. Some still return to the school at night until the case worker can arrange for a place to live.

Some find this with "colony parents." These are interested people who arrange living situations for several of the school's graduates.

Outside the school, the case worker continues supportive help, counseling the youth on various aspects of his new existence, on budgeting his income, the merits of a bank account, how to select clothing, and so on.

Eventually, if adjustment is satisfactory, release from custody is granted by the state.

It should even bring a little happiness to the taxpayer to see this wonderful thing that a few of his tax dollars are buying — dignity, and a chance to live like other human beings.

AS THE TRAINING PROGRAM progresses, students learn to work at different tasks, developing hand skills, familiarity with machines and other job relationship factors. The program is not slanted toward specialization but rather rounds out training so that the graduate is equipped to find employment in several job categories. In the laundry, vocational instructor Mary Foreman teaches boys and girls alike the job essentials of this large industry where many may find enjoyment and a new era in their lives.

A POPULAR VOCATIONAL TRAINING AREA is the shoe shop. Until his retirement, Floyd E. Unger operated his own shop, Unger's Wright-Way, for many years at 2323 W. Broad-st. Here, he took three of the school's residents into his own shop and made competent shoe cobblers out of them. Later, he became so interested in the plight of others that he came out of retirement to become a full-time vocational instructor at the Columbus State School. His dedication is attested to by about 40 young shoe repairmen who now hold jobs and lead normal, self-supporting lives in their communities.

Guerilla Training No Picnic

There's an old wheeze to the effect that you can join the Air Force and be a jump ahead of the infantry. At least, you'll ride to work.

But ask Richard Coombs of Pittsburgh or Robert Hawkins of Lincolnton, N. Car., or Merle Hurst of Longpoint, Ill., or Pedro Chavez of Taos, N.M.

It "ain't necessarily" so.

They are among the young air policemen at Lockbourne AFB who learned the hard way last week that, although six miles under a hot sun with a full pack is no Bataan March, neither is it any cakewalk.

And even before they arrived at the camp site deep in the woods they got the message that their sergeant didn't have a week-long picnic planned for them.

That message was delivered when they were ambushed by "enemy troops."

It was underlined as they dug foxholes and latrine trenches, held their noses as they drank the chlorinated water and reached the conclusion that Sherman knew what he was talking about when he said "War is hell."

They also learned in a hurry that war isn't fought on any eight-hour shift.

With darkness came the night which was punctuated by banshee-like cries and stepped-up efforts to infiltrate the camp.

It was their first dose of guerilla warfare.

And before the week was over, they were taking it like men, and willingly. They knew the next dose might not be make-believe.

Few of the airmen are old enough to recall the World War II song, with the line, "Goodbye, Mama, I'm off to Yokohama." If they were, a parody would certainly occur to them — "So long, Mom, I'm off to Viet Nam."

The increased activity in Viet Nam is of more than academic interest to these men.

The officers responsible for their having a good chance to get back alive know the jungles of the Far East provide instant on-the-job training. But they are determined the men won't be "babes in the woods" when the chips are down and the ammunition is for real.

HAND-TO-HAND combat is not the most pleasant way to fight, nor to die. But Airmen Charles R. Flukey and Robert Harney, who is being thrown to the ground, know that their lives may depend some day on their trigger-like reaction while still on their feet. The shower accommodations being enjoyed by A2/C Kenneth R. Morris in the picture below has one water temperature (cold) and will never make it as a plug for gracious living a la Better Homes and Gardens. But he's proud of it—after all he helped improvise it—using Air Force ingenu'' in place of copper plumbing.

WITH BAYONETS READY, a patrol waded down the creek, aware that a keen eye for the dangers lurking in the woods was a better means of defense than all the modern weapons at their command. As long as the element of surprise is absent, a Viet Cong ambush usually signals a fight, not an American casualty. To avoid the surprise attacks that can mean death, the men have booby-trapped the camp area so that uninvited guests unwittingly announce their approach as they trip ingenious explosive devices. Even a harmless fuse can be nerve-shattering in the opinion of the Spectator reporter who stumbled over a wire which pulled a make-shift firing pin. From the left are pictured A1/C Robert Hawkins, a transplanted Tarheel who returned to his wife and daughter living at 879 Greenfield-dr when the week was over; A2/C Merle L. Hurst, A2/C John F. Odom and A2/C Charles R. Flukey. Although they all are serving a second hitch, none see the Air Force as a life-long career.

NOT ALL THE work in guerilla warfare training is out in the field. There are still papers to be shuffled back on base and Sgt. Emery B. Aliff, Jr., the noncom in charge of ground training of the men, is shown taking a break from the jungle-life to fight the avalanche of paper that accompanies big business of any kind. The career sergeant, who has racked up 15 years of service, lives at 920 Lawrence-dr.

WHEN S/SGT. Joseph L. Leach took over the guerilla training one day, the men listened. He has just completed a year's tour of duty in Viet Nam and it was obvious he knew what he was talking about. Above he demonstrates a primitive crossbow which is but one of the unusual weapons American forces find themselves up against. An expert on "booby traps," Leach warned them that today a tuning knob on a transistor radio can spell death, the frame of a harmless bicycle may pack enough explosive to destroy a hotel and a ball point pen carried by the civilian enemy can blow out your brains.

BRIDGES are few and far between in the rice paddies and forests of Viet Nam, but A2/C Edward Sanchez, who hails from San Antonio, can cross most anything. He hurled a weighted rope across the above gulch, secured his end and took off, hand over hand.

HOME COOKING IS ONLY a pleasant memory at chow time in the woods at Lockbourne. The in-flight food packets are a credit to the K-rations another generation of American fighting men learned to depend upon in the field, but they are still no gourmet's delight. Heated in the cans with water filled helmet liners used as a pot, a typical meun included beef, apricots, cookies, crackers and chicken-noodles. From the left are A2/C Johnny Odom, A2/C Richard Coombs, A2/C Edward Sanchez and A2/C Larry A. Bruce.

WHEN A2/C Larry A. Bruce decided seven years ago to make the Air Force his career, he knew there would be days like this, but as he ran the obstacle course last week he was painfully reminded of some muscles he's forgotten he had. Above he scales a 10-foot wall with lightning speed and below he rolls under barb-wire obstruction with nary a scratch. Bruce, a native Georgian, lives with his wife at 691 N. High-st in Canal Winchester.

IT'S A LONG way from the hometown of A2/C Pedro E. Chavez in New Mexico to Lockbourne and lobbing hand grenades is a far different skill than that of carpentry which is his trade. Chavez knows that in a matter of weeks he may be pulling pins in earnest, half-way around the world, yet he says, when asked what he thinks of President Johnson's decisions that may lead him to Viet Nam he answered, "I'm behind him, all the way." Chavez, who has two small children, lives at 1814 Smith-ct.

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Agent 007 At Kiev . . .

Western leaders who admittedly are still somewhat puzzled by the new Commie "soft-sell" are beginning to come around to the realization that apparently the old dog has indeed learned a few new tricks, including that most preciously-guarded American secret weapon — capitalistic cunning.

The State Department, CIA and the John Birch Society didn't have to look any further than last week's U.S. - Russian track meet (which has become a sort of preview of coming Olympic attractions) to get the message.

Wittenmeier

FOR MONTHS, the Russian sports wag told a sadder story than any ever filed by his American counterpart even during those annual pre-football season days of mourning.

After learning some of the dispatches out of Moscow, the image most frequently formed was of an old man, slightly paunchy, who couldn't even cut it in the salt mines any more.

So what happens? The old man is suddenly running like a young man, the paunches look more like biceps and the only salt is that being rubbed into wounded U.S. pride this week.

A SPORTSWRITER friend of ours in New York had occasion to interview Serge Suitski, one of the many Russian Olympic press agents, prior to the Russo-American meet.

He passed on this interview to us:

"Mr. Suitski, I understand the Russian team is not as strong this year as it has been in the past. Could you explain why?"

"I'D BE happy to. You see, the whole attitude in Moscow has changed regarding Olympic competition. The Soviet Ministry has decided that improving relationships between countries is more important than winning."

"What ever happened to the bitter rivalry between our two countries?"

"Almost non-existent now. The last factions of bitterness disappeared last summer in Tokyo when your Don Schollander gave four of our swimmers Beatle albums."

"HOW ABOUT that rigid Russian training?"

"The new regime has taken off the pressure. The premier has scheduled a big party in Kiev the night before the meet. Caviar, vodka — the whole works."

"How about your top individuals? You should be strong in several events."

"THE AMERICAN team is much too strong for us this year. We've had many injuries. Many of our top runners are getting too old to . . . they've reached a position where . . .how do you Americans say it?"

"They're 'over the hill?'"

"Correct."

"But we've been given the impression that a number of good, young athletes have been trained for many years now and . . . "

"NYET! Our Albanian and Hungarian recruiting programs have gone to pieces and many of our upcoming athletes have chosen to go into other fields—missile technology, volunteers for the Soviet Army etc. Today, every young Russian dreams of becoming a cosmonaut. It's very discouraging."

"What about the athletes themselves? Are they prepared psychologically for the competition?"

"Nyet. They've been reading about themselves in Pravda too much. The press has made them, how do you say—big-headed?"

"MR. SUITSKI, I get the impression you aren't too optimistic about the Russian chances for victory at Kiev."

"We'll be fortunate to . . . I'd be very happy if . . . how do you Americans say it?"

"You'll be lucky to show up?"

"Correct."

"I'M GETTING a bit hungry. Why don't we finish this interview over lunch. There's a nice Chinese restaurant right around the—"

"A Chinese restaurant? Oh, you Americans have such a sharp sense of humor," he said, recording the fact in a little black book he pulled out of his pocket.

Tax Dodge Law Is Power Abuse

Somewhere in each legislative session there comes a bill or series of measures which show the "personality" of the lawmakers as a body. In this session, it was substitute Senate Bill 411—the measure which exempts members of the Legislature from payment of the Columbus city income tax.

By this act, the state's legislative branch has shown that it will take decisive action only when its own narrow, self interests are to be served.

The Ohio lawmakers acted both swiftly and decisively on the income tax exemption bill. On July 28 it sailed through the Senate (27 to 3), only hours after the Ohio Supreme Court ruled that the City of Columbus must collect its tax from legislative members. The bill passed the House by an 86 to 31 vote.

Supporters of the tax exemption bill say they wanted to protect legislators (themselves) from paying a double tax. Their measure says that only the city of residence may collect an income tax from them. How nice for the members of the legislators to be so protected.

But what about the thousands of Ohioans who have been pleading with the Legislature for years for just such relief as they have voted themselves?

There was no action from the legislative halls when the Ohio Supreme court ruled several weeks ago that both the city of residence and the city of employment could tax the same income.

The truth is that legislators knew they were safe from any initiative action on the part of Columbus officials to collect from them what is assessed to all others who work in the city but reside elsewhere. But when the Supreme Court ruled that legislators must pay the Columbus tax, then the lawmakers set out to circumvent the High Court's action.

And you can bet that Columbus officials will not challenge the legislature's crass example of the use of power for self-interest. City officials openly admit they fear legislative reprisal if they attempt to apply their income tax ordinance equally.

For more than two years now, Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford has been waging a virtual one-man campaign for reform of the state's income tax statutes. Last March, he succeeded in having introduced in the Ohio Senate a bill which would have directed city income taxing districts to rebate 25 percent of the tax money collected from non-residents. The rebate would have gone to the taxpayer's resident community.

The bill sought by Twyford was at least a reasonable attempt toward examining and correcting the inequities in existing state statutes. But the legislators would not even let the bill out of committee.

But when their own wallets were threatened, they answered with one of the most unreasonable laws enacted by this or any other legislature. Lawyers who have looked at the tax exemption bill feel it is unconstitutional. A challenge of the law will probably prove them right.

But meanwhile, the legislative body continues to ignore the obvious truth that a law that is wrong for them is wrong for everyone similarly affected.

Zip Slip Is Post Office Pip

The U.S. Post Office Department's Zip Code is here to stay. And, apparently, it is doing the job of speeding up mail delivery. But if you still haven't mastered this new numbers game, don't let it shake you.

A recent letter to us from the Post Office Department informed us in paragraph one that this year's zip code directories may be obtained from the "Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402." The final paragraph told us to make our check payable to the same office, but listed the Zip Code as "20204."

It was simply a case of a "slip of the zip" and a local phone call cleared the way for a swift delivery of our request.

An Editor's Outlook . . .

by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

The quickest way to eliminate anti-social behavior is to deny that any behavior is anti-social.

Since 1958, according to FBI figures, crime in America has risen five times faster than population growth. The obvious way to reverse this trend painlessly is to decree what were once crimes and misdemeanors are now only recreations, or, at worst, eccentricities.

Jones

All you have to do to eliminate illegal speeding is to set the speed limit at 300 miles an hour. The high rate of theft and embezzlement can vanish if we simply redefine borrowing. If we decree that rape is merely enthusiastic courtship and murder a rather untidy form of population control, we can empty the prisons and the statistics will look wonderful.

If this sounds wry, it may not be as wry as it sounds. About 40 years ago sociologists decided that the old throw-the-book-at-'em theory of handling anti-social characters could be improved if we spent less effort punishing and more time trying to understand how they got that way. Counseling, psycho-therapy, easier paroles, secret courts for juveniles, etc., would help eliminate the hardened criminal self-image and lead the transgressor into reform and rehabilitation.

Statistically, at least, the results have been awful. The more we have hidden the records of juvenile delinquents the more records we have had to hide. The more paroles, the more repeaters. The more we have tried to explain crime in terms of deprivation and poverty the more criminals appear who are neither deprived nor poor.

So, with the uplift theories in bankruptcy, many of our social workers have begun to act as though misbehavior isn't so misbehaving, after all. The dignified term, "sub-culture," is being heard more often to describe child-deserters, muggers and hopheads. Narcotics addicts are no longer unreliable bums who won't keep appointments with those trying to help them. Instead, as one minister attached to the East Harlem Protestant Parish put it grandly, "They have appointments in their own culture that take precedence over appointments in the square culture."

The June 26 issue of "The New Yorker" magazine includes an interview with Dr. Marie Nyswander, a psychiatrist working with New York addicts. Doctor Nyswander is one who believes laws against taking narcotics should be repealed and doctors should be allowed to prescribe, free if necessary, all the drugs a user needs.

This interesting approach is currently being tried in Britain, although there is loud disagreement about its results. There is no doubt that the crime rate would go down, for why snatch a purse if you no longer have to pay your pusher? You can stand on a street corner laughing at the squares who rush to work to make the money to pay the taxes to buy the dope to keep you in a pleasant daze.

What is more disturbing, however, is Doctor Nyswander's assertion that junkies are fascinating people.

"I like them," she says, "because they are not stereotyped . . . The action of the drugs, combined with the fact that in our culture addicts are cut off from society, forces some of them into a compulsive mysticism. They talk about the clarity of feeling, the oneness of perception, when they are on. In India and throughout the East, they've had drug addicts for centuries. They feed them and they consider them part of the community as a whole — a counterbalance to the materialistic proclivities of their society."

Well, it's a little difficult to imagine an addict who would want to be cured if he reads that he is counterbalancing materialism. How noble — head in the clouds, eyes on the stars. If I can swipe 10 dollars Shifty will sell me two bags of horse and I can set about bringing great truths to this lousy, materialistic society that hires cops and expects you to work for money.

If society can't raise up the addict, let society admire him. It will make him feel more comfortable.

Perhaps because uplift is such a long and painful process, replete with setbacks and disappointments, it would seem that some uplifters are giving up and are now trying to get down to the level of the human flops they were dedicated to save.

A few weeks ago a strange interracial service was held in Chicago's old First Congregational Church. To the twang of a guitar the audience swayed and clapped their way through a litany that ran like this:

Leader: "O God who hangs on street corners, who tastes the sting of the needle—"

Congregation: "Help us to touch you."

Leader: "O God who is pregnant without husband—"

Congregation: "Help us to know you."

Leader: "O God who hustles 50 cents for lousy wine—"

Congregation: "Help us to be with you."

Etc.

The thundering old Jehovah who expected people to put aside their wicked ways seems to have died.

Maybe the idea is that if we all get into the gutter, no one will look down on anyone.

At Last—a Solution to the Parking Problem

"Do you want to celebrate tonight or are you trying to keep the whole thing quiet?"

With those tender words my husband bid me good morning on my 40th birthday.

I chose the latter course.

But today, after five years of the Jack Benny routine I'm tossing in the towel and my chin strap.

Mrs. Robinson

The whole act bores me.

I'm tired of putting a rinse on my hair.

I'm tired of trying to remember not to speak of World War II as THE war.

I'm tired of smiling cheerfully and docilely "sucking in" when my husband says, in his best military style (he has a long memory — he's no spring chicken either) "Chin up, shoulders back, and tummy in."

In fact I'm just plain tired.

From this day until next year when I'll move up to 46, I'm going to be 45 and take advantage of it.

When my college-age son suggests we drive 100 miles to his favorite golf course, play 18 holes and come back in time for me to cook dinner for him and his current girl I'm going to inform him he's out of his mind.

When the younger children suggest I read the parents' manual on new math so they'll have a live-in tutor, there'll be news for them. I earned that sheepskin almost 25 years ago and I'm not about to go back to school at this point.

The next time he wants a feature done that involves hiking through a few cow pastures, fording a creek and climbing a couple barb wire fences, I'm going to say (politely, of course) "You're insane."

I'm 45 and saying, "So what!"

Excuse me now.

I'm going upstairs, throw myself down on the bed and have a good cry.

Say, wait a minute.

Have you heard about those new shots that are supposed to stop middle-aged women from any further aging? — JANE ROBINSON

THE OTHER SIDE Of The Story

By Robert W. Reider

ONE of our joys in recent weeks has been to note the stepped-up volume of letters-to-the-editor.

The Spectator welcomes and encourages these "reader editorials" and within space limitations will print as many as possible on any subject of general interest so long as they are in good taste and signed.

We have nothing but contempt for the anonymous writer who so "bravely" expresses his viewpoint but lacks the courage to identify himself. Such efforts are quickly consigned to the round file.

But we do solicit sincere expressions of opinion, properly signed and identified, on any public topic.

We realize that some letter writers may wish to avoid personal reprisals and post-midnight calls from kooks who prefer harassment to honest, open debate. For that reason, the letter writer's name will not be printed if so requested.

Keep 'em coming our way!

Letters to the Editor on topics of public interest are always welcome. They should be written or typed legibly on one side of the paper only and limited to 300 words. Columbus Doesn't Need Burlesque

To The Editor:

Webster defines the word burlesque: "literary, dramatic, or other imitation which makes a travesty of that which it represents; ludicrous or broadly humorous caricature."

Whether or not they have ever witnessed a burlesque show, few people are unaware of what such a presentation consists. It follows the above definition very well — making a travesty of womanhood and of life itself. It is strictly a poor imitation — a ludicrous caricature of the extremes which can be attained anatomically by the human body.

To have such a vulgar display of "showmanship" in a neighborhood which is primarily residential surely does nothing to enhance that neighborhood. One has only to look at the type of riff-raff who make it a habit to attend these displays to see what type of "new" customers will be attracted to our local businesses. It will repel the consumers who have formerly patronized the neighborhood tradesmen. The "burlesque" block is taboo on our list now.

Even the children are deriding the type of advertising that is being presented by the promoters of this showing, stating that it is more "burly" than "queue."

In regard to the pictorial advertising at the theater marquee—

"TAKE IT OFF . . . TAKE IT OFF . . . TAKE IT OFF!"

Help Is Appreciated

To the Editor:

The Milo-Roc-Mendel Football Athletic Club extends its sincere thanks to the many members, friends and the public for the support and cooperation given this organization on the successful and well attended "Family Picnic" held Sunday, July 18, 1965.

We also wish to thank the South Side Spectator for its publicity, radio and television and the many contributors of prizes to make the affair a success.

The Milo-Roc-Mendel was founded Jan. 16, 1946, by players from Milolans, Rochester and Greenburg Clothiers, Mendel Tailors and other teams.

The aims of the organization are to maintain good fellowship among old friends and members for the purpose of having regular get-togethers and assisting each other in every way possible.

The main project of the organization is to assist the youngsters in its wide-scope sport program, with the aim to curb juvenile delinquency.

Cheers NEWSpaper

To the Editor:

Three cheers for "The Spectator" and for your promise to "seek out the truth irrespective of consequences" and to "give Greater Columbus a bona fide NEWSpaper" as Mr. Reider says in his column.

My husband and I have lived in Columbus for 28 years and in all that time we have been appalled and discouraged by the really POOR newspapers which have been available to us locally. Now, we have hopes that the picture may change.

We wish you well and are grateful for your start in giving less "slanted" news. We hope you can prosper and become, eventually, a daily newspaper.

(Mrs. E. P.) Carolyn B. Robinson

'Opinion' Is Lauded

May I compliment Jane Robinson on her very fine article in the July 22, 1965, issue of The Spectator with regard to the "War on Poverty."

Our job is difficult enough without the criticism of so many people who are not always aware of the goals and the values of this very important program.

I hope we can continue to see the kind of reporting which The Spectator is reflecting, and you may depend upon our office to give you all the support possible in any area in which we can be of assistance.

Notes News Pictures

To the Editor:

The Sunday Columbus Dispatch of July 25 seemed to take great pride in reprinting a picture of our Vice-President and a donkey along with a letter from a reader.

The caption read "Hubert and a friend." The reader's letter asked which one was Hubert?

Now since the Spectator prints both sides of the story, I wish to point out that our much publicized Governor made a recent trip to the zoo.

Questions On Death

To the Editor:

Someone said "A statesman is a dead politician."

Were it true that Adlai Stevenson was accomplishing so much and what more he could have done were he to have been permitted to live beyond his 65 years, why did God remove him when he seemed to be doing so much good?

We must assume that he was putting forth that for which he contended — some of it for the good of the country and mankind — yet when apparently in good health and fine spirits — his work was closed.

Everything works for good to them that love the Lord.

God Will Heed Call For Help

(Ed. Note: Rev. Baxter, who is organizing a new congregation to be known as Faith Presbyterian Church, will appear each day next week on the WLW-C TV program "Five Minutes To Live By," seen on channel 4 at 8:25 a.m. The new church site is at 2750 Climo-rd, and worship services are being held in the West Franklin Elementary School, 3501 Briggs-rd, at 10:30 a.m. Sundays.)

What's God doing with his time, anyway? Is he too busy to be bothered with the likes of you or your little problems?

No, he's not too busy. Time is no problem to him, for after all, he invented it. And if you'll let him, he'll be glad to give you a lift with your everyday job. Whether you're a mechanic, a minister, a student or a housewife, there are times when the job seems too big for you.

Rev. Baxter

Maybe, Mom, the kids pull things out faster than you can pick them up, and scrap like little wolverines. For the student, semester exams are on top of you, and you're so worked up you can't even think of the things you do know.

Or in the shop where you work, not only the foreman but the machines seem to be working against you.

But you know, there's nothing wrong with asking God to give you a hand at a time like that.

Right after World War II, two young veterans took a work and play vacation to Alaska. They found jobs as mechanics in a government shop and one of their first jobs was to put new tracks and rollers on a caterpillar bulldozer.

It was a big job to do in the field, and they worked at it day by day until one Saturday the foreman said, "Fellas, this machine has to be ready to go by Monday morning. You work on the rollers, I'll work on the tracks, and we'll try to have it ready this evening. But if not, we'll have to work tomorrow."

The two mechanics worked hard all morning but achieved exactly nothing. In fact, they spent the whole morning trying to get one bolt into one nut in a difficult position.

At lunch time the foreman reported the same experience — four hours trying to drive out one rusty pin. And so one mechanic turned to the other and said, "You know, I think we're working shorthanded. Let's ask the Lord to help us."

And as he gave thanks for food, he also prayed, "Lord, you are a better mechanic than we are. Please help us with this job so we won't have to work Sunday."

When lunch was over, the foreman and the two mechanics went back to their respective jobs. The difficult bolt went easily into place. The rollers were soon assembled and installed.

The foreman, who had known nothing of the prayer, came into the shop beaming. He thumped his fist into his hand and said, "It must'a been the dinner that 'done' it." The two mechanics just looked at each other and smiled.

It was a wonderful experience, seeing God in action, so to speak. But perhaps it would have been even more wonderful if they had asked God's help in the first place, instead of waiting until they were worn out.

After all, God is a friend, and a friend is someone who lends a hand when he's asked. Why don't YOU ask him to spend the day helping you?

Frosting on the Cake

BY "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

This is a love letter to the "one and only" Dr. Ethel Andrus, Ph.D., and president of National Association Retired People (NARP). This "sweetheart to thousands of old boys" (like me) is 80 years YOUNG and a "pistol" in any language.

What a joy is this dear YOUNG LADY; refreshing beyond words. For many years I have been reading about this remarkable lady and when I saw her picture and biography in a Columbus paper recently, stating that she would be the guest of honor and principal speaker at the closing luncheon of the NARP convention, I made plans to hear her if they had to carry me in on a stretcher.

For 30 minutes, Wednesday noon, July 28, I sat enthralled and spellbound at a front and center table. This wise and sweet gal is simply out of this world. She not only has a Ph.D. degree but a head full of good old fashioned common sense and a sense of values about life and the living of it that beats anything I have heard in half a century.

She knows how to talk into a mike and that is a rarity in itself. Secondly, she never uses a note or manuscript and spoke in the best possible Socratic manner and style. Her sentimental allusions to the eternal verities are almost startling in their directness, and so applicable today, in this crazy, mixed-up world.

There was a psychological wisdom in her entire discourse and she especially emphasized the everlasting importance of the inspired and inspiring individual having total self-confidence and complete dedication to what she believes to be truth.

Many of her main points told me immediately that she was a member of "the knowing" and tremendously oriented to life and the living of it. One could not avoid looking back to his own college days and almost hearing the great Dr. Johnson in person when he said, "we are constantly becoming what eventually we are going to be."

I went up to the speaker's table both before and after the luncheon and held her hand and told her she was sui generis and that if she lived a hundred years, she will never be old.

More power to you, sweetheart, you are a doll.

ALGERIAN STUDENTS TOUR SPECTATOR PLANT

THE INSIDE STORY on how to publish suburban weekly newspapers was explained to a group of seven Algerian students when they toured the Spectator newspaper plant July 29. Students in the College of Journalism at the University of Algiers, they are attending a five-week seminar at Ohio University. The seminar has included several field trips to newspaper facilities such as the Spectator. In the photo at left, news editor Jim Bruney, left, explains the layout of a page after the copy has been set in type, while Professors Gentry and Sargeant, who are leading the seminar, and four of the Algerian students look on. At right, Souleymane Diallo takes a good, close look at the 24-page semi-cylindrical press which turns out the eight editions of the Spectator each week.

TREASURY CHEST ON WHEELS

When Honest Abe Lincoln was a young man in Salem, Ill., he walked many miles to return a book that he had borrowed. Today's Franklin County, Ohio, youngsters and their parents can borrow and return a whole world of books almost literally on their own door steps.

Under Ohio's 1934 Taft law, public libraries financed by the intangible tax are required to open their doors to all county residents. The Columbus Public Library goes far beyond that by sending bookmobiles to 118 locations not close to other library facilities.

In the late 1930's the library placed and rotated books in county schools. These "stations" were serviced by teachers. This was the "seed" of the bookmobile service.

Some 30 employes now work for Miss Margaret Armour who has headed the bookmobile service since its inception with one car in 1950. Three big cars now carry about 5,000 books each — two smaller ones about 3,800 each. Drivers are John Wheeler, Jimmy Dorsey, Wilfred Williams, John M. Spangler and William Lawhead. Each doubles as an assistant librarian.

In its first full year, 1951, the one bookmobile issued 75,261 books. The five cars in 1964 hauled 558,421, about one-fourth of the library's total. Service is expanded during the 12 weeks of school vacation.

Through the courtesy of Miss Armour and Galvy Gordon, public relations director, we rode a car to Groveport. A Mrs. Williams, in her 80's, met the car, as did enough children to borrow 650 books. Some were so young they gave only their first names. All were clean, attentive and courteous.

Jimmy Dorsey was our driver. Sue Ott and Alice McMichael were the assistant librarians.

It says here . . .

A good book is a treasure unlike any other. Ideas endure.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Abundances Make Meal Planning Easy

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruit — Peaches, plums, nectarines, melons, summer apples, grapes, blueberries.

Mealtime during this month can be a breeze with August's abundance of cool crisp fruit and vegetables, especially if the man of the house becomes a backyard chef.

Mrs. Franks

Broilers will again be a good selection for the barbecue grill since August marketings are expected to run seven or eight percent above a year ago, when the supply was heavy. Also, a fairly good supply of small turkeys from the new crop is coming in at reasonable prices. These are excellent for the rotisserie or grill.

Fresh plums, grapes and frozen concentrate orange juice top USDA's plentiful list, and certainly can boast ease of preparation and appetite-tempting qualities.

Frozen orange concentrate, result of a bountiful orange crop, will be available in the greatest amount since the disastrous freeze of 1962. Look for prices to be increasingly attractive.

Keep plenty of peaches on hand. This is a good peach year and few fruits make easier or better desserts. Many varieties are available but if you want peaches for freezing, none surpass the Redhaven. In Ohio orchards, Redhaven harvest will be heaviest this year from Aug. 7 to 21.

Sweet corn eats like sugar on the cob and there will be plenty from now into early September. However, this is the month to freeze corn, and while eating it from the cob is fun, corn cut from the cob gives a better frozen product. And don't let anyone talk you into freezing corn without blanching it — blanching is a must for all frozen vegetables.

Vine-ripened tomatoes come from nearby fields until early frost; prices are lowest in August and early September. There's no reason for getting tired of beans, so great is the variety — snap, pole, cranberry, yellow wax and lima. Prices reach the low this month—the time to get extras for freezing.

Look also for attractive prices on beets, cucumbers, celery, potatoes, eggplant, yellow and Zucchini squash. Green peppers are truly beautiful this year.

Retail meat prices are not expected to change much from present levels during August, but any change will likely be downward for beef. Considering numbers of cattle on feed, weights and marketing intentions, prices likely will fluctuate around current levels for the next 60 days. A gradual decline to around last year's levels can be anticipated for fall and winter marketing.

Girls Back Home After '65 Roundup In Idaho

EDITOR'S NOTE: Cheryl Porter, 2904 Crescent-dr, represented The Spectator as its official correspondent at the 1965 Senior Girl Scout Roundup, which was held through July 28 in Farragut, Idaho. This is the seventh of a series of articles on the roundup.

By CHERYL PORTER

Our final days in Idaho were spent in striking tents and packing for the return trip home. It seemed is if we were taking twice as much home compared to what we brought. Duffel bags were crammed, each girl hoping the zipper would not pop, while a great deal had to be carried on the train.

Cheryl

Christmas parties were held in various parts of the encampment on July 25. My troop invited four other patrols to join in the merry-making. After cake and punch, we gathered around the campfire to await the arrival of Santa. She came and instructed us to hang up our stockings. In the morning there was a small gift. After molten lead was thrown into cold water, our fortunes were read. We ended the evening with a potlatch ceremony and caroling.

On the last night, many scouts slept under the skies until a storm broke loose. Girls were rushed into the huge Army assembly tents and since sleeping bags had been packed earlier, it was hard trying to sleep on that rocky Farragut soil.

Amid sad farewells and promises to write, the Columbus delegation left the friends they had made as they boarded the bus to Athol and the long trip home.

The train ride was an unforgettable experience. The excitement of each girl's story could find no end. The hospitality of the Junior and Cadette Scouts from Richmond, Ind., won't be forgotten. They provided us with cookies and punch at the railway stop.

We arrived home late Friday to be greeted by parents and friends whom we flooded with the tales of our two weeks' adventure.

COFFEE BREAK

I Can't Just Fire 'Em—They're Still My Kids

By ADELINE DALEY

That happy, momentous occasion which all proud parents dream of for each of their children has finally arrived. Our oldest daughter has a job.

However, we don't feel as if we've lost a daughter—quite yet. We feel more as though we've gained back a charge-a-plate, because now Kathy can pay for a few of her own "necessities" (such as $20 bathing suits, $7 sunglasses, more Bermuda shorts outfits and her own gallon cans of hair spray).

I have noticed, however, that Miss Moneybags has suddenly begun to count her pennies. She's even scanning the bank ads in the newspapers to see which one pays the highest interest. Moreover, she wasn't figuring on Uncle Sam taking such a large slice out of her wages. You can bet that Senator Everett Dirksen has just won himself an avid supporter against government spending.

As blissful a state as both my husband and I are enjoying — as we envision the day our kids will be supporting us (it says here), it has been marred by the complaints from other members of the family.

Our 16-year-old, Elaine, for one, is griped that with Kathy leaving the house each day to go to her "easy" office job, she is left with a larger share of tiresome household chores —for which she would like to be duly compensated.

She has negotiated an agreement with me in which she rings the door bell each morning, addresses me as "Mrs. D." and herself as "Hazel," the maid. That way, she figures she'll be paid.

This would be satisfactory except that "Hazel" spends quite a bit of her working time on the phone. "Checking in with the other 'maids'," she explains. "We're planning what we're going to do on our next day off"—which is tomorrow.

I tried to make my financial arrangements with Elaine an "under the table" operation, but there are no secrets in this household. Thus, Patrice and Brian joined ranks and have demanded wages. My labor-management problems eventually sifted down to our youngest, Jan, as well as Diane and Sharon, who have all lined up with their palms extended like hotel bellhops.

I may have to wind up paying "scale" for such "chores" as having the pillows fluffed up in the living room and stuffed animals re-arranged on the beds. And frankly, I'd rather deal with Jimmy Hoffa than any of my kids. In short, I just may be able to remain solvent until Kathy quits her job and returns to college next September.

Fritsche Offers New Homes On 'Roll-On' Plan

Ernest G. Fritsche and Co., one of the largest residential builders in Central Ohio, introduced a unique new "Roll-On Down Payment" plan today, Aug. 5, which offers potential homeowners a new equity plan under which they can purchase a new home with a relatively small down payment.

The "Roll-On" idea was derived from the uniqueness of the plan that allows the homeowner to do his own interior painting and receive a substantial payment for his labor applied to the down payment.

Originators of the "$9.95" down payment plan for the Columbus area in 1960, the Fritsche organization has made it possible for thousands of families to purchase their new home under a work equity plan.

However, with the "$9.95" plan, the purchaser was required to do exterior painting, lawn grading and seeding, in addition to purchasing his own paint, seed and mulch.

Under the new "Roll-On Down Payment" plan, homeowners do not have to buy any materials, do not have to do outside painting, yardwork or any construction work.

Painting the interior of the home and cleaning up is all that is necessary under the new plan.

The original $9.95 plan administered by the Fritsche organization now represents more than a $25-million investment in home ownership in the Columbus area. Statistics indicate that 90 percent of the Fritsche-built homes in Haviland, Holly Hill and Devonshire communities are being purchased under the work agreement plan.

Even more substantial numbers are expected to take advantage of the new "roll-on" program.

The roll-on down payment plan is available with Fritsche homes in Devonshire, located on Rt. 161 just east of the Freeway, and Haviland, which is off Zettler-rd south of E. Livingston-av.

Liquor Violations Down This Year

Minors in Ohio are feeling the direct effect of a shift in emphasis on enforcement of the state's liquor laws, a report released by Department of Liquor Control Director Donald D. Cook showed.

Although overall violations were down for the first half of the year, according to the report all but one category of violations involving minors increased markedly.

Citations issued to liquor permit holders in the first six months included 568 charges of minor violations, an increase of 51 percent over the 378 charges of last year.

The shift of emphasis to minors violations is part of the department's overall attempt to curb illicit teenage drinking in the state. Cook has said that the fight must be made on two fronts, enforcement and education, and one without the other is meaningless.

TWYFORD SAYS $135,317,064 COL LECTED ILLEGALLY

Did Columbus' Income Tax Expire In 1952??

By FRANK RYAN

The City of Columbus has been challenged to answer a new type of $64 question. It is preceded by the figure $135,317,000, and represents city income tax allegedly collected without any legal authority to impose the tax.

Issuing the challenge is Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford, who has been waging a vigorous campaign for statewide city income tax reform legislation. Twyford, an attorney, told The Spectator that research into the history of the Columbus city income tax has revealed that the tax expired on Dec. 31, 1952.

Twyford charged the 1952 Columbus City Council with imposing an illegal four-year extension of the city tax in violation of the City Charter. He cited a paragraph from Section 45 of the City Charter which says: "Ordinances approved by an electoral vote shall not be repealed, amended or supplemented except by an electoral vote."

Cites City Charter

"The original income tax ordinance," Twyford said, "was approved by a vote of the people on June 8, 1948.

By the end of 1965, Columbus will have collected $151,147,974 in city income tax since its inception in 1948. This includes $15,830,910 during the original five years of the program, and $20,818,763 for the four-year period 1953 through 1956. Reynoldsburg's Mayor Twyford maintains that all taxes beyond the first five years have been collected without legal authority to impose the tax.

It carried a termination date of Dec. 31, 1952. Under the Columbus City Charter, there was no legal way to extend or modify the ordinance except by another vote of the people.

"But council chose to ignore the City Charter, and the people of Columbus and non-residents who work in the city were deceived into payment of a tax that had expired."

Twyford also labeled as "deception" the decision by the 1956 Columbus City Council to place on the November ballot the question of limiting council's income taxing authority to one percent without a vote of the people. He said the measure was placed before the voters for the sole purpose of giving council the "implied" authority to assess the "expired" income tax, and to again circumvent the City Charter.

Separate Acts Approved

"On July 30, 1956," Twyford said, "Columbus council passed an ordinance increasing the city income tax from one-half percent to one percent, effective Jan. 1, 1957. At the same meeting, and in a separate action, council authorized the ballot question of limiting its income taxing authority to the one percent it had already ratified.

"The ballot issue was concocted by council for the sole purpose of tricking the electorate into approving a City Charter amendment to legalize the continued collection of the city income tax. By approving what was sold to them as a limit on the powers of council, the people of Columbus actually gave council an implied approval to continue and increase the tax."

Twyford maintains that Columbus voters have never been asked if they wanted to continue the income tax which, he maintains, expired on Dec. 31, 1952. He says he does not think the "implied" authority given to council by the 1956 approval of the one percent limitation would stand up under a court test because the question was not properly presented.

"The voters were never told the truth about the 1956 income tax issue. They were led to believe that they were setting a limit on taxation when they should have been voting on whether council would have authority to impose any type of income tax."

Questions Council's Motive

Twyford questioned why any council would, on its own initiative, vote to curb its power of taxation when there is no public demand for such action. He answered his own question by asserting that such action was the

Also circled in ordinance is section 19, which reserves to council the right to "amend, alter, or repeal" the ordinance. A portion of section 45 of the Columbus City Charter (above) is the basis for contention that the city's authority to collect an income tax expired in 1952.

Sec. 18. This ordinance shall continue effective insofar as the levy of taxes is concerned until December 31, 1953, and insofar as the collection of taxes levied in the aforesaid period, and actions or proceedings for collecting any tax so levied, or enforcing any provisions of this ordinance are concerned, it shall continue effective until all of said taxes levied in the aforesaid period are fully paid and any and all suits and prosecutions for the collection of said taxes or for the punishment of violations of this ordinance, shall have been fully terminated. Provided, however, that annual returns for the year ending December 31, 1952, shall be filed on or before March 15, 1953, and said tax for the year ending December 31, 1952, which is not paid and collected under the provisions of Sections 5 or 6 hereof shall be paid on said date.

Section 19. Council reserves the right to amend, alter, or repeal this ordinance at any time.

Sec. 20. That for the reasons stated in the preamble hereto, which is hereby made a part hereof, this ordinance is hereby declared to be an emergency measure and shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and approval by the mayor.

'AMERICA' THEME OF PAGEANT

"JOHNNY APPLESEED" will be produced by youngsters of Norton Field as their contribution to Whitehall's city-wide playground pageant Wednesday, Aug. 18, at 7 p.m., at Whitehall-Yearling High. Craig Burns dons the tattered jeans and saucepan hat of the hero of the play, and Patty Darnell is costumed as the bunny, one of Johnny's many animal friends who will appear. Theme of the pageant is America, and the program will include plays about various aspects of American history. The Rammettes, Whitehall High's girls' marching unit, will also appear and there will be singing and other entertainment. The community is invited. There will be no charge.

Newcomer Party Tradition In Bexley

Bexley's annual welcome to new residents of the city, its Newcomers' Party, will be held Saturday, Aug. 28, 8:30 p.m., at the Bexley Pool, 2100 Clifton-av.

An evening of dancing, refreshments and swimming is arranged. In the event of rain the party will be held at Jeffrey Mansion, 165 N. Parkview-av.

Representatives of all Bexley organizations will be on hand to advise newcomers on all phases of Bexley community life, and films of past city events will be shown.

All adults recently moving to the community are urged to attend, and will receive invitations by mail. They are requested to reply by Monday, Aug. 23.

Long-time residents are also invited to attend, to bring their new neighbors, meet other newcomers, and to learn more about their community and its opportunities.

Further information is available from Mrs. Michael Elin of Bexley Celebrations Association, 237-7563, or Bexley recreation director, Joel S. Poetker, CL. 8-5755.

Name, Advisory Council Sought For 'Barnett'

"Barnett" sound good?

The community is invited to have a hand in selecting a name for the new recreation center in the city's farthest southeastern section, due to open by mid-September.

The community will also have a voice in its policy and operation, through representatives on the Advisory Council, to be appointed by the Recreation Commision.

The recreation facility, now in its final stages of construction on Barnett-rd just north of Livingston, has been referred to by the commission as "Barnett," identified by its location.

However, members agree that this might not be the best name for the center, and anyone who wishes to may suggest another title.

Suggestions may be sent to The Spectator 2465 W. Broad-st, BR. 4-1155.

The community's civic, social, church and school groups may also help complete the center by adding some of the final touches — draperies, furnishings or other finishing items.

Contracts were let last week for the center's major equipment.

Anyone wishing suggestions on what may be needed may contact the Recreation Commission or Recreation Department at Columbus City Hall.

Center, Pool For Near East

Plans for a new recreation center and a municipal swimming pool, to be located in the city's near East Side between Broad-st and Livingston-av, and from Parsons-av to Alum Creek, were announced this week.

Selection of a site for the recreation facility is expected to be made soon.

Among locations being considered by the Recreation Commision are the Blackburn Playground area at 19th-st and Rich-st, and an area near Main Street School.

The swimming pool may be

Bexley Council Plans Special Meet To Act On Amendments

Bexley Council, to meet in special session, Friday, Aug. 13, 5 p.m., is expected to approve an ordinance placing two amendments to the city charter on the November ballot.

If approved, the amendments would make more flexible two sections of the Bexley charter dealing with duties and succession of the office of the mayor, should it become vacant.

The mayor may be succeeded, under the charter's present form, only by the president of council. Should he be unable to serve for any reason, such as business commitments, his resignation would become necessary and another council member must be elected to his post, and then moved into the mayor's job.

The proposed amendment provides that, if council president could not assume the duties another member of council or any qualified elector of the city may be appointed to serve until the next regular election.

Currently, the duties of service and safety director must also be performed by the mayor.

If the second proposed amendment is approved council would have the power, should circumstances make it necessary, to separate the offices of service and safety director from the mayor's office.

Council is also expected Friday night to act on the city's budget and electric rate ordinances.

Whitehall Plans Patrol Workshop

Whitehall police are taking a "woodsy" approach to instructing youngsters to serve as School Patrol members for the upcoming school year.

Sgt. P. K. Jackson, Whitehall Police Safety Officer, says that a day-long School Patrol Workshop will be conducted Wednesday, Sept. 1, at Blacklick Woods.

School buses will leave the police station at 8:30 a.m. on that day, and will return the patrol crews at 5 p.m.

Consent slips have been sent out to all prospective patrol members in the Whitehall area. They are to be returned to Sgt. Jackson by Aug. 15.

Sandwiches and cold drinks will be furnished. Entertainment and recreation is planned after lunch.

SAFETY OF SCHOOL CHILDREN is the concern of Whitehall Police Department, and will be the subject of the city's first day-long workshop for prospective patrol members Wednesday, Sept. 1. Lt. R. A. Wells and Sgt. P. K. Jackson check crossings at Kae Avenue Elementary in preparation for instructing patrol members at the workshop.

BANTAM LOOP FUTURE IS DIM

The Whitehall Bantam Football League has some serious financial difficulties, The Spectator learned this week.

Officials in the organization are concerned that the league will not be able to operate this fall according to schedule unless some means of support is found.

As things stand now, the league is some $3,000 in the red from last year's operation.

In order to finance the loop again this season, plus expand the program (as was agreed upon at the end of the '64 campaign), the league's debt would stand to be doubled at the close of the upcoming season.

The league operates independent of the Recreation Department to provide Little League football for the community.

Up to now, the Bantam League has asked that boys who play in the organization provide only a $5 registration fee which takes care of insurance.

On its own part, the association pays out just under $35 per boy in equipment to insure that the boys will be playing under the safest of conditions.

The complete outfit, for 215 boys in last year's program, contains: helmet ($11), shoulder pads ($11), jersey ($4.50) and pants ($7).

Unless financial assistance can be provided for the league, only the first 215 boys to sign up will be able to play Bantam Football in Whitehall this fall.

Donations to aid the organization's cause may be sent to: Earl Fout, 246 Robinwood.

Foit, treasurer of the Whitehall Bantam Football Association, will be happy to answer any questions about the organization and its problems at 231-4022.

Dances Dated In Whitehall

Community dances, one for teenagers and another for adults, are scheduled in Whitehall, sponsored by the city recreation department.

A teenage dance will be held Friday, Aug. 20, from 7 to 10 p.m. behind the municipal building on Yearling-rd.

A round and square dance for adults is slated Saturday, Aug. 28, from 8 to 11 at Brookwood Shelter House, behind Beechwood School. Ernest Winnestaffer will be the caller.

Both dances are free and open to the public.

only means by which council could hope to validate the city income tax without a vote by the people on the direct question of imposing such a tax.

(In 1957, the Ohio General Assembly passed a state law prohibiting any municipality from imposing an income tax in excess of one percent without a vote of the people.)

Twyford said he is challenging the right of Columbus to continue to collect the income tax in an effort to bring the question back onto the ballot. "I think the people ought to be made aware of what has been done to them by city officials," he said.

"It is bad enough," Twyford said, "that virtually the entire work force of Reynoldsburg must pay the Columbus income tax, and that the arbitrary attitude of Columbus preempts Reynoldsburg and most other suburbs from even considering an income tax. But I would be less than worthy to represent the people of my city if I did not speak out when the legality of the Columbus tax ordinance is in such a questionable state."

Twyford said that he "just might promote" a Columbus City Charter amendment to "settle the issue" of legality of the income tax.

Industrial Park Set For Area

A 28-acre tract of land, formerly known as the Maple Lawn Addition near Johnstown and Stelzer-rds, will be developed into an industrial park.

A rezoning from residential to industrial was granted Tuesday morning by Franklin County Commissioners. No opposition was voiced.

The proposed industrial park is expected to be developed by Calco, Inc., a manufacturing firm now located at 838 N. Cassady-rd.

That firm is planning to move its operations to the area and then sell individual tracts there for future industrial development.

Pinpointing the tract's location, commissioners say it's situated on the north side of Johnstown-rd, about 1500 feet west of Stelzer-rd.

Winners of each league in the nine sections will participate This includes both boys and girls in the three age groups—junior (12 and under); intermediate (13-15); and senior (16 through 18). The final game in each division will be played at Sunshine Recreation Center on Aug. 20.

All city playgrounds are taking part in various sectional pageants this week. Locations are: West — Aug. 10, Westgate Center; North — Aug. 11, Whetstone; East —Thursday, Aug. 12, East High School; South—Friday, Aug. 13, Central High School. All shows, open free to the public, begin at 7:15 p.m. Playgrounds will close at 5 p.m. on the day of their particular pageant.

The finale for the 1965 playground season will be the annual lantern parades. These will be held on Tuesday, Aug. 24, starting at 7:30 p.m. The five locations for this event will be the areas around the lakes at Franklin, Linden, Schiller, Westgate, and Whetstone.

Following are local playground reports:

Leawood . . .

Leawood's Clown Contest was held July 29 on the playground.

Winners were cutest: first place, Jimmy Campbell and second place, George Schiff; saddest; first place, Danny Fox and second place, Suzie Mutter; funniest: first place, Bobby Miller and second place, Jo Ann Mutter; happiest: first place, Pat Johnson and second place, Janis Blosser, Mary Eckardt and Bea Turley; most original: first place, Jimmy Blosser and second place, Larry Miller special: Brenda Wicks, Donna Schiff, Lee Held, Rose Anna Held and Michelle Fox.

The intermediate girls ended their softball season by losing to Pinecrest 28 to 2. The junior girls rested this week because of a forfeit from Willis Park. The junior girls are tied for first place in their league.

The pageant will be on Aug. 12 at Central High School starting at 6:30. Everyone is welcome to attend. Leawood's title is "Cinderella's Helpful Friends."

Team One in the Junior Jet League ended their season in great form by winning their last four games to cinch the title. In second place was Team Two, followed closely by Teams Four and Three. Members of the champions, Team One, are Greg Boring, Bob and Ron Carpenter, Lynn Duty, Pat Farrel, Barry Frye, Mark Jurkovich, Tom May, Jim McVay, Danny Mowery, David Walker, Harrell Webb, Donnie Stoner and Brad Klemstine.

The senior boys tied with Fairmoor for second place in the Far East District.

Woodcrest . . .

With only three weeks left in the playground season, the big activity coming up is the Pageant. Woodcrest will participate in the South Section Pageant to be held at Central High School, Friday, Aug. 13.

The theme of this year's Pageant is "Fantasy," and Woodcrest will do a version of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Members of the playground show are Cindy Squires as Snow White, Pam Squires, Lesley Schultz, Linda Petersen, Billy Felix, Shelia Felix, Dianna Dearth, Debby Hughes, Lisa Clark, Debby Schultz, Brenda Gerrard and John Clymer.

The girls' softball team beat Pinecrest 7 to 1 last week. That win rocketed them into a league playoff game against Leawood. Leawood won the first game 11 to 10, but Woodcrest bounced back in the second round to win, 10 to 7.

About 60 children showed up for a movie sponsored by the playground. The movie was entitled "The Red Balloon." During the intermission three boys from Woodcrest put on comedy of impersonations. Don Moore headed the zany trio which also included Jack Barber and Fred Oty.

Encores for one-hit pitching are tough, but Eddie Zoog tackled it and tossed a no-hitter. Zoog fanned 14 en route to blanking Team Six, 6 to 0. Zoog's Team One baffled Larry Alley early on Steve Winslow's triple. Winslow also hit a home run in the third inning of the contest.

Team Five won a pair this past week to tie up Team One for first place honors. Team Five edged Team Three, 5 to 2, and swept over Team Four, 12 to 3.

Team Six humbled Team Two, 12 to 1 in other action.

Fairmoor . . .

Fairmoor Center ended all its softball games last week. Fairmoor's intermediate girls defeated Willis Park 13 to 7 to become league champs.

Leading hitters in the championship game were Rozzan Kurtis, four hits and two runs scored. Debbie Smith and Karen Slone three hits and Nancy Walsh and Debbie Smith three runs scored. Carol Barash made three outstanding defensive plays while Ozz Kurtis made one.

Fairmoor will complete in the City Tournament for the intermediate championship next week.

Fairmoor's junior girls defeated Courtright 11 to 4 as they ended up third in the league. The junior boys were less fortunate as Scottwood defeated them 10 to 6. The regular softball season is over, except for league winners.

In Junior Jet baseball, with one week to go Team Four leads the 10, 11 and 12 division with an 8 and 3 record. Team Two is 6 and 5, and Team Three 5 and 6 and Team One 3 and 8. In the eight and nine-year-old league Team One leads with a 7 and 2 record while Team Three is 5 and 6 and Teams Two and Four have identical 4 and 6 records.

After the regular season there will be an all-star game with the league winners facing the league champs in both age groups.

Fairmoor has been getting ready for the pageant to be held Thursday, Aug. 12, at East High School. Then comes the Lantern Parade at Franklin Park.

Willis Park . . .

The final standings in Junior Jets has found Team Two winning the league championship with a record of seven wins and five losses. In second place was Team One with record of five wins and seven losses. Team Three finished third with four wins and eight losses.

In softball the Junior Boys won their fourth straight by a score of 20 to 1 over Pinecrest. This made it an undefeated season for Willis Park. The boys scored 70 runs and allowed only nine for their opponents in four games. They are eagerly awaiting the beginning of the City Tournament in softball to begin.

The Intermediate Girls softball team finished its season with a record of 4 and 2. Their loss to Fairmoor put the team in second place for the season.

The special event for this week is the pageant. Nine children from Willis Park will participate by presenting their version of "Peter and the Wolf," at Central High School on Aug. 13. In the play are Michele Mahon, Angie Gianini, Janice Walker, Suzanne and Patty Cooper, Dandi Hildreth, Mathew and Neil Masterbrook and Mike Zelena.

James Road . . .

The pageant will be tonight at East High School on Broad-st. All parents and friends are invited to attend.

The junior girls softball team has fought its way to second place in the league. Girls who attended practice and the games were Janie Morris, Carol Buttler, Donna Albanese, Jackie Albanese, Sharon Kelly, Sandy Price, Cathy Poe, Robin Mauger, Geralda Sweetman, Sharon Brown, Terry Dowler and Maryann Carpenter.

The Lantern Parade will be Aug. 24. The theme at James Road will be "Liberty."

Courtright . . .

Last Friday and Saturday the Junior Olympics were held at Ohio State. Those persons participating in the meet were Valerie Hawkins, Debbie Barry, Angie Stapleton, Mary Grubb, Sandy Allen, Kathy Jo Yantes, Dan Moore, Keith Smith, Rick Lech, Roger Ansel and Jeff Berg.

The pageant will be held at Central High School. Courtright's theme will be Raggedy-Ann Dolls.

The arts and crafts program is held every day from 12:30 to 2:30. Work is now being done for the Lantern Parade which will be held on Aug. 24.

With two weeks left for Junior Jet, Teams Four and Three are tied for first place with records of 5 and 2. In second place is Team One with a record of 4 and 3.

In softball the senior boys, who won the East Side League, slipped by Scottwood's Intermediate champ-

Miss USA Home For Short Breather, Visit

Sue Ann Downey

A tired Sue Ann Downey came back to Columbus for a short rest last weekend. Tuesday she went to Lima, her old hometown, for a two-day vacation, and tomorrow she will board a jet to return to Miami Beach, Fla.

Sue Ann, this year's Miss U.S.A. and second runner-up in the Miss Universe contest, spent the weekend visiting with her parents and friends. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. John E. Downey of 610 Old Farm-rd.

During the next year Sue Ann's headquarters will be the Monte Carlo Hotel in Miami Beach. From this point she will travel throughout the country promoting various products and organizations under the direction of Miss Universe, Inc. This company is a private corporation that "sells" its beauty pageant winners to other companies, organizations and civic groups for promotional purposes.

Sue Ann will receive a salary and expenses in addition to the money she won in the Miss U.S.A. and Miss Universe contests.

Her first assignment will be to make public appearances in Kentucky during mid-August for a large soft drink company.

Sue Ann's father, who took her place for interviews this week, said she probably would have about 30 percent of her time free during the next year. When she is not on assignment from Miss Universe, Inc., she will be permitted to come back to Columbus for visits.

He said Sue Ann has received two movie offers—one from Troy Donahue (Warner Brothers) — in recent weeks. He said the offers have been referred to Miss Universe officials for verification of authenticity.

Sue Ann was a sophomore fine arts major at Ohio State University when she won the Miss U.S.A. contest in June. Her father said she plans to return to the university after her reign has ended.

Sara Carr To Address Holy Spirit

The Society will sponsor an "Old Fashioned Ice Cream Social" from 1 to 9 p.m., on the school grounds, E. Broad st at Yearling-rd, Saturday, Aug. 14. There will be homemade pies, cookies and cakes along with balloons for the children. Chairman is Mrs. Joseph Eckstein.

In the event of rain, the social will be held indoors in the school's assembly room.

Mrs. Fairchild Heads Ohio Beta Chapter

Newly appointed officers are Mrs. Mayme Fairchield, president; Mrs. Margaret Nelson, vice-president; Mrs. Irena Markwood, recording secretary; Mrs. Margaret Yoakam, treasurer; Mrs. Mary-Ruth Dale, extension officer; Mrs. Betty Capaciama, program moderator; and Mrs. Mary Kilpatrick, historian.

Worry is interest paid on trouble before it comes due. (Inge).

LEA-WOOD GARDENERS SET SHOW

The show, "Concert of Flowers," will be judged orally by Mrs. F. J. Ruble and the public is invited to attend between 3 and 7 p.m.

Co-chairmen of the event are Mrs. Herbert T. Lindenberg and Mrs. Christian Kohnle. Mrs. Victor Smith is chairman of the staging committee and Mrs. Donald Dickson is chairman of the entry committee. Mrs. Robert Finkel, president, and Mrs. William Stygler, president-elect, will be hostesses.

WOMEN ARE SMARTER THESE DAYS

Smart enough to tell the difference between good and bad taste in hair-styling. They don't fall for the latest thing simply because it's seen on every TV show, and they don't stick to the same tired old hairstyle as though they were born that way. Nope, they're smarter and they expect us to be smarter too. And we are. We know that nowadays we are expected to be part artist and part fashion guides and practical psychologists. If you haven't been to see us for some time, come in and see for yourself. We've changed for the better—as much as you have.

THE LITTLE GIRL HAIRDO GROWS UP

Into an exquisitely romantic and totally different look of sophistication. It's simplicity itself and yet it suggests a world of excitement about you. And that's the way it should be. Before or after dark, by candlelight or under the sun a hairstyle should never take the spotlight away from the lady who wears it. The woman should be unforgetable—her hairstyle should merely intensify this charm.

FROM THE TRAVELER'S NOTEBOOK

What shall you wear if you want to be absolutely correct on your next trip by air? Well, whether it's your hairstyle or your costume you are thinking about it should be something comfortable that gives the distinct impression of being stylish, trim, and serene. Something that will attract a man's eye . . . But then, isn't that what you want to look like all the time? As far as that goes there are lots of times that "look" is just right to impress other women, too.

Come in and consult us at any time about any beauty problem.

HEARD UNDER THE DRYER

"A scientist says in 100 years there won't be any blondes left in this country." "I don't doubt it. It's hard to leave one now."

Cyril Completes Advanced Course In Hair Design

David Cyril, owner of the Cyril Beauty Salon, 3675 E. Livingston-av, located in the Berwick Manor Shopping Center, has returned from an advanced course in hairstyling at Bruno's Advanced Academy of Hair Design in Toronto, Canada.

In addition to completing the course in advanced hair design, Cyril attended seminars in hair fashion construction, which included the latest methods in hair cutting for the new "Lively Look" easy-to-care for hairstyles for 1966.

He also spent some time at Bruno's International Fashion Wing, an educational center for the development of the latest hair styling techniques, with emphasis on lines that are both flattering and functional.

Cyril is now offering an advanced coiffure repertory to the patrons of his salon.

ABC'S OF COMPUTERS TAUGHT AT ABC

"BUSINESS TODAY is utilizing more and more machines which a few years ago could only be found in science fiction books or movies," Richard A. Mancini, president of ABC (Advanced Business Center) points out. "This has opened the doors to an ever-increasing demand for sophisticated skills in the field of computers and other automation machines." Mancini has developed a personalized method of introduction where students advance according to their own initiative and perception. See story in the Adult Education section of this edition.

NO RECESSION IN SIGHT, PROFESSOR SAYS

Long-term interest rates, which are an important factor in the country's economy, will not increase substantially the first quarter of 1966.

This prediction was made by Prof. Harry M. Kelly, assistant dean of New York University's School of Finance, to savings and loan executives meeting at Granville Inn.

Prof. Kelly said a stabilization of interest rates will tend to keep this country's economy strong. He doesn't agree with President Johnson's advisers, however, that the economy will continue "onward and upward."

Nor does he believe it will suffer greatly as do some Federal Reserve Bank officials who likened it to the pre-depression days of the 20's.

"I believe the worst that will happen within the 12-month period ahead is a gradual slowing down, not a recession of any great proportion," Prof. Kelly asserted.

He listed three factors that could drastically zoom long-term interest rates sky high. These are:

1. A change in the current healthy balance between wages and productivity. The steel settlement should be watched closely.

2. Social security taxes and state and local government assessments may sop up more of the increased purchasing power than is released by cuts in the federal taxes.

3. The unsettled conditions in Viet Nam may completely alter the entire economic situation. The stock market would be quick to react. Further tax cuts would not be in order.

On the other hand, Prof. Kelly listed six factors working against a drastic interest rise in long term investments. They are:

1. The well-balanced business expansions of the last three years give indications to continue for the next several months.

2. Corporate expansion can be pretty well financed through internally generated funds, thus freeing the pressure on the investment market.

3. The attitude of the government continues to be favorable toward business to a greater extent than previous dividends, increased social security payments and lower administrations.

4. Higher salaries, greater taxes provide more money for people to spend.

5. The Federal Reserve does not seem inclined to increase the discount rate or adopt aggressive measures to reduce the flow of credit.

6. It is predicted that the balance of payments deficit will be only $800 million this year, lowest level in eight years.

Prof. Kelly was the principal speaker at the annual Ohio Savings and Loan League Academy which is conducting its 12th annual school from Aug. 1 through Aug. 13.

BEHIND THE SCENES AT OSES

Job Success Is An Everyday Routine

One index to the rapid growth of the Greater Columbus area is contained in statistics released this week by John H. Plattenburg, Columbus area manager of the Ohio State Employment Service Division of the BUC at 309 S. Fourth-st.

According to Plattenburg, about 3,800 new job applications are processed each month compared to nearly 4,000 job offerings by employers. This huge volume of activity in the employment market results in about 3,000 job placements each month.

It also results in a lot of behind-the-scene activity at OSES.

Service To Employers

When an employer's order for a worker is received, specialists analyze detailed requirements of the job. These generally fit one or several of the more than 75,000 coded job specifications contained in the OSES job dictionary.

Once a job code is determined which fits the employer's requirements it opens OSES files of every available applicant on the labor market in this area. These applicants have been previously screened and their skills determined by the same coded job dictionary.

Where required, OSES applies standard or specific tests when screening applicants.

OSES also offers a wider employment market to employers when qualified local area applicants are not available. With the employer's consent, his work order is extended through the Labor Clearance Department to any or all of the 1900 affiliated State Employment Service offices across the nation.

A trained field staff of OSES is also available to assist employers in solving their employment problems in such areas as staffing patterns, job analysis, job re-engineering, efficient usage of available workers, and in the supply of labor market information, trends and other authentic information important to expansions of activities or related projections.

When an applicant registers with OSES, his educational background, work history, skills, accomplishments and potentials are carefully analyzed and the results sometimes reveal his qualifications for jobs other than his major trade or skill. This materially broadens his chances for immediate employment.

OSES also makes available to an applicant, where required, invaluable career guidance, counseling on occupational choice or change, and advice on the available sources of additional education or training that will improve his employable status.

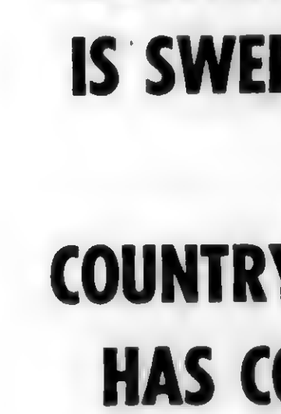
Special services by trained personnel are also offered to meet the needs of the handicapped, the older worker, veterans, members of minority groups and the young worker.

Youth Opportunity

OSES has always had a prominent and important part in employment guidance and training programs. Recently, the accelerated efforts on national, state and local area levels, under the President's Anti-Poverty Program, has led to the establishment of the Columbus Youth Opportunity Center.

Located at 239 S. Fourth-st, this center is a complete Youth Employment Office, staffed and administered by personnel especially trained to give maximum assistance to Youth in the problems they encounter in changing from student status to that of workers entering the labor market.

OSES is a public facility, supported by the people, and interested citizens are always welcome at OSES local offices to become more fully acquainted with the work being done.



Full-time OSES offices in the Greater Columbus area are maintained in Columbus, Delaware and Marysville. Part-time offices are operated in London and Circleville.

LINDA BENDER, OSES Clerical Unit clerk, cautions applicants on the importance of giving complete information on their experience, skills and other activities. Guidance, counseling and tests may open up new employment horizons for some whose major fields are temporarily or permanently closed in this area. Others sometimes move into more sophisticated work areas when latent talents are discovered.

A TIME-SAVING method for qualified applicants to meet skill-seeking employers was recently introduced in the local area by Business Men's Clearing House. Applicants may meet several prospective employers during one trip to BMCH and select one of several positions offered. Employers, in turn, may meet all available applicants possessing the skill sought during a single trip to BMCH's office here at Suite 880 in the new 88 East Broad Street building. See that story in the Adult Education Tab with this edition.

A&P To Build North Side Store

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, Inc. (A&P) has announced plans to locate a new, modern food store on the southeast corner of N. High and Hudson-st, extending east to East-av.

Total investment is about $335,000, including land costs. Clearance of the properties now on the site has already begun and the new unit is scheduled for completion in December.

The new A&P will be the 17th in Franklin County, the ninth to be built since 1958. It will contain 15,000 square feet of space and the parking lot will accommodate 72 cars.

H. T. Walsworth, vice-president in charge of the A&P operations in Columbus, said, "The building, besides being designed to serve the needs of the north side population, reflects the latest ideas in shopping convenience and marketing."

The building exterior will be of Early American design, the same used for a number of other recently constructed A&P stores in this area.

The new High-st store will employ 40 persons. The Columbus unit of A&P, with office, three warehouses and a bakery in the city, serves 87 stores in central and southern Ohio and parts of W. Virginia and Kentucky and employs 1528 persons.

Mrs. Lillian Z. Cooperrider, 2314 Club-rd, Upper Arlington, is owner and lessor of the property. The Trans-America Building Company, Inc., of Columbus is building the new store.

Citizens Savings Scores Gains

Total assets were increased by 20 percent during the first six months of 1965 over Dec. 31, 1964 by Citizens Savings and Loan Co., 32 N. High-st, it was announced by Charles J. McGreevy, president.

In the same period, savings accounts increased more than 21 percent, he stated. He attributed the rise to the fact that Citizens is the only company in the Columbus area with an interest rate of 4.25 percent.

Citizens Savings and Loan Co. was organized in 1917 as the Brunson Savings & Loan Co., and has been operating under its present name since 1963.

The Water Was Cold—But Competition, Sun Were Hot!

THE LUNGE of the backstroke (top picture) begins another race for these three competitors, churning water as they hopefully kick away to an early lead. Total effort in the 100-yard free-style in 90 degree plus temperatures bring Gahanna Swim Club competitor Tom Goodoking (bottom picture) to near exhaustion at race's conclusion. (Pictures by Jack Wittenmeier).

MAVERICK

By Richard L. Paugh

WITH MUDDY SHOES

Today's session around the campfire will take us into the subject of "BEAUTIFUL OHIO," or what happened to it?

Early America is captured forever in the famous engravings of Currier & Ives. Many times I have studied these nostalgic pictures and wondered if we would ever see our nation and state unsullied again.

NOWHERE in the series of landscapes can be seen a beer can or a billboard. No political posters adorn the stately elms and the barns are really barn red without hint of a chewing tobacco ad.

I think that I shall never see
A billboard lovely as a tree.
Indeed, unless the billboards fall
I'll never see a tree at all.

In these four simple lines, Nash has pointed out the creeping disease that converts our roadways into a gallery of bleak commercialism. In years gone by, our good nation experienced its greatest blight in the cities where slums grew in narrow streets and the residue of mankind left its mark where the sun seldom looked.

HOWEVER, since the advent of organized trash pickup, urban renewal and civic-minded committees to paint-up and fix-up, the spotlight of nastiness has moved outward to Ohio's hills and valleys.

Take a ten-minute trip in the country with your eyes open to things you passed before but didn't really see. County politicians promise evtrything on their posters and leave the things on a fence post all year just to prove they didn't mean a word they said.

Land owners trim around barn so the piano ads can stand out better even though the few dollars gained by selling the space have long since gone.

MOTORISTS bent on enjoying the country, stop along the road and leave great mounds of garbage so the next folks won't be able to enjoy this same scene. Twenty-year-old macaroni signs still wave at passing cars, the company that paid the tab being long out of business.

A man's land is his castle, so the saying goes and I'd be the last man on earth to change that basic freedom. However, rural life in Ohio is undergoing drastic changes during this decade.

Most farmers no longer wholly farm but hold outside jobs to augment their income. There is a great trend building to find other suitable uses for their acreages. In many counties there are associations of landowners that encourage summer visitors from the big cities.

THERE ARE many pay lakes now romancing the city fishermen. Hunt clubs are starting to be formed by landowners in the better hunting areas of our state.

I have been approached many times by these rural folk who wish to attract the in-state tourist for various reasons. They ask me what they must do to make their set-up more attractive to the recreation seeker.

The very first item I mention to them is appearance of their land. When farm life is mentioned, the mind's eye still sees a Currier & Ives situation with clean yards and unblemished hills.

NO MAN WANTS to trip over rusty combines to get that rabbit nor does he picture his family at play in front of a horrendous ad for chewing tobacco.

The State and Federal Governments are now encouraging clean-up campaigns in their own ways. The state will fine you $50 for littering the highways. They are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to attract tourists to our state so we may regain some of the money our folks have spent elsewhere.

The Federal folks do not allow billboards to be mounted near highways they help build. These attempts are good and right but someone else must join in the struggle.

THAT IS the rural and small town folks. Without their help our state will never be beautiful again.

We have many historical and natural attractions to please the recreation-hungry people who race across the country every year.

If we can police ourselves into shape, tear down those sheds that are already half down, paint the barn red again, walk our fencelines with an eye to restoring beauty, our efforts will be repaid many times over.

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

'Competition, You Know' . .

Ah — football's in the air once more!

In our effort to keep the public aware of gridiron developments we took a weekend run up to Camp Fortitude, the pre-season training quarters for the "Pop" Harrison League Inc. — one of the countries' most progressive Little League grid operations.

WHILE SPARTAN Red was busy banging through a scrimmage with Spartan White under the beady eyes of 24 logistically - placed movie cameras, we took a tour of the camp facilities with Edgar Righteous, Fortitude's director.

Our first stop was a gigantic room with travel posters neatly arranged on the walls.

Wittenmeier

"I thought this whole complex belonged to the camp," we said, nodding to the staff of secretaries busily clicking away on their typewriters.

"THIS IS our travel department," he beamed. "We've got the kids booked solid for exhibitions through '68."

We were interrupted by a young lady with five telegrams in her hand. "Excuse me, Mr. Righteous," she said, "but Madrid has to have an answer immediately."

"I thought I told you to scratch Madrid. That team in Pennsylvania's been there three times. It isn't a 'first', Miss Lawson."

SHE TEARFULLY turned away.

"Competition, you know," he smiled, pulling the 'Madrid' pin off the map on the wall.

"It must cost quite a bit transporting these kids all over the world," we commented through an open mouth.

"Organization and a top-drawer Booster Club," Righteous replied. "By the way, here's a couple passes to our fund raising project of the month — the Beatles on stage in the south auditorium for the Pepsi Generation, Bernstein and the Philharmonic in the north section for the long hairs."

WE TOOK the money out of our wallet and replaced it with the tickets.

"I'd take you into our Publicity Dept. here but I don't want to disturb them. Johnny Unitas is video-taping our TV promos and Jimmy Brown doesn't like interruptions while our artist is doing his portrait for our billboard campaign."

"What's in the room with the time lock on the door?" we asked breathlessly.

THAT'S WHERE we store the post season awards. This year the kids set their choice between Hondas and color sets. Sure beats those high school scholarships that team in California used to brag about, doesn't it?"

"Sure does," we replied, as our mouth dropped open again.

"We used to hold our 'Awards Party' at Disneyland but Walt got kinda' snooty last fall so I told the kids they'd just have to settle for the World's Fair this time," he added, opening another door.

THE ROOM was small with chairs lined around the walls. In the center was a mechanical man which every five seconds slammed a sledge hammer down onto a football helmet.

"This is our 'Worried Mother's Room'," said Righteous. "You know how women are, always worried. Well, they can sit in here for hours and gain confidence in the fine equipment we use."

"You think of everything, don't you?"

"Everything — the competition, you know."

"HERE'S THE efficiency study you wanted done on the Surburban Kindergarten League," Myra said.

"Oh, by the way, Myrna, call LIFE and tell them we won't consider the cover unless two or three members of the '59 team are in the picture. Alumni," he said, throwing his hands up in the air.

Righteous guided us next is the last stop and, I'm proud to say, the best. This department is the apple of our eye."

INSIDE THE small room a young football player laid comfortably on a couch in full dress uniform.

"Son, there's a reason why you let that man break through your position to throw your quarterback for a loss," said the white-coated man seated next to the couch. "Do you know what it is?"

"I think so, sir."

"Ah - hah. You've always felt your father was a weakling!"

"No sir."

YOUR TEAMMATES make you feel socially unacceptable?"

"No sir."

"Then why, son, why would you miss an assignment?"

"The guy I was supposed to block was bigger than me and I was kinda' scared."

WITH THAT, director Righteous fainted and I had to find my own way back to the parking lot.

Ingrid Had It Easy Or—'Gaslight' Revisited Etc.

By ADELINE DALEY

Do you remember the movie "Gaslight," in which a devious Charles Boyer portrayed a husband who plotted to get rid of his wife (Ingrid Bergman) by tricking her into thinking she was going insane?

He used all sorts of devices, such as re-arranging the furniture when she was out and then informing her that she only "imagined" the sofa used to be along the wall.

As I recall, the era depicted in the film was around the turn of the century, a time in which life was simple and uncomplicated. It wasn't very easy for either a husband or wife to drive each other off their rocker. (Even if they had kids.)

Today it's a lot easier, when you consider what the average householder has to contend with: Tax returns, IBM-processed bank statements, 57 different kinds of insurance forms as well as their serial numbers and even such a seemingly easy task as listing for county assessor's office the value of your personal and real property.

Be forewarned that you can not skip the questions which ask the value of your "boat," "jewelry," bank account" and "property in other states" — even if you have none. It would take a Philadelphia lawyer to know that you must reply "None." Are they trying to rub it in?

What's even more maddening about filling in the letter form is that I can never recall from year to year what I stated previously as the total value of our belongings. If I'm in a practical mood, I'll state, "$100," and would grab it on the spot.

But when I feel sentimental, I'm apt to raise the ante to $500, figuring that everything we owned was "near and dear to us." Just try explaining that to a tax appraiser when he calls at your home.

Let's hope you don't get your car stolen as ours was last week (since recovered), because you're supposed to have at your finger-tips such information as latest mileage reading, car key number, motor number, tire sizes and any identifiable scratches or dents.

An Exodus From Ignorance

The greatest renaissance in social communication since Johann Gutenberg gave the world its tool for mass education is now upon us.

Historians will later record it as The Era of Adult Education in the United States.

Others may call it The Exodus from Ignorance.

This dynamic unfoldment should — but probably won't — win the nomination for the "Best Story of the Year."

In classrooms illuminated at night, in kitchens, in recreation centers and at lesson-planned social functions America's brow is wrinkled in study. The mass mind of the nation is groping, both formally and informally, for a higher educational plateau.

Dr. John W. Gardner, recently appointed by President Johnson as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, dealt with adult education in his contribution to "Goals for Americans," the (1960) report of the President's Commission on National Goals. The former president of Carnegie Corporation of New York and Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching wrote:

"If we really believe in individual fulfillment, our concern for education will reach far beyond the formal system. We shall expect people to continue to learn and grow in and out of school, in every possible circumstance, and every stage of their lives . . .

"The 1960's should be a great decade for agencies with a special responsibility to facilitate learning outside the formal system, such as libraries, university extension divisions and adult education departments of public schools.

"The one hazard ahead is that heavy enrollments and straitened finances may lead universities and boards of education to cut the budget of what seems a peripheral activity. This must be avoided. It is no longer peripheral."

One hundred eighty-nine years after declaring themselves free of the tyranny of political bondage, the people and their representatives have issued, in effect, a second Declaration of Independence.

This time it proclaims freedom from the slavery of ignorance.

In time, it will pervade other peoples in other nations.

It's Fair Time Again

The 52nd Annual Franklin County Fair gets under way the evening of Aug. 16 at the fairgrounds in Hilliard, and will continue through Aug. 20. To paraphrase a popular TV commercial, the fair's trademark should be the "Triple-E" — for entertainment, education and enjoyment.

There are those who say "When you see one county fair, you've seen them all." This statement usually comes from those who have seen only one fair (or fewer) and just don't find such fare appealing.

It would make just as much sense to say "When you see one baseball game, you've seen them all." (And there are some who say just that.)

County fairs — like baseball games — are the same only in the general format or ground rules. But each game, and each fair, has its own personality. That's why people keep coming back for more.

"Sometimes I Wish I Was a Beatnik"

An Editor's Outlook . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

Tide Of Treason Seems Imminent

As the armed struggle with Communism in Asia grows hotter, America will see a tide of treason that it has never known before.

It has long been carefully planned. The psychological foundations were laid years ago. The infiltrators have been properly posted and intrenched. The seeds of doubt, disunity and despair have been planted.

Jones

For the Communist strategists have long known that the confrontation was coming. We would be naive to imagine that they haven't done everything possible to prepare for this day.

Their first move was to condition the American mind to discount and discredit those who sought to put the finger on specific fellow-travelers and party-liners. In this, they had some help from the late Senator Joe McCarthy of Wisconsin who, goaded into madness, did indeed do some wild swinging. But they got a lot more help from well-meaning but gullible editorialists who peddled to the world the impression that America was undergoing a reign of terror.

I was in Europe during the height of the McCarthy holler, and my foreign friends seriously thought that we had a new Goebbels and bulging concentration camps. As a matter of fact, nothing was a safer or more universally-observed recreation in the press, the lecture hall, the pulpit and on the air than to raise hell with Joe McCarthy.

The conditioning thus got under way. By the time Whittaker Chambers blew the whistle on Alger Hiss it had proceeded to the point where Chambers became a pariah in many intellectual circles. Hiss, it was conceded, had acted in a most peculiar fashion, but Chambers was a tattle-tale. The fact that there had been a conspiracy deep in the inner circles of Washington to sell out everything 400,000 Americans had died for in World War II didn't seem to register.

Pretty soon, any group of citizens which showed concern over Communist subversion became the butt of satirists and stand-up comedians. They were "witch-hunters." They were "lookers-under-the-bed." A term was coined — "super-patriot" — and used to lampoon the D.A.R. and the American Legion.

Although the resolutions of these societies often did reflect a degree of hysteria, it was strange that these critics paid scant attention to resolutions passed by the World Council of Churches and the National Council of Churches of Christ in America, with which neither Moscow nor Peking could find fault. Subversion in church organizations was a natural target of Communist strategists, first because of the respectability attached to the cloth and secondly because many preachers buy anything wrapped in white.

Infiltration into the publishing divisions of many Protestant denominations was a cinch, and when the National Council began passing resolutions favoring unilateral disarmament, recognition of Red China and abolition of the House Committee on Un-American Activities the pattern was plain. As war clouds grow blacker we will begin to see the real ramifications of this long campaign.

Anti-Communism has been injured by its money-promoters and zealots. Some medicine men have shaken a lot of cash out of frightened citizens. Some people have been overly attacked for old associations with Red-oriented outfits. Repentants should be received back into the fold. The mourner's bench should not be an electric chair.

Nevertheless, an examination into the past associations of any person who attempts to influence public opinion is germane. If there appears to be an ideological consistency in the petitions he has signed, the letterheads on which he has appeared, his picket lines, organizations and causes, it is legitimate grist for public comment. Efforts by the Red leadership to beat down any agencies, government or otherwise, which collect this information is logical, if not essential, from the Communist point of view. But let's not be fooled by the claim that the cause of liberalism and tolerance is being served.

As the cold war has heated up subversive efforts have intensified. It was not accidental that last year the Du Bois clubs of America sprang up like mushrooms on American college campuses. There's a new outfit called Students for Democratic Society conducting "peace marches," draft card tear-ups, and "teach-ins."

The civil rights movement was a normal objective of Communist tacticians. It was to be expected, of course, that anti-civil righters would try to see in every demonstration a Communist plot. But when some civil rights leaders begin to denounce J. Edgar Hoover and demand a withdrawal in Viet Nam, a re-appraisal of their motives is certainly in order.

There was no real Fifth Column in World War II. Nobody loved the Nazis. But there is going to be a very big Fifth Column in the upcoming confrontation with Communism. It has been almost half a century in preparation. It is designed to confuse and paralyze the American will.

Both the common sense and the resolution of the American people are about to be tested. Cruelly tested. It is time to close the book on the Age of Innocence.

Frosting on the Cake

BY "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

Sentimental nonsense about crime and criminals has gone far beyond the "point of no return."

New York City and Chicago are today the most hazardous spots to be sure, but St. Louis, Denver, Detroit and New Orleans are almost as bad. The main streets in broad daylight are even dangerous. After dark, many areas are so rampant with uncontrolled hoodlumism that citizens never take a chance on going out.

Nor is our own marvelous city of Columbus 100 percent safe, especially after dark. Roving gangs of deliberate "hell raisers" create chaos at athletic events. The situation became so vicious in Toledo that evening games are outlawed. These inexcusable outbursts of gang warfare are still uncontrollable by the ablest police departments.

The present Supreme Court has caused a large part of this monstrous situation. It is almost impossible for a dedicated policeman to "be a good cop." Our own Chief Scholer has finally won his point that patrolmen out on the street taking care of every untoward situation with immediate autonomous authority had to be re-established in district after district. Worse than that, officers have to work in pairs in order to protect themselves against injury and even possible death.

Every time some young punk is caught in the act, but manages to run into a hiding spot, usually a house that also harbors criminals, the law is handcuffed until a search warrant is obtained.

For 30 years "progressive education has ruled the roost" in police departments, juvenile courts and school administration. "You must let the dear darling express himself." You must not have a woodshed anymore!

Now, if a real old-fashioned cop takes some brat by the neck and whales some sense into him, the lame-brain parents have him arrested for assault and battery. Phooey!!

Believes Jones Did Injustice To Monarchy

To the Editor:

May I respectfully make some observations with regard to Mr. Jones' article in the July 22 edition, in which he wrote rather disparagingly of the British Monarchy.

1. Would Mr. Jones say that it was because of the Monarchy that certain countries have sought independence?

2. Does the fact that some kings and queens in history have been drunks, driveling idiots, of suspect virtue, detract in any way from the present prestige in which the Royal Family is held?

3. Edward the Eighth wasn't driven away, he chose to lead his own private life rather than sacrifice it — a sacrifice which is one of the great demands made on the Monarchy.

4. The effect of good-will tours made by members of the Royal Family is of much greater value to Britain than series of protracted conferences which achieve little, if anything, of their objective.

5. It is not a fact that British Royalty has had great difficulty in finding the middle ground between rabble-hellism and utter stuffiness. They haven't been looking for it! They act in just the way that is expected of them —by the British people.

6. The ordinary Britisher (which category does not include the angry young men and Malcolm Muggeridge) is proud of his Royal Family, jealously proud.

A loyal and proud subject of the Queen.

Book Sale Gratifying

To the Editor:

On behalf of our 350-member Goodwill family, I express our appreciation for the response of the community to our one-day book sale Saturday, July 31. An estimated 8,000 books were bought by some 1,200 persons.

When we had accumulated a large surplus of books (overflow from our stores), because they took up valuable warehouse space, we decided to have the special sale. Then came the help of the local papers in notifying the public. The project was an overwhelming success, thanks to all.

We thank our many friends in the Columbus area, and remind them that our latch string is out for all kinds of social, civic, business and professional groups to call us for a conducted tour of our workshop to see our testing, training and job placement program for the community's handicapped.

Publicity Worked Wonders

To the Editor:

The Lincoln Village Beautifiers Garden Club has been notified that the publicity scrapbook entered by them has received honorable mention in the Ohio Association of Garden Clubs' 1964 state competition.

I feel this award was possible through the coverage we received in the Rural-Urban Spectator and I wish to express my appreciation.

The Beautifiers have received some other awards this year. They are: first in region 9 for the 1964-65 yearbook in OAGC contest; an award of honor from the South-Western City School District for outstanding service to the community, the schools, and the children of the school district; a certificate of appreciation for its many activities designed to beautify the community and for the beautification of the Prairie-Lincoln School grounds, presented by the Lincoln Village Residents Association.

We entertained 10 guests on a tour of members' gardens on July 25, all of whom had read our publicity and therefore knew about the public tour! Thanks again.

Mrs. Philip N. Regar
Publicity Chairman, Lincoln Village Beautifiers

Guest Pulpit . . .

Ephesians 4:15—"That we grow up in every way in Him who is the Head, even Christ."

The apostle is talking about what we call today "maturity," which is not only the mark of a Christian, but of any other civilized person.

What is maturity? It is simply being grown up and that has nothing to do with years, or age either. Some boys and girls are very mature while some oldsters are positively childish.

Rev. Meyer

I recall that my father in his first church was 28 years of age, but looked much younger. So much so that some of the older folks of the congregation gave him quite a hard time. In sheer self-defense he grew a mustache which made him look older, and thus more mature. Both he and the congregation were wrong. It's not in age that maturity shows, but in actions.

What are the marks of a mature person, young or old? One is, in keeping your emotions in control, no matter how terribly aroused, no matter how surely justified. Someone once said that a man is no greater than the thing that "gets his goat." To "blow one's top" is surely a betrayal of immaturity. Our Lord became angry just once. That was when He saw how His Father's House was made into a place of thieving merchandising. But even then we note how he controlled his outrage. When George Washington was once asked if temper was a good thing, he answered "Certainly, too good to lose."

Another mark of a mature person is shouldering responsibility. Doing what has to be done, no matter how distasteful, irksome or humdrum. Jonah was a great prophet indeed, but here and there childishness showed through, when, being assigned the distasteful task of preaching to the heathen Ninevites, he turned the other way. In contrast was have our dear Lord in Gethsemane, taking the cup, though bitter, and drinking it. He did what He had to do. There's maturity!

The third mark of a mature person is never taking oneself too seriously. His work? Yes. The feelings of other people? Yes. But never himself. He can laugh at himself, his silly mistakes, thus erasing self-pity, pride, stuffiness—I am sure that more marriages would be kept together by that kind of maturity. Like that couple who, though temperamental, made a success of their marriage in this way. Early in their marriage the wife became angry at something, and smashed a plate. He, just as angry, smashed one too. By the time they reached the sixth plate, the humor of their petulence struck them both and they laughed and laughed. "It cost more dishes than we could afford" the wife explained, "but it was worth it." We learned a lesson. After that whenever he lost his temper, I would hand him the nearest plate, or he would do the same. And that was the end of it."

We do funny things, don't we? And to recognize them ourselves is to be really grown up.

Surgeon, surgeon, take a knife,
Cut this old love from my life.
Please replace the banished tumor,
With a brand new sense of humor.
At the spot where you must suture,
Graft a new love in the future.

Rev. T. Rene Meyer, pastor
St. John Lutheran Church
W. Broad-st at Hague-av

ONE MAN'S Opinion . . .

The Ohio Legislature might have "blown" the psychiatry vote the other day but it picked up considerable ground in the area of education with the passage of Senate Bill 358.

The lawmakers put the "rod" back into the classroom by permitting teachers to use "reasonable corporal punishment" upon pupils and to use force necessary to quell disturbances or disarm pupils who possess dangerous weapons.

Wittenmeier

At last Ohio has joined her sister states in the rational realization that "why Johnny won't mind "is no less a problem than his reading deficiency.

Classroom misbehavior, fiddle-faddled away as "juvenile expression" in the past, has never been very humorous to most teachers who recognize their primary duty to educate.

Some of the most poignant education for out-of-line adolescents came outside the realm of the three R's until the "hands off" policy came to the fore during the past half century.

Educators as close by as Dayton report their schools losing "a lot of teachers because they're afraid of the students." One such teacher had to relieve one of his first graders of a switchblade knife.

The smart aleck who considered all the classroom his stage in May has only a month remaining to find a new place to duck, thanks to Bill 358.

His old game of "We Don't Stop For Nobody" has been kicked back onto the playground where it belongs.

—Jack Wittenmeier

THE OTHER SIDE Of The Story

By Robert W. Kelder

DESPITE a 10-day cooling off period, this session of the Ohio General Assembly, like many of its predecessors, has been guilty of legislation by exhaustion. Only the future can tell how serious the inevitable mistakes of that process will be and their effect on the citizens of Ohio.

Whirlwind adjournments, of course, often play right into the hands of lobbyists and special interests. In the frenzy of closing hours, amendments have a way of creeping into bills that often are adopted without even cursory reading by many of the law makers who at this stage are so weary their only concern is to get the job done, haphazardly or otherwise, and go home.

It is both ironic and deplorable that, after months of careful deliberation, tired legislators succumb to pressures in the interest of expediency and abdicate authority to the invisible handful of men who really run the state through the "third House."

In the past, alert Governors have sought to correct the abuses of legislation by exhaustion by exercising their veto power. It will be of more than usual interest to note the course Gov. Rhodes will take in the use of his gubernatorial rights with respect to the avalanche of last-minute legislation enacted by the current Assembly.

Total results put the intermediate girls in third place in the Far East Section for softball. The junior girls also came in third place in their league.

In arts and crafts during the past week, the youngsters made potholders, crepe paper raffia bowls, gimp key chains and spatter-painted stencil prints.

The pageant for children in the Pinecrest area will be held at East High School on Aug. 12 at 6:30 p.m. The youngsters are busy preparing for this interesting event. Since Pinecrest is doing a routine using black light, much work is going into making hand props with fluorescent paint.

Eastgate Playground will participate in the East sectional pageant to be held Thursday at East High School, at 7:15 p.m. Because of the pageant, the playground will close at 5 o'clock.

Nicklaus Joins Firestone Golf Field; Brinks 'Alerted'

The American Golf Classic people, eager to promote their dripping rich go-around ($100,000) in Akron Aug. 23-29 pass along this information on Jack Nicklaus, who has officially agreed to tramp around the Firestone layout later this month:

Since joining the tour in 1962, Jack has:

(a) won 16 official tour championships, including the Masters, Memphis Open, Thunderbird Classic and Philadelphia Golf Classic this year.

(b) collected nearly $390,000 in official money (the other kind spends just as well, incidentally) to rank behind only four players in the modern era.

(c) won more than $100,000 in both '63 and '64 and has added up $114,000 this year with some of the richest prizes on the tour still to be claimed.

(d) became the youngest man ever to win the PGA, Open and Masters in a lifetime.

(e) won the first two "World Series of Golf" at Firestone Country Club in '62 and '63.

Nine years ago when Jack was 16, he won his first important title — the Ohio Open. Following his OSU career (where he won the NCAA golf championship), he announced on Nov. 8, 1961, that he was turning pro.

Shortly later he made an inauspicious debut at the '62 Los Angeles Open where he tied for 50th and collected the grand total of $33.33.

SINCE THEN, however, he's done a bit better — finishing in the money 28 consecutive times and 72 times out of his first 76 tournaments.

This year, Jack turned 25.

WHAT'S NEW IN THE WBBA?

Young Jerry Melton of the Major League Tigers apparently has found a home on the pitching mound.

Jerry fired a no-hitter last week against the Yankees, 18-0, striking out 13 and disposing of the remaining batters in the five-inning game on ground outs.

STANDING 4-1 in the won-less column this summer, young Mr. Melton pitched only one inning before arriving in Whitehall from France where his dad was stationed.

• • •

It's not too hard to figure out why the Red Sox are on top in the Minor League (14-1). Check out their pitching staff — Phil Harris (no earned runs in 39 innings), Richie Cochrane (six earned runs in 28½ frames), Bruce Phillips (one earned run in five innings) and Tim Smith (four earned runs in 4½ innings).

IF YOU STILL aren't impressed, check these batting averages: Chet Funk (.667), Tim Smith (.632), Bruce Phillips (.500), Chet Ziemianski (.489), Phil Harris (.465), Rickie Cochrane (.439), Tim Stead (.575), Mel Hardin (.360), Jack Deno (.555), Dave Cline (.500), Greg Funk (.466), Richie Thomas (.235), Tim Dockney (.230) and Barry Resnick (.063).

Incidentally, only half of the above 14 players have played Little League baseball before this season!.

Oh, the two guys who just have to sit back and count the runs for the Sox this summer are coaches Jim Funk and Don Phillips.

• • •

PLAYOFFS in the Minor and Major Leagues are under way this weekend and will continue into next week.

Kenny Wellnitz joined the WBBA's "not-hit" club last week as his Minor League Tigers (12-4) zeroed the Yankees, 14-0.

Kenny recorded 14 strikeouts while first baseman Mike Tedrick accounted for the other putout. Wellnitz's pitching buddy for the Tigers, Bruce Wallace, closed out the regular season by toppling the Senators, 20-1, in the lone opposition run coming in on an error.

• • •

Those fantastic Nats of the Pee Wee League (14-0) added a triple play to their string of accomplishments this summer, last week.

THE NATS downed the Chiefs, 22-0, and the inning-ended came when pitcher Steve Cochrane grabbed a pop fly, fired to Fernando Soler at first who relayed to Joey Pollard at second.

The luckless Chiefs, who had runners on first and second at the time, went down—how do they say it—one, two, three!

Weigh-Ins Tomorrow, Saturday For Bantams

Weigh-ins for boys in Whitehall's two Bantam-football leagues will be held tomorrow (6:30-9 p.m.) and Saturday (2-6 p.m.) at the Recreation Department in the city's Municipal Building.

It is important that as many boys as possible sign up on these two days as it is possible that the leagues might have to limit themselves to a total of 215 boys.

At the time of weigh-in and registration each boy must be accompanied by one of his parents or a guardian to (1) sign the registration slip and (2) pay the $5 fee for insurance coverage.

The Pee Wee League will be for boys 9 through 13 years of age, weighing between 68 and 95 pounds. The Middleweight circuit will accept boys 11 through 14 years of age, weighing no more than 120 pounds.

The final registration and weigh-in date will be Saturday, Aug. 21.

Board Hears Recommendations Of Civil Rights Council

Improvement of racial balance in the city schools was termed an urgency by Columbus Civil Rights Council in a set of recommendations made to the school board Tuesday.

The suggestions were drafted as the result of the Conference on Racial Balance in Schools held in May, and attended by representatives of the council's 53 member organizations, school superintendent, Dr. Harold Eibling and his administrative staff.

The board was asked, in a paper represented by Russell M. Jones, executive director of the Civil Rights Council, to consider:

• By the fall of 1966 some schools be "paired" to effect racial balance by assigning kindergarten through third grade students to a school in a predominantly Negro district, while pupils from both districts in grade four through six would attend the other school in the "pair," located in a white neighborhood.

(This plan, put into effect in New York City last fall, met with considerable resentment from parents although, according to the council's report, the school staff's favor the program for a better racial balance.)

• The board should immediately appoint a citizens advisory committee on racial balance.

• The board should adopt a clear policy of commitment to racial balance in schools.

• And the board should undertake a continuing program to inform the public of the effects of racial imbalance and of the values of integrated education.

(Jones placed the responsibility of "educating" the public to avoid the resentment demonstrated by New York City parents, on the school board.)

Attending the session, although he did not comment on the matter, was E. Harold Klingel of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission.

Julio Suarez of the Franklin County Anti-Communism Study Group was present and protested any plan that would change the neighborhood school district concept.

In a paper distributed to school administrators, board members, council members and the press, the issue of improving racial balance in schools was termed the "very heart of the civil rights problem . . . in northern communities."

The issue was cited as the focus of civil rights action this summer in Chicago, where the superintendent of schools was charged by civil rightists for doing nothing to correct de facto segregation, and as the cause of unrest in Cleveland.

Corrective steps being considered by the Massachusetts legislature and those being undertaken in New York City, and court litigation on the matter were all called "indication of the seriousness . . . and the urgency."

Twyford Rejects Young's City Tax Opinions

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford is sticking to his charge that Columbus is collecting an income tax without n that council had the ht to increase the tax with- a vote of the people."

wyford claimed support of Ohio Supreme Court for contention that any ques- of City Charter intent in matters must be weighed favor of the taxpayer ther than the legislative inch of government.

He quoted a 1950 Ohio Supreme Court ruling which invalidated a Dayton income tax ordinance, and said in part: "We are of the opinion that court should construe strictly the Charter powers conferred upon a municipality to levy taxes. In other words, where the authority of the municipality is ambiguous it is the duty to construe it strictly against the taxing authorities and in favor of the taxpayers."

And, in denying Young's contention that the 1956 tax limitation issue gave council authority for increase in the rate to one percent, Twyford cited the following passage from a 1955 Ohio Supreme Court ruling:

"Trivial nonconformances with the statues have been overlooked where the purpose of the ballot enabled the voters to clearly reflect their choice of candidates. They will not indulge such liberality of construction of ballots containing unauthorized statements or misrepresentations where bond issues or tax levies are the subject of the ballot. In the latter instance the form of the ballot and all procedural steps are conditions precedent to the validity of the election. The failure to attend the submission of the issue with such procedure is fatal."

Twyford said the whole question revolves on the right of the electorate to preempt council action in specific areas. As an example, he cited the part of the City Charter (Section 45) which says: "Ordinance rejected or repealed by an electoral vote shall not be re-enacted, in whole or in part, except by a vote of the people."

Twyford maintains that the same right prevails when the voters exercise their referendum right to repeal or approve a council ordinance, as was the case with the original council income tax ordinance.

"You can't give the people this right in one paragraph, and then take it away from them in the next," Twyford concluded.

Nicklaus Joins Firestone Golf Field; Brinks 'Alerted'

The American Golf Classic people, eager to promote their dripping rich go-around ($100,000) in Akron Aug. 23-29 pass along this information on Jack Nicklaus, who has officially agreed to tramp around the Firestone layout later this month:

Since joining the tour in 1962, Jack has:

(a) won 16 official tour championships, including the Masters, Memphis Open, Thunderbird Classic and Philadelphia Golf Classic this year.

(b) collected nearly $390,000 in official money (the other kind spends just as well, incidentally) to rank behind only four players in the modern era.

(c) won more than $160,000 in both '63 and '64 and has added up $114,000 this year with some of the richest prizes on the tour still to be claimed.

(d) became the youngest man ever to win the PGA, Open and Masters in a lifetime.

(e) won the first two "World Series of Golf" at Firestone Country Club in '62 and '63.

Nine years ago when Jack was 16, he won his first important title — the Ohio Open. Following his OSU career (where he won the NCAA golf championship), he announced on Nov. 8, 1961, that he was turning pro.

Shortly later he made an inauspicious debut at the '62 Los Angeles Open where he tied for 50th and collected the grand total of $33.33.

SINCE THEN, however, he's done a bit better — finishing in the money 28 consecutive times and 72 times out of his first 76 tournaments.

This year, Jack turned 25.

Young Jerry Melton of the Major League Tigers apparently has found a home on the pitching mound.

Jerry fired a no-hitter last week against the Yankees, 18-0, striking out 13 and disposing of the remaining batters in the five-inning game on ground outs.

STANDING 4-1 in the won-less column this summer, young Mr. Melton pitched only one inning before arriving in Whitehall from France where his dad was stationed.

Wide Adult Education Program Is Sponsored By Jewish Center

The Adult Education Program of the Columbus Jewish Center provides a variety of cultural, education and recreational programs for young adults through golden agers. Two basic program departments are supervised by Howard Banchefsky, the Center's program director.

Adult Activities Varied

The Adult Activities Department, directed by Armand Cohen, through its many committees, designs activities and programs to meet the continuing and expanding needs of the adult community. These help to enrich leisure time and provide skills with carry-over value into later life.

The Jewish Center lecture series seeks to provide an opportunity for individuals to obtain a rich and stimulating Jewish cultural experience through provocative and stimulating lectures and discussions by experts of national renown.

The Family Life Education series provides intensive study discussion groups giving parents an opportunity to obtain information about areas which are vital for healthy family life in a changing world.

The above three programs are scheduled during the year and are open to the entire community.

Adults, desiring to learn additional skills, may register in any one of the number of special skill courses offered at the Jewish Center. Such programs include bridge instruction, creative writing, gourmet cooking, Hebrew language instruction, rapid reading, woodworking and social dancing.

Program for Young Adults

Young adults and young married couples will find interesting and stimulating programs with people of their own age and interests in two of the many group programs offered at the Center. Young adults meet every Sunday evening in an informal group. Activities include bowling, swimming, dancing, game night, along with special programs of interest for the young adult.

The Young Married Group focuses its activities on interests and concerns of the young couple. Social activities are also planned for this group.

A new experience in Center programs is "Strictly for Women." This unique program is offered in the afternoon and is devoted to the examination of problems and concerns for women in the Columbus community.

The Adult Activities Department offers special event mass programs, in addition to its many classes, and continuing education programs. Such events include the observance of Jewish Book Month, Israeli Independence Day, adult dances, family camp and a Sunday evening couples' bowling league.

Golden Age Club, co-sponsored by the Jewish Center and the Council of Jewish Women, is directed by Mrs. Burton Schildhouse and Mrs. A. L. Greenspun. The club offers a variety of activities for men and women over 60. Activities include trips, daytime lounge, bowling, choral group, art, woodworking, discussion groups, bridge, canasta, knitting and handicrafts, English and public speaking.

Cultural Arts Department of the Jewish Center is directed by Harold Eisenstein. This department offers programs in the areas of drama, art, dance, music and special events. The Gallery Players is a group of Center members actively changing in all phases of theatre.

The Actors Lab offers a program of acting technique, group discussions, with outstanding drama figures of the Columbus area, as well as guest lecturers. Actors Lab puts on two productions a year.

Adult art classes are offered afternoons and evenings, as are ceramic classes. Each class is taught by a known and respected professional.

The Jewish Center orchestra is established for advanced musicians. This activity

Ohio Technical Institute Is Elected To National Council

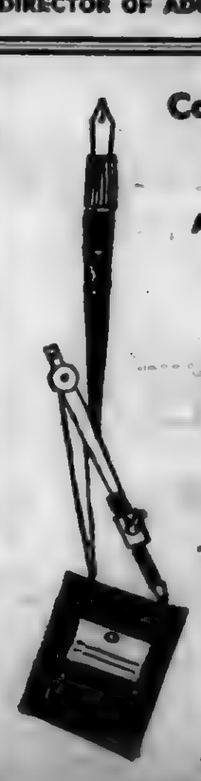
The Ohio Technical Institute, located at 886 Sunbury-rd, has been elected to membership in the National Council of Technical Institutes, Raymond M. Watson, registrar, announced recently.

The council was founded in 1944, with its primary objective being the promotion of sound education standards among private resident schools in the technical institute field.

Compliance with the council's code of minimum standards is determined by both written reports as well as a personal inspection of the school concerned, Watson said. Only well established technical institutes, offering training of a technical nature and in the realm of higher education, can be considered for membership.

Approved courses, in addition to meeting the other requirements set forth in the code, must contain at least 64 semester hours, or equivalent of classroom and laboratory work.

Founded in 1952 by its president, Samuel L. Oppenheimer, Ohio Technical Institute is a school devoted to training in engineering technology.



Ohio Tech offers day and evening courses in electronics, construction and civil engineering technology. Its faculty and graduates are recognized by the community, technical societies, educational and industrial leaders as highly competent in the fields of engineering technology, Watson said.

Board Hears Recommendations Of Civil Rights Council

Improvement of racial balance in the city schools was termed an urgency by Columbus Civil Rights Council in a set of recommendations made to the school board Tuesday.

The suggestions were drafted as the result of the Conference on Racial Balance in Schools held in May, and attended by representatives of the council's 53 member organizations, school superintendent, Dr. Harold Eibling and his administrative staff.

The board was asked, in a paper represented by Russell M. Jones, executive director of the Civil Rights Council, to consider:

• By the fall of 1966 some schools be "paired" to effect racial balance by assigning kindergarten through third grade students to a school in a predominantly Negro district, while pupils from both districts in grade four through six would attend the other school in the "pair," located in a white neighborhood. . .

(This plan, put into effect in New York City last fall, met with considerable resentment from parents although, according to the council's report, the school staff's favor the program for a better racial balance.)

• The board should immediately appoint a citizens advisory committee on racial balance.

• The board should adopt a clear policy of commitment to racial balance in schools.

• And the board should undertake a continuing program to inform the public of the effects of racial imbalance and of the values of integrated education.

(Jones placed the responsibility of "educating" the public to avoid the resentment demonstrated by New York City parents, on the school board.)

Attending the session, although he did not comment on the matter, was E. Harold Klingel of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission.

Julio Suarez of the Franklin County Anti-Communism Study Group was present and protested any plan that would change the neighborhood school district concept.

In a paper distributed to school administrators, board members, council members and the press, the issue of improving racial balance in schools was termed the "very heart of the civil rights problem . . . in northern communities."

The issue was cited as the focus of civil rights action this summer in Chicago, where the superintendent of schools was charged by civil rightists for doing nothing to correct de facto segregation, and as the cause of unrest in Cleveland.

Corrective steps being considered by the Massachusetts legislature and those being undertaken in New York City, and court litigation on the matter were all called "indication of the seriousness . . . and the urgency."

Twyford Rejects Young's City Tax Opinions

"Trivial [illegible] with the statues have been overlooked where the purpose of the ballot enabled the voters to clearly reflect their choice of candidates. They will not indulge such liberality of construction of ballots containing unauthorized statements or misrepresentations where bond issues or tax levies are the subject of the ballot. question revolves on the right of the electorate to preempt council action in specific areas. As an example, he cited the part of the City Charter (Section 45) which says: "Ordinance rejected or repealed by an electoral vote shall not be re-enacted, in whole or in part, except by a vote of the people."

Twyford maintains that the same right prevails when the voters exercise their referendum right to repeal or approve a council ordinance, as was the case with the original council income tax ordinance.

"You can't give the people this right in one paragraph, and then take it away from them in the next," Twyford concluded.

He quoted a 1950 Ohio Supreme Court ruling which invalidated a Dayton income tax ordinance, and said in part: "We are of the opinion that [illegible] court should construe strictly the Charter powers conferred upon a municipality to [illegible] taxes. In other words, where the authority of the municipality is ambiguous it is [illegible] duty to construe it strictly against the taxing authorities and in favor of the taxpayers."

Cap Extends Day Program To Absorb Enrollment

In an attempt to better utilize classroom facilities for its bulging enrollment, Capital University administrators have approved an extended day program.

Effective this fall, full-time students at Capital will be attending classes from 8 a.m. through 8:30 p.m. In previous years, the day students were out of the classrooms by 4 p.m.

In setting up the extended day program, Capital eliminated the evening school. However, those students who would normally take advantage of the evening school will be invited to enroll in the late afternoon and evening class of the extended day school program.

The extended day school program will affect the past evening program in that there will be less concentration on professional courses in favor of the regular liberal arts courses. An extended day program will also assure scheduled course offerings in the evening. In the evening school program, courses were offered only if enough part-time students enrolled.

Capital operates on a semester program and all courses offered in the extended day program are for undergraduate credit. No graduate courses are offered at Capital.

Although regular full-time Capital students will be enrolled in the late afternoon and evening courses, they will be aimed primarily at the part - time students. Courses scheduled the first semester include freshman English, speech, history, mathematical concepts, political science survey, religion courses, beginning German, history of American art, English literature, music appreciation and art appreciation. Education courses will include kindergarten curriculum, elementary school management and a physical education course in personal and community health.

Registration for part-time students is scheduled for Aug. 30 and 31, Sept. 1 and 2 and Sept. 7 and 13. The fall semester starts on Sept. 14. Further information on the extended day program for part-time students may be obtained from the Office of Registrar, Capital University.

CAPITAL UNIVERSITY opens its doors this fall to over 1,600 full-time students. The part-time enrollment is uncertain at this time, school officials say, due to the change in program and curriculum. Last year, the evening school drew 1,100 students.

Springs To Offer Adult Programs

The College of St. Mary of the Springs extends an opportunity for adults of the community to pursue college courses in an expanded evening program for 1965-1966.

These fully accredited courses are transferable to a degree program being pursued at another college, or adults may seek admission for degree candidacy at the College of St. Mary of the Springs.

Classes are open to high school graduates who are seeking degrees or teacher certification, as well as those interested in personal intellectual development.

Evening classes begin at 3:35 and continue until 9:30 p.m. It is possible to carry from three credit hours to a full college schedule in this program, depending on a student's outside commitments.

Courses will be offered in the following areas: business administration, education, English, the fine arts, German, history, library science, mathematics, philosophy, political science, psychology, Russian, sciences, sociology, Spanish and theology.

Nicklaus Joins Firestone Golf Field; Brinks 'Alerted'

The American Golf Classic people, eager to promote their dripping rich go-around ($100,000) in Akron Aug. 23-29 pass along this information on Jack Nicklaus, who has officially agreed to tramp around the Firestone layout later this month:

Since joining the tour in 1962, Jack has:

(a) won 16 official tour championships, including the Masters, Memphis Open, Thunderbird Classic and Philadelphia Golf Classic this year.

(b) collected nearly $390,000 in official money (the other kind spends just as well, incidentally) to rank behind only four players in the modern era.

(c) won more than $100,000 in both '63 and '64 and has added up $114,000 this year with some of the richest prizes on the tour still to be claimed.

(d) became the youngest man ever to win the PGA, Open and Masters in a lifetime.

(e) won the first two "World Series of Golf" at Firestone Country Club in '62 and '63.

Nine years ago when Jack was 16, he won his first important title — the Ohio Open. Following his OSU career (where he won the NCAA golf championship), he announced on Nov. 8, 1961, that he was turning pro.

Shortly later he made an inauspicious debut at the '62 Los Angeles Open where he tied for 50th and collected the grand total of $33.33.

SINCE THEN, however, he's done a bit better — finishing in the money 26 consecutive times and 72 times out of his first 76 tournaments.

This year, Jack turned 25. Makes you wonder what's in store the next quarter century, doesn't it?

Sun Finance Has Cost-Free Loans

Was Among Early Sponsors Of Adult Education Program

William Chrissos, manager of the Sun Finance & Loan Co., 78 E. Gay-st, revealed that his firm was one of the early sponsors of the now-rapidly expanding Adult Education Program.

"Sun Finance established an Adult Education Loan Fund about 10 years ago," he said.

The "cost-free" educational loans are exactly that, according to Chrissos. "There is no interest, no service charge of any kind, and the loans are available to qualified employed adults who are 21 years of age or older."

The loans are arranged through accredited colleges and universities throughout Ohio.

Founded in 1930 in Cleveland, Sun Finance has 68 Midwest offices with 27 located in Ohio. President of the corporation is Jack Lampl, Jr., recent past-president of the American Finance Conference which represents 1100 offices in the U.S. Lampl presently serves on the board of trustees of that organization.

Sun Finance's first office in Columbus was established in May, 1952. At present there are three convenient locations: 4601 N. High-st, 4423 E. Main-st in Whitehall and the downtown office at 78 E. Gay-st.

"The success of our company," Chrissos said, "is bas-

FAMILY PLANNING EDUCATION
Family planning is no longer a controversial subject. Every major religion agrees on at least one method of family planning. We urge young couples to come in for counseling before starting their families. Child spacing leads to healthier, happier families. No one is ever denied the best methods available because of inability to pay. Trained nurses are available for consultation. Phone for appointment or see your family physician.

Welfare Finance Expands

Welfare Finance Corporation, after 12 years at its present location at 207 S. High-st, is moving to new and expanded headquarters at 167 N. High-st, according to an announcement this week by James Davis, manager.

Davis said the move to larger quarters was necessary to service an ever-increasing number of accounts.

Davis

"Welfare Finance is constantly striving to improve its physical facilities in order to provide more modern and efficient service," he said. "We recognize that commercial business must maintain an attractive, businesslike appearance.

"Here are our aims in the improvement program:

"1. To grow with our cities.

"2. To foster the 'face' of Welfare Finance in a proud manner.

"3. Continually strive to maintain a place of business that makes our customers feel welcome and comfortable."

Welfare Finance Corporation, incorporated on Jan. 23, 1919, is now in its 46th year of personal financing.

"Over this period," Davis said, "the corporation has, and is, serving hundreds of thousands of people, enabling them to improve their standard of living and to meet financial obligations of almost any nature. This provides not only actual justification of business existence, but is a source of personal satisfaction to all in the corporation, knowing it provides direct benefit to our neighbors and business

Board Hears Recommendations Of Civil Rights Council

Improvement of racial balance in the city schools was termed an urgency by Columbus Civil Rights Council in a set of recommendations made to the school board Tuesday.

School Board President Paul Langdon referred the proposals to the professional staff for study.

The suggestions were drafted as the result of the Conference on Racial Balance in Schools held in May, and attended by representatives of the council's 53 member organizations, school superintendent, Dr. Harold Ebling and his administrative staff.

The board was asked, in a paper represented by Russell M. Jones, executive director of the Civil Rights Council, to consider:

• By the fall of 1966 some schools be "paired" to effect racial balance by assigning kindergarten through third grade students to a school in a predominantly Negro district, while pupils from both districts in grade four through six would attend the other school in the "pair," located in a white neighborhood.

(This plan, put into effect in New York City last fall, met with considerable resentment from parents although, according to the council's report, the school staff's favor the program for a better racial balance.)

• The board should immediately appoint a citizens advisory committee on racial balance.

• The board should adopt a clear policy of commitment to racial balance in schools.

• And the board should undertake a continuing program to inform the public of the effects of racial imbalance and of the values of integrated education.

(Jones paired the responsibility of "educating" the public to avoid the resentment demonstrated by New York City parents, on the school board.)

Attending the session, although he did not comment on the matter, was E. Harold Klingel of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission.

Julio Suarez of the Franklin County Anti-Communism Study Group was present and protested any plan that would change the neighborhood school district concept.

In a paper distributed to school administrators, board members, council members and the press, the issue of improving racial balance in schools was termed the "very heart of the civil rights problem . . . in northern communities."

The issue was cited as the focus of civil rights action this summer in Chicago, where the superintendent of schools was charged by civil rightists for doing nothing to correct de facto segregation, and as the cause of unrest in Cleveland.

Corrective steps being considered by the Massachusetts legislature and those being undertaken in New York City, and court litigation on the matter were all called "indication of the seriousness . . . and the urgency."

Twyford Rejects Young's City Tax Opinions

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford is sticking to his charge that Columbus is collecting an income tax without that council had the ht to increase the tax with- a vote of the people."

Twyford claimed support of Ohio Supreme Court for contention that any ques- of City Charter intent in matters must be weighed favor of the taxpayer ther than the legislative inch of government.

He quoted a 1950 Ohio Supreme Court ruling which indicated a Dayton income tax ordinance, and said in part: "We are of the opinion that court should construe strictly the Charter powers conferred upon a municipality to taxes. In other words, ere the authority of the unicipality is ambiguous it is duty to construe it rictly against the taxing authorities and in favor of the xpayers."

And in denying Young's ntention that the 1956 tax nitation issue gave council uthority for increase in the x to one percent, Twyford cited the following passage from a 1955 Ohio Supreme Court ruling:

"Trivial nonconformances with the statues have been overlooked where the purpose of the ballot enabled the voters to clearly reflect their choice of candidates. They will not indulge such liberality of construction of ballots containing unauthorized statements or misrepresentations where bond issues or tax levies are the subject of the ballot. In the latter instance the form of the ballot and all procedural steps are conditions precedent to the validity of the election. The failure to attend the submission of the issue with such procedure is fatal."

Twyford said the whole question revolves on the right of the electorate to preempt council action in specific areas. As an example, he cited the part of the City Charter (Section 45) which says: "Ordinance rejected or repealed by an electoral vote shall not be re-enacted, in whole or in part, except by a vote of the people."

Twyford maintains that the same right prevails when the voters exercise their referendum right to repeal or approve a council ordinance, as was the case with the original council income tax ordinance.

"You can't give the people this right in one paragraph, and then take it away from them in the next," Twyford concluded.

Doors Of Education Are Open

By Samuel D. Stellman President, Adult Education Council, Greater Columbus

Suddenly you are an adult! And you don't have the education you really need to be a part of today's adult world. What can you do?

The doors of education are open — whether you need education to read or write or if you need a high school education, or if you need vocational training to get a better job; even if you want to get a Ph.D. — Metropolitan Columbus can take care of your need. Just look around, you are completely surrounded by a bright future if you just take advantage of the adult education opportunities around you.

In fact, you really can't afford to be left out. The Adult Education Council of Greater Columbus urges you to be a part of today's world by joining a course, a class, a discussion group, a Great Books Club, a rapid reading course, or one of the thousands of opportunities in the Greater Columbus area.

While colleges and universities continue to bulge with students who overcrowd their classrooms and overtax their facilities, millions of Americans are at the lowest end of the education scale — they can't read or write enough to fill out an employment application form or read a newspaper.

But the opportunities are here today for all to become a part of the mainstream of our society and of our country. Adult education provides those opportunities.

Adult Education has to be the answer for improving the lot of all Americans no matter how much schooling they have had up to date.

Up to the present the term "drop out" has been applied only to high school dropouts, however, great numbers of adults have realized that their early dropping out has affected their enjoyment of life. They can't improve themselves on the job; they can't discuss world problems because they are unable to read and absorb what they read; they feel left out when they meet people with more education.

What is surprising is that more people don't take advantage of the extensive opportunities which Metropolitan Columbus offers through any number of courses and classes for adults — they are easily found and readily available.

Nicklaus Joins Firestone Golf Field; Brinks 'Alerted'

The American Golf Classic people, eager to promote their dripping rich go-around ($100,000) in Akron Aug. 23-29 pass along this information on Jack Nicklaus, who has officially agreed to tramp around the Firestone layout later this month:

Since joining the tour in 1962, Jack has:

(a) won 16 official tour championships, including the Masters, Memphis Open, Thunderbird Classic and Philadelphia Golf Classic this year.

(b) collected nearly $390,000 in official money (the other kind spends just as well, incidentally) to rank behind only four players in the modern era.

(c) won more than $160,000 in both '63 and '64 and has added up $114,000 this year with some of the richest prizes on the tour still to be claimed.

(d) became the youngest man ever to win the PGA, Open and Masters in a lifetime.

(e) won the first two "World Series of Golf" at Firestone Country Club in '62 and '63.

Nine years ago when Jack was 16, he won his first important title — the Ohio Open. Following his OSU career (where he won the NCAA golf championship), he announced on Nov. 8, 1961, that he was turning pro.

Shortly later he made an inauspicious debut at the '62 Los Angeles Open where he tied for 50th and collected the grand total of $33.33.

SINCE THEN, however, he's done a bit better — finishing in the money 26 consecutive times and 72 times out of his first 76 tournaments.

This year, Jack turned 25.

Young Jerry Melton of the Major League Tigers apparently has found a home on the pitching mound.

Jerry fired a no-hitter last week against the Yankees, 18-0, striking out 13 and disposing of the remaining batters in the five-inning game on ground outs.

STANDING 4-1 in the wonless column this summer, young Mr. Melton pitched only one inning before arriving in Whitehall from France where his dad was stationed.

It's not too hard to figure out why the Red Sox are on top in the Minor League (14-1). Check out their pitching staff — Phil Harris (no earned runs in 39 innings), Richie Cochrane (six earned runs in 28½ frames), Bruce Phillips (one earned run in five innings) and Tim Smith (four earned runs in 4½ innings).

Academic, Trade, Leisure Classes Scheduled By Whitehall's Schools

Courses offered in the Whitehall City Schools' Adult Education Program are based upon the desires and needs of the people in Whitehall and the surrounding areas, according to William W. Shipe, director of adult education.

Fees established for courses are the same for all enrollees regardless of residence and are based on the fact that 15 students make up a good class size and should thus support the salary of the teacher involved. Fees are payable at the time of registration.

Diploma Program

Each year many adults receive their diplomas from the Whitehall program and, to some, this means almost immediate advancement on their jobs.

Special courses are offered for industrial plants and other groups as their desires are made known to the Whitehall City Schools.

Typical of such classes are: an electrical course for a large railroad, a water treatment course for municipalities in Central Ohio, a tool design course for a large industry, a course in blueprint reading and elementary machine shop, and public relations, salesmanship, human relations and other similarly specialized courses.

Regular Courses

Regular offerings include such courses for credit as American government, American History, English, algebra, mathematics for business, English for business, physical science, office machine operation, typing (both elementary and advanced), Gregg shorthand (both elementary and advanced) and bookkeeping.

Credit courses run 17 weeks and meet twice a week for one hour and 45 minutes. Tuition cost is $15 for each credit course.

Other courses offered are French, Spanish, woodworking, basic drafting, dressmaking and sewing (both elementary and advanced), floral design (both elementary and advanced), interior design, knitting, ceramics, painting and drawing, cake decorating, sculpturing, dancing (both elementary and advanced), slimnastics for women and elementary and advanced bridge.

Announces New Adult Course In Electronic Organ Playing

According to recently-released figures from the American Music Conference there are presently more adults playing the electronic home organ than at any other time in history. Over 60 percent of these adults are beginners with no previous musical background and the total of persons over 30 years of age far exceeds all other age brackets, the survey showed.

Coyle Music Centers announce that they will now have available a revolutionary course of study designed by professional organists for the adult player. This new course, available only at Coyle Music in Central Ohio, will be included with the purchase of every new organ purchased in any of their stores.

It includes over 100 arrangements in sheet music form, over 50 memory cards, manual keyboard guides and pedal markers.

Coyle says this spectacular course of study will be demonstrated at the Franklin County Fair, the Westerville Fair and the Ohio State Fair in the Coyle exhibition booths. Mr. Coyle, who is well-known in the greater Columbus area as a music educator, advises that now anyone interested in playing the organ is assured of success with this new course of study.

Board Hears Recommendations Of Civil Rights Council

Improvement of racial balance in the city schools was termed an urgency by Columbus Civil Rights Council in a set of recommendations made to the school board Tuesday.

School Board President Paul Langdon referred the proposals to the professional staff for study.

The suggestions were drafted as the result of the Conference on Racial Balance in Schools held in May, and attended by representatives of the council's 53 member organizations, school superintendent, Dr. Harold Eibling and his administrative staff.

The board was asked, in a paper represented by Russell M. Jones, executive director of the Civil Rights Council, to consider:

• By the fall of 1966 some schools be "paired" to effect racial balance by assigning kindergarten through third grade students to a school in a predominantly Negro district, while pupils from both districts in grade four through six would attend the other school in the "pair," located in a white neighborhood.

(This plan, put into effect in New York City last fall, met with considerable resentment from parents although, according to the council's report, the school staff's favor the program for a better racial balance.)

• The board should immediately appoint a citizens advisory committee on racial balance.

• The board should adopt a clear policy of commitment to racial balance in schools.

• And the board should undertake a continuing program to inform the public of the effects of racial imbalance and of the values of integrated education.

(Jones placed the responsibility of "educating" the public to avoid the resentment demonstrated by New York City parents, on the school board.)

Attending the session, although he did not comment on the matter, was E. Harold Klingel of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission.

Julio Suarez of the Franklin County Anti-Communism Study Group was present and protested any plan that would change the neighborhood school district concept.

In a paper distributed to school administrators, board members, council members and the press, the issue of improving racial balance in schools was termed the "very heart of the civil rights problem . . . in northern communities."

The issue was cited as the focus of civil rights action this summer in Chicago, where the superintendent of schools was charged by civil rightists for doing nothing to correct de facto segregation, and as the cause of unrest in Cleveland.

Corrective steps being considered by the Massachusetts legislature and those being undertaken in New York City, and court litigation on the matter were all called "indication of the seriousness . . . and the urgency."

Twyford Rejects Young's City Tax Opinions

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford is sticking to his charge that Columbus is collecting an income tax without cited the following passage from a 1955 Ohio Supreme Court ruling:

George W. Twyford

"Trivial nonconformances with the statues have been overlooked where the purpose of the ballot enabled the voters to clearly reflect their choice of candidates. They will not indulge such liberality of construction of ballots containing unauthorized statements or misrepresentations where bond issues or tax levies are the subject of the ballot. In the latter instance the form of the ballot and all procedural steps are conditions precedent to the validity of the election. The failure to attend the submission of the issue with such procedure is fatal."

Twyford said the whole question revolves on the right of the electorate to preempt council action in specific areas. As an example, he cited the part of the City Charter (Section 45) which says: "Ordinance rejected or repealed by an electoral vote shall not be re-enacted, in whole or in part, except by a vote of the people."

Twyford maintains that the same right prevails when the voters exercise their referendum right to repeal or approve a council ordinance, as was the case with the original council income tax ordinance.

"You can't give the people this right in one paragraph, and then take it away from them in the next," Twyford concluded.

Central 'Y' Opens Door To Physical Fitness, Creative Living

The 110-year-old Central YMCA at 40 W. Long-st offers adults of all races and creeds many opportunities for self improvement through its Informal Adult Evening School, athletic programs, physical fitness programs, men's and family camping program and other social activities. Thousands of Columbus men have found that the YMCA offers a pleasant and effective way to get and keep in trim.

In the days of the old Third Street YMCA, the organization pioneered physical fitness of business men by having them run around the State House Square. Now, the Central YMCA boasts of one of the few indoor running tracks for its members.

The pool is used for social family groups, swimming events and water safety courses.

Beginning the first of September, handball enthusiasts will have three additional courts, making a total of six available. Adequate spectator space has been provided in the galleries on all three new courts, and in addition facilities for televising games have been made in one court.

Remodeling of the Weight and Exercise area on the 5th floor is currently in progress with several items of new equipment being installed including an Olympic 555 lb. York Isotonic Isometric Power Rack plus other weight-lifting equipment.

College - trained specialists map programs to fit individual needs. Every step . . . every minute of progress is fun!

Y members feel good, all the way through, when they join in any of a dozen or more sports and recreational activities. An exciting game of volleyball or a lively swim builds a glow of health. And it is genuine good health—the kind that will stand by you when the going gets tough. Exercise puts vital organs to work — something they don't do when you are bound to a desk all day, and flop in an easy chair all evening. And through sports and games the members make new friends and develop new interests while getting in shape.

The athletic facilities at the Y are among the best in the nation and the activities include swimming and skin diving, basketball, volleyball, handball, squash, paddle rackets, badminton, gymnastics, trampoline, judo, wrestling, weight lifting, fitness classes, track, sun bathing, health services and camping.

In the Informal Adult Education program, classes and activities are offered in season. The courses cover a wide range of creative and stimulating topics including crafts, languages, hobbies, social skills, religion and personal finance.

This is the 43rd consecutive term of classes that meet the "Y" motto of "Night Life That Pays Dividends." We are constantly on the lookout for new, unique, interesting classes that you might like to take.

Some recent classes that have met this criteria are: Guitar, Geology of Ohio, Italian and Knitting. The whole thing revolves around what you like to do.

Social activities and clubs, which offer fellowship, fun and recreation include dancing, bridge, chess, hiking and youth hosteling.

All of the above activities and facilities have been

Nicklaus Joins Firestone Golf Field; Brinks 'Alerted'

The American Golf Classic people, eager to promote their dripping rich go-around ($100,000) in Akron Aug. 23-29 pass along this information on Jack Nicklaus, who has officially agreed to tramp around the Firestone layout later this month:

Since joining the tour in 1962, Jack has:

(a) won 16 official tour championships, including the Masters, Memphis Open, Thunderbird Classic and Philadelphia Golf Classic this year.

(b) collected nearly $390,000 in official money (the other kind spends just as well, incidentally) to rank behind only four players in the modern era.

(c) won more than $100,000 in both '63 and '64 and has added up $114,000 this year with some of the richest prizes on the tour still to be claimed.

(d) became the youngest man ever to win the PGA, Open and Masters in a lifetime.

(e) won the first two "World Series of Golf" at Firestone Country Club in '62 and '63.

Nine years ago when Jack was 16, he won his first important title — the Ohio Open. Following his OSU career (where he won the NCAA golf championship), he announced on Nov. 8, 1961, that he was turning pro.

Shortly later he made an inauspicious debut at the '62 Los Angeles Open where he tied for 50th and collected the grand total of $33.33.

SINCE THEN, however, he's done a bit better — finishing in the money 28 consecutive times and 72 times out of his first 76 tournaments.

This year, Jack turned 25.

Young Jerry Melton of the Major League Tigers apparently has found a home on the pitching mound.

Jerry fired a no-hitter last week against the Yankees, 18-0, striking out 13 and disposing of the remaining batters in the five-inning game on ground outs.

STANDING 4-1 in the wonless column this summer, young Mr. Melton pitched only one inning before arriving in Whitehall from France where his dad was stationed.

It's not too hard to figure out why the Red Sox are on top in the Minor League (14-1). Franklin University Now Independent

Begins 64th Year With High Enrollment; Flexible Curricula Offered Youths, Adults

Franklin University begins its 64th year of serving youth and adults in September. The university became an independent institution of higher education when it was separated from the Columbus YMCA in January, 1965. Franklin will continue as a downtown community university and remain in its present location in the Central YMCA during the near future.

Fifteen prominent local business and professional men make up the board of trustees which determines the university's policies. Richard A. Borel, president of WBNS, is chairman, Dr. B. D. Thomas, president of Battelle Memorial Institute, is vice-chairman of the board of trustees. Dr. Joseph F. Frasch, who has been director for 14 years, was named president of Franklin University in January.

Offers Wide Curriculum

Franklin University is composed of a Law School, a General College and a Technical Institute. The faculty is composed of 20 full-time professors and approximately 80 part-time teachers.

In 1964 the university enrolled 2,278 students. Enrollment in September was 1,573. One-fourth of the students were girls and women. Ages of the students range from 17 to 47 years. The median age was approximately 26 years. Day students in general are younger than evening students. Enrollment, which has doubled in the last four years, is increasing rapidly. Expansion of the university's plant is being studied by the trustees.

Franklin University believes that its function is to help each of its students make the most of his talents. It tries to keep the personal element in education by offering small classes and by having deans, counselors and faculty remain available to students. The university has allowed students to pay tuition monthly since 1909. It notifies employers of the progress of students when requested by the students. A recent survey showed that many students receive financial help from their employers in the form of tuition refunds.

Maintains Open-Door Policy

Programs of study are kept up to date through research, use of advisory committees and consultation with industry and business. During the summer an eight-man team from Franklin visited the plants of 10 leading local manufacturers. Programs of studies, course content, needs and improvement were discussed with plant personnel.

The university maintains an open-door admission policy. High school graduates are admitted to the General College and Technical Institute. A bachelor's degree is required for admission to the Law School. In general students may enroll as full-time or part-time students. The university considers students who enroll for 12 semester hours of course work as full-time students. Full-time students have been deferred from the draft.

The university adopted the Trimester plan of operation in 1946. Three 15-week trimester compose the year. The fall trimester starts after Labor Day and is completed before Christmas. The spring trimester runs from January to April and the summer trimester runs from May to August.

Technical Institute Is Popular

The Technical Institute offers electronics engineering technology, engineering drawing and construction drawing technology in day and evening classes. Students may enroll for full or part-time programs of study.

Day classes are taught by a staff of six full-time professors. Two electrical engineers, two mechanical engineers, a mathematician and a drawing specialist make up the staff. Professors have had industrial experience in addition to being graduates of well known colleges. Evening classes are taught by part-time professors. These men are college graduates who are selected for their ability to teach and in view of pertinent experience in industry.

All programs are supervised by Dean Sidney J. Kelly, who has been dean for two years. He holds a B.S. in Engineering from Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, an M.S. in Engineering from Bucknell University. In addition to these professional engineering degrees he holds an M.S. in Education degree from Hofstra University. Dean Kelly is in process of completion of a doctor's degree at Columbia University.

In the day program class in each course meets every day. In the evening program, classes in each course meet one evening a week from 6 to 8:50. A student may carry as large an academic load as he and the dean determine is feasible for him. Day students usually attend full time. Some of them work part-time. In contrast, evening students work part-time and attend one or more evening courses. An active placement service aids students in locating desirable employment.

The associate of science degree is awarded for the successful completion of each curriculum. The university accepts this work as partial requirements for its Bachelor of Science degree. Courses are approved by the State Department of Education and the Veterans Administration.

General College Grows

The General College offers work in accounting, business administration, industrial management and secretarial studies. Dr. Joseph F. Frasch is dean of the college.

The day division was started in the fall of 1963. Growth has been rapid and 1965 enrollment will be around 250 students. The associate degree in business administration is awarded students who successfully complete the two-year program. Classes meet from 8 a.m. until 12 noon. Full-time staff augmented by some part-time specialists perform the teaching. Students may attend on a full-time or part-time basis. Twelve semester hours of academic work constitutes a full-time program.

Day students who take full-time jobs can transfer into the evening division. Most students attend the fall and spring trimesters, or they are in school from early September until the end of April. This early vacation date gives the students advantage in seeking summer employment.

The evening General College offers a full four-year degree program of studies. Successful completion of any one of these programs leads to the bachelor of science in business administration degree. Approximately 800 students are enrolled. Saturday morning classes were initiated in 1964.

Teaching, in general, is done by part-time professors. They are all college graduates and may have had teaching experience. These teachers are selected in view of their academic records and pertinent experience in business and industry. The goal is to have each course taught by a teacher who is qualified by academic preparation and successful experience in the area in which he teaches.

The suggestions were drafted as the result of the Conference on Racial Balance in Schools held in May, and attended by representatives of the council's 53 member organizations, school superintendent, Dr. Harold Eibling and his administrative staff.

The board was asked, in a paper represented by Russell M. Jones, executive director of the Civil Rights Council, to consider:

• By the fall of 1966 some schools be "paired" to effect racial balance by assigning kindergarten through third grade students to a school in a predominantly Negro district, while pupils from both districts in grade four through six would attend the other school in the "pair," located in a white neighborhood.

(This plan, put into effect in New York City last fall, met with considerable resentment from parents although, according to the council's report, the school staff's favor the program for a better racial balance.)

• The board should immediately appoint a citizens advisory committee on racial balance.

• The board should adopt a clear policy of commitment to racial balance in schools.

• And the board should undertake a continuing program to inform the public of the effects of racial imbalance and of the values of integrated education.

(Jones pared the responsibility of "educating" the public to avoid the resentment demonstrated by New York City parents, on the school board.)

Attending the session, although he did not comment on the matter, was E. Harold Klingel of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission.

Julio Suarez of the Franklin County Anti-Communism Study Group was present and protested any plan that would change the neighborhood school district concept.

In a paper distributed to school administrators, board members, council members and the press, the issue of improving racial balance in schools was termed the "very heart of the civil rights problem . . . in northern communities."

The issue was cited as the focus of civil rights action this summer in Chicago, where the superintendent of schools was charged by civil rightists for doing nothing to correct de facto segregation, and as the cause of unrest in Cleveland.

Corrective steps being considered by the Massachusetts legislature and those being undertaken in New York City, and court litigation on the matter were all called "indication of the seriousness . . . and the urgency."

Twyford Rejects Young's City Tax Opinions

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford is sticking to his charge that Columbus is collecting an income tax without legal authority to do so. And Twyford has added some support to his contention in the form of a 1955 Ohio Supreme Court ruling.

George W. Twyford

"Trivial nonconformances with the statues have been overlooked where the purpose of the ballot enabled the voters to clearly reflect their choice of candidates. They will not indulge such liberality of construction of ballots containing unauthorized statements or misrepresentations where bond issues or tax levies are the subject of the ballot. In the latter instance the form of the ballot and all procedural steps are conditions precedent to the validity of the election. The failure to attend the submission of the issue with such procedure is fatal."

Twyford said the whole question revolves on the right of the electorate to preempt council action in specific areas. As an example, he cited the part of the City Charter (Section 45) which says: "Ordinance rejected or repealed by an electoral vote shall not be re-enacted, in whole or in part, except by a vote of the people."

Twyford maintains that the same right prevails when the voters exercise their referendum right to repeal or approve a council ordinance, as was the case with the original council income tax ordinance.

"You can't give the people this right in one paragraph, and then take it away from them in the next," Twyford concluded.

Nicklaus Joins Firestone Golf Field; Brinks 'Alerted'

The American Golf Classic people, eager to promote their dripping rich go-around ($100,000) in Akron Aug. 23-29 pass along this information on Jack Nicklaus, who has officially agreed to tramp around the Firestone layout later this month:

Since joining the tour in 1962, Jack has:

(a) won 16 official tour championships, including the Masters, Memphis Open, Thunderbird Classic and Philadelphia Golf Classic this year.

(b) collected nearly $390,000 in official money (the other kind spends just as well, incidentally) to rank behind only four players in the modern era.

(c) won more than $166,000 in both '63 and '64 and has added up $114,000 this year with some of the richest prizes on the tour still to be claimed.

(d) became the youngest man ever to win the PGA, Open and Masters in a lifetime.

(e) won the first two "World Series of Golf" at Firestone Country Club in '62 and '63.

Nine years ago when Jack was 16, he won his first important title — the Ohio Open. Following his OSU career (where he won the NCAA golf championship), he announced on Nov. 8, 1961, that he was turning pro.

Shortly later he made an inauspicious debut at the '62 Los Angeles Open where he tied for 50th and collected the grand total of $33.33.

SINCE THEN, however, he's done a bit better — finishing in the money 28 consecutive times and 72 times out of his first 76 tournaments.

This year, Jack turned 25.

WHAT'S NEW IN THE WBB

Young Jerry Melton of the Major League Tigers apparently has found a home on the pitching mound.

Jerry fired a no-hitter last week against the Yankees, 18-0, striking out 13 and disposing of the remaining battes in the five-inning game on ground outs.

STANDING 4-1 in the won-less column this summer, young Mr. Melton pitched only one inning before arriving in Whitehall from France where his dad was stationed.

It's not too hard to figure out why the Red Sox are on top in the Minor League (14-1). Check out their pitching staff — Phil Harris (no earned runs in 39 innings), Richie Cochrane (six earned runs in 28½ frames), Bruce Phillips (one earned run in five innings) and Tim Smith (four earned runs in 4½ innings).

Ohio Tech Adds Special Classes

In order to increase Ohio Tech's service to the technical and scientific community of Central Ohio, the school is adding special courses to its evening school.

In addition to the regular evening school curricula in Electronics Engineering Technology and Construction and Civil Engineering Technology, the school will offer courses meant to upgrade technicians working in Central Ohio plus refresher courses in mathematics for engineers.

The school will also offer courses in electronics especially geared to those members of the scientific community that have had no formal education in electronics.

Typical courses meant to upgrade technicians are courses in mathematics (primarily review courses), courses in calculus, physics and nuclear instrumentation. There will also be courses in sophisticated circuit analysis.

A course of special interest for both engineers and technicians is the course in "Semiconductor Logic and Switching Circuits." This course will begin with Boolean Algebra and carry through into the design of switching and logic circuits, multivibrator circuits, tunnel diode switching, unijunction transistors, and silicon controlled rectifiers.

Degrees Offered

The Electronic Technology classes offered in the evening school meet two evenings each week. Many students obtain positions in the electronic industry after completing approximately one year of school. The associate in engineering degree can be obtained by successfully completing this program.

The Construction and Civil Engineering Program is also offered in the evening school, with students attending two evenings each week. We find that after completing only six months of this program, students are employed by contractors, architects, state highway department, county and city engineering divisions.

Day School Program

Ohio Tech offers a full time curriculum in Electronic Engineering Technology in the day school. This program is fully accredited by the Engineers Council for Professional Development. Graduates of this two-year program receive the Associate in Engineering Degree. These graduates are actively recruited by industries and research organizations from all over the nation.

In addition to its ECPD recognition, Ohio Tech is an institutional member of the Technical Institute Council of the American Society for Engineering Education. On June 19, 1965 the Ohio Technical Institute was unanimously elected to membership in the National Council of Technical Schools.

Ohio Technical Institute, located at 886 Sunbury-rd, is in its 14th year of operation. During these years the institute has provided an educational resource to both the local community and to the nation. Ohio Tech's graduates are employed locally by such companies as Bell Telephone Labs, Western Electric, North American Aviation, IBM, Exact Weight Scale Co., F. W. Bell and many others. On the national scale employers are Los Alamos Scientific Labs, Sandia Corp., Xerox, Honeywell, IBM and GE, just to name a few. OTI graduates are hired as field engineers, engineering associates and research associates.

City Schools To Expand Adult Education Courses

On July 6, 1965, adults were enrolled for the first time in a summer Adult Basic Education program in the Columbus Public Schools. The program is sponsored by the Columbus City School District through application to the Ohio State Department of Education. It was developed under the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964. The eight-week program will end on Aug. 27.

The Adult Basic Education program is in operation at two centers. The centers are located at Franklin Junior High School, 1390 Franklin-av, and Starling Junior High School, 120 S. Central-av. At present approximately 75 adults are taking advantage of this educational opportunity.

In each of the two centers, classes are held from 8 a.m. until noon. The educational program provides adults with opportunities in elementary education for mastering basic reading, writing, speaking, and computational skills.

Organized units of study are offered in citizenship, health practices, consumer knowledge, human relations, current events, and home and family living. Appropriate teaching aids, including films, radio and television, are used frequently as well as community services and resources.

The staff members of each center are teachers from the regular school faculties. One counselor is assigned to each center. Supervised child care service is available at each center. The entire program for the adults is free of charge.

The following staff members serve in the Adult Basic Education program: Counselors — J. E. Fugate and James Vicars; teachers — Richard Brown, Thomas Moore, Leroy Willis, Albert Cherry, Thomas Barton and James Mahaffey.

During the 1965-66 school year it is anticipated that the program will be expanded to other centers and will be held during the evening hours.

The Adult Basic Education program is under the direction of the Division of Special Services.

Board Hears Recommendations Of Civil Rights Council

Improvement of racial balance in the city schools was termed an urgency by Columbus Civil Rights Council in a set of recommendations made to the school board Tuesday.

School Board President Paul Langdon referred the proposals to the professional staff for study.

The suggestions were drafted as the result of the Conference on Racial Balance in Schools held in May, and attended by representatives of the council's 53 member organizations, school superintendent, Dr. Harold Eibling and his administrative staff.

The board was asked, in a paper represented by Russell M. Jones, executive director of the Civil Rights Council, to consider:

(This plan, put into effect in New York City last fall, met with considerable resentment from parents although, according to the council's report, the school staffs favor the program for a better racial balance.)

• The board should immediately appoint a citizens advisory committee on racial balance.

• The board should adopt a clear policy of commitment to racial balance in schools.

• And the board should undertake a continuing program to inform the public of the effects of racial imbalance and of the values of integrated education.

(Jones placed the responsibility of "educating" the public to avoid the resentment demonstrated by New York City parents, on the school board.)

Attending the session, although he did not comment on the matter, was E. Harold Klingel of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission.

Julio Suarez of the Franklin County Anti-Communism Study Group was present and protested any plan that would change the neighborhood school district concept.

Twyford Rejects Young's City Tax Opinions

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford is sticking to his charge that Columbus is collecting an income tax without legal authority to do so. And Twyford has added some support to his contention by citing a 1955 Ohio Supreme Court ruling.

George W. Twyford

"Trivial nonconformances with the statues have been overlooked where the purpose of the ballot enabled the voters to clearly reflect their choice of candidates. Twyford claimed support of Ohio Supreme Court for contention that any ques- n of City Charter intent in matters must be weighed favor of the taxpayer ther than the legislative anch of government.

He quoted a 1950 Ohio Supreme Court ruling which invalidated a Dayton income tax ordinance, and said in part:

"We are of the opinion that court should construe strictly the Charter powers conferred upon a municipality to levy taxes. In other words, where the authority of the municipality is ambiguous it is our duty to construe it strictly against the taxing authorities and in favor of the taxpayers."

And in denying Young's contention that the 1956 tax limitation issue gave council authority for increase in the tax to one percent, Twyford

Something New In Job Placement . . .

By CHARLES McDERMOTT
Spectator Business Editor

In June, 1965, a new organization opened its doors on the eighth floor of the new 88 East Broad Street building and introduced a new employee-employer placement system in Columbus.

The firm, new on the local scene but established in 1902 by Charles O'Sha in Chicago, is the Business Men's Clearing House.

In less than two months BMCH's policy has attracted wide interest in business and industry in the Greater Columbus area, and job hunters on the scene when we photographed a typical operation appeared a little amazed at the speed and efficiency — and success — of its modern methods.

What Business Men's Clearing House has done is to set up a highly-specialized clearing center for TWO clients — the employer, and the prospective employe.

On our tour of the operation we counted 84 clients — 20 representatives of industry and 64 job applicants. In one consultation booth, for example, a field representative of a well-known national manufacturer was talking with another BMCH client, a production scheduler whom the agency had previously interviewed.

Waiting to be called were two more similarly skilled clients. When the first production scheduler finished his interview, he was called to another booth to be interviewed by a second manufacturer seeking his skill.

This, in substance is the system employed by Business Men's Clearing House. Applicants are screened, job offerings are analyzed by highly proficient experts. Then, at a give time, all the skills available on the local market are presented to the several clients seeking these skills. Thus, a maximum effort is reduced to a minimum of time.

Werner Vogel, manager of the local Business Men's Clearing House, said industry and business in general are highly appreciative of the time and cost-saving aspects of their system. He said it has resulted in a high ratio of permanent, maximum-level placements.

Vogel said Columbus was selected as an ideal locale for a major employment service which dedicates its efforts toward the professionalism needed to service both clients — employer and employe — with equal courtesy and intelligence.

He said extensive market research of Columbus-based industry, the labor market and expansion potentials of the area led to their selection of this city for their newest office.

Business Men's Clearing House is a division of General Employment Enterprise which has operations in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. President of General Employment Enterprise is Herbert Imhoff.

ADVANCE BUSINESS CENTER

Offers Chance For Specialization

Since the coming of automation, the specialist has become king, as everyone today is aware.

But the puzzling question is — how does one become a specialist?

Schools, special study clinics, various programs of the multiplex Adult Education Program answer the question in many ways.

And one answer is supplied by ABC, which in longer form is the Advance Business Center Inc., located at 516 Hutton-pl.

ABC's president, Richard Mancini, grew up with automation in the business world and advanced to teaching teachers about IBM computers.

In establishing ABC as a teaching center, he has concentrated on an individual, personalized regimen of training.

"In today's society of advancing automation," he said, "the average person will be forced to cultivate new interests and chart paths to higher goals through specialized training."

Specialized training at ABC has been geared to this philosophy, Mancini said.

"Here at Advance Business Center, it is our purpose to train men and women for skilled work in the area of IBM computers, accounting and systems automation, secretarial, stenographic and key-punch advance systems."

ABC features a "Learn and Earn" program for qualified students and provides a temporary employment service and a resume service. It offers flexible training hours to meet the student's individual requirements. The student body at ABC ranges in age from 17 to 50.

"Many come here for reorientation in latest advancements in the computer field," Mancini said.

measure, and sources of "loud and unnecessary noise" range from radios and televisions to motor bikes.

The two proposed charter amendments would, if approved:

• Give council the authority to appoint one of its own members or even any qualified elector of the city to the post of interim mayor, providing council president could not assume duties of the office in the event it would become vacant. In its present form the charter provides that only the president of council could serve as mayor.

• Give council the authority to remove the duties of safety and service director from the office of the mayor, should it become necessary in its selection of someone to fill the mayor's office until the next general election.

Presently the charter provides that these duties must be performed by the mayor.

Nicklaus Joins Firestone Golf Field; Brinks 'Alerted'

The American Golf Classic people, eager to promote their dripping rich go-a r o u'n d ($100,000) in Akron Aug. 23-29 pass along this information on Jack Nicklaus, who has officially a g r e e d to tramp around the Firestone layout later this month:

Since joining the tour in 1962, Jack has:

(a) won 16 official tour championships, including the Masters, M e m p h i s Open, Thunderbird C l a s s i c and Philadelphia Golf Classic this year.

(b) collected nearly $390,000 in official money (the other kind spends just as well, incidentally) to rank behind only four players in the modern era.

(c) won more than $100,000 in both '63 and '64 and has added up $114,000 this year with some of the richest prizes on the tour still to be claimed.

(d) became the youngest man ever to win the PGA, Open and Masters in a lifetime.

(e) won the f i r s t two "World Series of Golf" at Firestone Country Club in '62 and '63.

Nine years ago when Jack was 16, he won his first important title — the Ohio Open. F o l l o w i n g his OSU career (where he won the NCAA golf championship), he announced on Nov. 8, 1961, that he was turning pro.

Shortly later he made an inauspicious debut at the '62 Los Angeles Open where he tied for 50th and collected the grand total of $38.33.

SINCE THEN, however, he's done a bit better — finishing in the money 28 consecutive times and 72 times out of his first 76 tournaments.

This year, Jack turned 25.

Young Jerry Melton of the Major League Tigers apparently has found a home on the pitching mound.

Jerry fired a no-hitter last week against the Yankees, 18-0, striking out 13 and disposing of the remaining batters in the five-inning game on ground outs.

STANDING 4-1 in the wonless column this summer, young Mr. Melton pitched only one inning before arriving in Whitehall from France where his dad was stationed.

Board Hears Recommendations Of Civil Rights Council

Improvement of racial balance in the city schools was termed an urgency by Columbus Civil Rights Council in a set of recommendations made to the school board Tuesday.

School Board President Paul Langdon referred the proposals to the professional staff for study.

The suggestions were drafted as the result of the Conference on Racial Balance in Schools held in May, and attended by representatives of the council's 53 member organizations, school superintendent, Dr. Harold Eibling and his administrative staff.

The board was asked, in a paper represented by Russell M. Jones, executive director of the Civil Rights Council, to consider:

• By the fall of 1966 some schools be "paired" to effect racial balance by assigning kindergarten through third grade students to a school in a predominantly Negro district, while pupils from both districts in grade four through six would attend the other school in the "pair," located in a white neighborhood.

(This plan, put into effect in New York City last fall, met with considerable resentment from parents although, according to the council's report, the school staff's favor the program for a better racial balance.)

• The board should immediately appoint a citizens advisory committee on racial balance.

• The board should adopt a clear policy of commitment to racial balance in schools.

• And the board should undertake a continuing program to inform the public of the effects of racial imbalance and of the values of integrated education.

(Jones placed the responsibility of "educating" the public to avoid the resentment demonstrated by New York City parents, on the school board.)

Attending the session, although he did not comment on the matter, was E. Harold Klingel of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission.

Julio Suarez of the Franklin County Anti-Communism Study Group was present and protested any plan that would change the neighborhood school district concept.

In a paper distributed to school administrators, board members, council members and the press, the issue of improving racial balance in schools was termed the "very heart of the civil rights problem . . . in northern communities."

The issue was cited as the focus of civil rights action this summer in Chicago, where the superintendent of schools was charged by civil rightists for doing nothing to correct de facto segregation, and as the cause of unrest in Cleveland.

Corrective steps being considered by the Massachusetts legislature and those being undertaken in New York City, and court litigation on the matter were all called "indication of the seriousness . . . and the urgency."

SUPREME COURT CASES CITED

Twyford Rejects Young's City Tax Opinions

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford is sticking to his charge that Columbus is collecting an income tax without legal authority to do so. And Twyford has added some support to his contention in the form of a 1955 Ohio Supreme Court ruling.

George W. Twyford

Twyford said that council had the right to increase the tax without a vote of the people."

Twyford claimed support of the Ohio Supreme Court for his contention that any question of City Charter intent in tax matters must be weighed in favor of the taxpayer rather than the legislative branch of government.

He quoted a 1950 Ohio Supreme Court ruling which invalidated a Dayton income tax ordinance, and said in part:

"We are of the opinion that a court should construe strictly the Charter powers conferred upon a municipality to levy taxes. In other words, where the authority of the municipality is ambiguous it is our duty to construe it strictly against the taxing authorities and in favor of the taxpayers."

And in denying Young's contention that the 1956 tax limitation issue gave council authority for increase in the tax to one percent, Twyford cited the following passage from a 1955 Ohio Supreme Court ruling:

"Trivial nonconformances with the statues have been overlooked where the purpose of the ballot enabled the voters to clearly reflect their choice of candidates. They will not indulge such liberality of construction of ballots containing unauthorized statements or misrepresentations where bond issues or tax levies are the subject of the ballot. In the latter instance the form of the ballot and all procedural steps are conditions precedent to the validity of the election. The failure to attend the submission of the issue with such procedure is fatal."

Twyford said the whole question revolves on the right of the electorate to preempt council action in specific areas. As an example, he cited the part of the City Charter (Section 45) which says: "Ordinance rejected or repealed by an electoral vote shall not be re-enacted, in whole or in part, except by a vote of the people."

Twyford maintains that the same right prevails when the voters exercise their referendum right to repeal or approve a council ordinance, as was the case with the original council income tax ordinance.

"You can't give the people this right in one paragraph, and then take it away from them in the next," Twyford concluded.

EHS Offers Variety Of Courses

By G. B. NEWTON
Principal

Columbus' Evening High School, 75 S. Washington-blvd, across from Veterans Memorial, offers an exceptionally broad curriculum to meet the needs of adults and older youth. Being chartered as a four-year high school, it provides courses in all grades from ninth through 12th for the benefit of students desiring to earn a diploma of graduation.

The school incorporates into its subject offerings advanced courses in English, mathematics, science and commercial work. Such courses pave the way for high school graduates to continue their education by enriching or broadening it — looking toward advancement in employment or to advanced schooling.

Remedial or basic elementary courses in English and arithmetic are supplied to meet the needs of individuals who are not quite ready for high school. Special classes for foreign born people are provided to give them a working knowledge of the English language and our form of government to prepare them for citizenship examinations or for better adjustment to employment or other phases of living or schooling.

Special emphasis in the curriculum of Evening High is placed on English and mathematics. In both fields consideration is given to the needs of employes seeking advancement and to those striving toward better educational adjustment. Such courses as English Proficiency and Advanced Mathematics for college-bound students is indicative of the consideration given to special needs of students.

In the commercial field there is a wide offering spread across the subjects of typing, shorthand, office machines, letter writing and penmanship, bookkeeping and accounting.

Other courses of special interest to adults are drafting, shop mathematics, blueprint reading, art — including oil painting and design, meals planning and foods, woodworking, great literature, creative writing, journalism, public speaking, vocal music, medical terminology and a number of foreign languages.

New courses being offered this fall are health education and introduction to modern mathematics (for parents).

Registration for the fall semester will be on Thursday evening, Sept. 9, or Monday evening, Sept. 13. Classes will start Sept. 13 or 14. Further information can be secured by calling CA. 4-3243.

TEACHER Albert Popovich and two of his students at Columbus Evening High School, Mrs. Louise Fern (left), and Mrs. Anne Franks, look over materials to be used in the new course in Introduction to Modern Mathematics for parents. The course is being offered the first time this fall at Evening High to parents who desire to learn the new mathematics that their children are experiencing in school. Registration for the course, which will be given one night a week throughout the first semester, will be Thursday evening, Sept. 9 or Monday evening, Sept. 13. Telephone CA. 4-3243.

The two proposed charter amendments would, if approved:

In its present form the charter provides that only the president of council could serve as mayor.

Nicklaus Joins Firestone Golf Field; Brinks 'Alerted'

The American Golf Classic people, eager to promote their dripping rich go-around ($100,000) in Akron Aug. 23-29 pass along this information on Jack Nicklaus, who has officially agreed to tramp around the Firestone layout later this month:

Since joining the tour in 1962, Jack has:

(a) won 16 official tour championships, including the Masters, Memphis Open, Thunderbird Classic and Philadelphia Golf Classic this year.

(b) collected nearly $390,000 in official money (the other kind spends just as well, incidentally) to rank behind only four players in the modern era.

(c) won more than $100,000 in both '63 and '64 and has added up $114,000 this year with some of the richest prizes on the tour still to be claimed.

(d) became the youngest man ever to win the PGA, Open and Masters in a lifetime.

(e) won the first two "World Series of Golf" at Firestone Country Club in '62 and '63.

Nine years ago when Jack was 16, he won his first important title — the Ohio Open. Following his OSU career (where he won the NCAA golf championship), he announced on Nov. 8, 1961, that he was turning pro.

Shortly later he made an inauspicious debut at the '62 Los Angeles Open where he tied for 50th and collected the grand total of $38.38.

SINCE THEN, however, he's done a bit better — finishing in the money 28 consecutive times and 72 times out of his first 76 tournaments.

This year, Jack turned 25.

Young Jerry Melton of the Major League Tigers apparently has found a home on the pitching mound.

Jerry fired a no-hitter last week against the Yankees, 18-0, striking out 13 and disposing of the remaining batters in the five-inning game on ground outs.

STANDING 4-1 in the won-less column this summer, young Mr. Melton pitched only one inning before arriving in Whitehall from France where his dad was stationed.

It's not too hard to figure out why the Red Sox are on top in the Minor League (14-1). Check out their pitching staff — Phil Harris (no earned runs in 39 innings), Richie Cochrane (six earned runs in 28½ frames), Bruce Phillips (one earned run in five innings) and Tim Smith (four earned runs in 4½ innings).

International Personnel Credits Success To Scientific Approach

"If you are looking for a job — or merely 'feeling about' to enhance your present occupational status—your chances for success are about 40 percent if we accept your application."

When Steven Marcus, president of International Personnel Service, made that rather startling statement this week he probably anticipated a quick challenge by a number of disbelievers.

Anyone who has pounded the "job-hunter's" beat, stared hopelessly at perfunctory "No Applications Accepted" signs, devoted innumerable hours to interminable applications and resumes, has good reason to challenge Marcus' statement.

Yet, who can argue with success?

Modest Beginning

Less than two years ago, International Personnel Service opened a modest office at 1515 W. Lane-av, offering its method of successful personnel placement to Arlington and the surrounding area. Later, a second office was opened at 2375 E. Main-st in Bexley.

Today, these two offices are satellites of a central office located in the new 88 E. Broad-st skyscraper.

Steven Marcus

What underlies this rapid success in the Columbus area?

As Marcus put it, "Success in placing about 40 percent of our applicants."

What underlies this high ratio of placements?

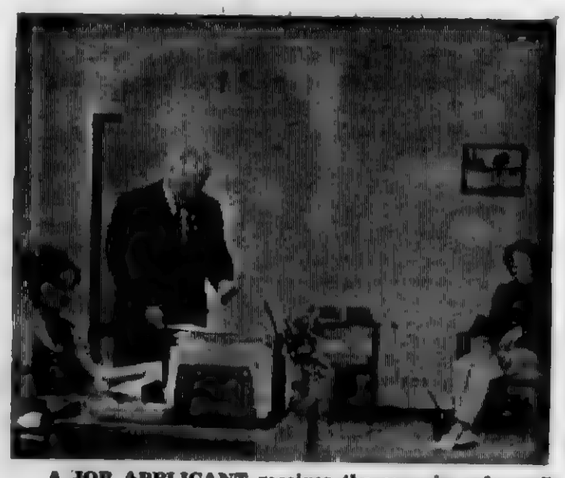
"The scientific thoroughness of our personnel placement methods," Marcus said.

International Personnel Service came to life four years ago in Detroit. Two years ago Tom Kleene, business-industry writer for the Detroit Free Press, said the firm selected Detroit as a laboratory "for new recruitment and placement methods."

"The early reaction to their approach," he said, "has encouraged the management to talk of 'going global' in the foreseeable future with operations in at least Germany, Italy and France initially."

Present plans call for an intended network of 300 United States branch offices.

All franchised and individually owned offices of International operate on the IPS Approach, conceived by Ray V. Michael, president of the parent organization.



The IPS approach stresses an in-depth screening of the applicant's qualifications as well as in-depth analysis of the employer's job requirements. Only after a successful mating of these requirements has been achieved does an applicant meet a prospective employer.

This generally results in a successful placement, Marcus said.

Fees Explained

Applicants at IPS will usually work with a college-trained, job-oriented consultant. IPS normally restricts the caseload of its consultants to no more than 15 applicants. Under their system a greater caseload would preclude an applicant from receiving the individual attention he deserves for the fee he will pay if placed.

"Speaking of fees," Marcus said, "these generally range between five and 10 percent of the first year's salary, depending upon the income bracket."

A JOB APPLICANT receives the experienced, confidential attention of Recruitment Director Douglas Beasecker at International Personnel Service. Later, if her application is accepted, she will be privately interviewed and counseled by a consultant whose limited caseload will assure her prompt and continuing attention until she is placed. Beasecker says the many Adult Education programs available locally can add job-depth and additional qualifications to applicants who pursue intelligent study.

He said this is payable only after an applicant is placed. "There is no initial charge of any kind," he pointed out, "and an applicant has the prerogative of accepting or rejecting any offer without penalty."

International's activities are geared toward full-time permanent placements. Applicants for clerical, administrative, sales, technical and engineering positions as well as all levels of management positions are considered at International Personnel Service.

Since opening offices here, Marcus has pioneered within the IPS System in two important areas. One, by instituting a Technical Division which works exclusively with applicants and employers in the engineering field and, two, establishing multiple offices within the same city.

Both the Arlington and Bexley office are coordinated with the central office at 88 E. Broad-st and applicants and employers receive the same account service at each of the three offices.

IPS also interchanges job information and applicant referrals with similar offices in other cities and states.

Board Hears Recommendations Of Civil Rights Council

Improvement of racial balance in the city schools was termed an urgency by Columbus Civil Rights Council in a set of recommendations made to the school board Tuesday.

The suggestions were drafted as the result of the Conference on Racial Balance in Schools held in May, and attended by representatives of the council's 53 member organizations, school superintendent, Dr. Harold Elbling and his administrative staff.

The board was asked, in a paper presented by Russell M. Jones, executive director of the Civil Rights Council, to consider:

• By the fall of 1966 some schools be "paired" to effect racial balance by assigning kindergarten through third grade students to a school in a predominantly Negro district, while pupils from both districts in grade four through six would attend the other school in the "pair," located in a white neighborhood.

(This plan, put into effect in New York City last fall, met with considerable resentment from parents although, according to the council's report, the school staff's favor the program for a better racial balance.)

• The board should immediately appoint a citizens advisory committee on racial balance.

• The board should adopt a clear policy of commitment to racial balance in schools.

• And the board should undertake a continuing program to inform the public of the effects of racial imbalance and of the values of integrated education.

(Jones placed the responsibility of "educating" the public to avoid the resentment demonstrated by New York City parents, on the school board.)

Attending the session, although he did not comment on the matter, was E. Harold Klingel of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission.

Julio Suarez of the Franklin County Anti-Communism Study Group was present and protested any plan that would change the neighborhood school district concept.

In a paper distributed to school administrators, board members, council members and the press, the issue of improving racial balance in schools was termed the "very heart of the civil rights problem . . . in northern communities."

The issue was cited as the focus of civil rights action this summer in Chicago, where the superintendent of schools was charged by civil rightists for doing nothing to correct de facto segregation, and as the cause of unrest in Cleveland.

Corrective steps being considered by the Massachusetts legislature and those being undertaken in New York City, and court litigation on the matter were all called "indication of the seriousness . . . and the urgency."

SUPREME COURT CASES CITED

Twyford Rejects Young's City Tax Opinions

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford is sticking to his charge that Columbus is collecting an income tax without legal authority to do so. And Twyford has added some support to his charge by citing a 1955 Ohio Supreme Court ruling.

George W. Twyford

Twyford claimed support of the Ohio Supreme Court for his contention that any question of City Charter intent in tax matters must be weighed in favor of the taxpayer rather than the legislative branch of government.

He quoted a 1950 Ohio Supreme Court ruling which invalidated a Dayton income tax ordinance, and said in part:

"We are of the opinion that a court should construe strictly the Charter powers conferred upon a municipality to levy taxes. In other words, where the authority of the municipality is ambiguous it is the duty to construe it strictly against the taxing authorities and in favor of the taxpayers."

And in denying Young's contention that the 1956 tax limitation issue gave council authority for increase in the tax to one percent, Twyford cited the following passage from a 1955 Ohio Supreme Court ruling:

"Trivial nonconformances with the statues have been overlooked where the purpose of the ballot enabled the voters to clearly reflect their choice of candidates. They will not indulge such liberality of construction of ballots containing unauthorized statements or misrepresentations where bond issues or tax levies are the subject of the ballot. In the latter instance the form of the ballot and all procedural steps are conditions precedent to the validity of the election. The failure to attend the submission of the issue with such procedure is fatal."

Twyford said the whole question revolves on the right of the electorate to preempt council action in specific areas. As an example, he cited the part of the City Charter (Section 45) which says: "Ordinance rejected or repealed by an electoral vote shall not be re-enacted, in whole or in part, except by a vote of the people."

Twyford maintains that the same right prevails when the voters exercise their referendum right to repeal or approve a council ordinance, as was the case with the original council income tax ordinance.

"You can't give the people this right in one paragraph, and then take it away from them in the next," Twyford concluded.

NEW 'GEARING' NEEDED

Adult Education Programs Must Face Era of Expansion

"The skyrocketing pace of automation with its elimination of jobs brings need for expanded programs of adult education. Experts now predict that young people beginning a life work will find it necessary to be retrained for entirely new occupations at least once every 15 or 20 years," according to Paul S. Noblitt, supervisor of Adult Education for the South-Western City School System.

Once a man has a family, he can no longer afford to take time off to return to school. Retraining must be accomplished in addition to regular employment, Noblitt pointed out. Adult education programs are the answer, he maintains.

Noblitt

Hardly any of the adult education courses are presently geared to this task. That's the reason why great attention is being given at the federal and state levels. Experts believe that the kinds and numbers of subjects will undergo great expansion in the next decade. The only agencies with the resources, the know-how, and the facilities to do the job which will have to be done are the schools, Noblitt believes.

South-Western's Adult Education Program will take a new turn at the time of completion of the system's new Technical High School Building. Then, highly specialized equipment will become available to be used for adult retraining and upgrading courses. Among the possibilities for courses will be welding, soldering, automobile mechanics, electronics, data processing, cooks and bakers, drafting, machine shop, and others.

Right now it would seem that there is almost no limit to the number of down-to-earth courses which can be of immediate and positive worth to individuals who need to learn new skills for new occupations, according to Noblitt.

S-W Schools Expand Program

For the fifth successive year, additional courses in more locations will be offered South-Western City Schools' patrons. Classes have traditionally been held in Grove City High School, Franklin Heights and Pleasant View High Schools, plus Prairie Lincoln School in Lincoln Village.

This year, courses are being scheduled in addition to the above buildings in Urbancrest Elementary, Darbydale Elementary and in Norton and Brookpark Junior High Schools. Thus, residents of every part of the far-flung school system will find an adult education center readily available.

Enrollment in the adult education program of the South-Western City Schools has more than tripled since the first program was offered in 1961. Current plans are that new programs, inspired by the Anti-Poverty Programs, will be scheduled as funds become available. Additional classes in Trade and Industries and in vocational subjects are planned when the school system's new Technical High School building is completed in 1966.

Welfare Finance is proud, Davis said, that some of its executives initiated proposals for legislative state laws governing consumer finance companies in the nature of loans and investments. This is added testimony to the integrity of the executives and the operation policies of the corporation.

According to company records, the biggest individual group of customers served are those having a family income of about $5,000 a year. A closer look at the customers shows that 38 percent of the families own homes, 72 percent own automobiles, 51 percent have life insurance, 28 percent have savings accounts and 26 percent have checking accounts; of these, 63 percent are high school graduates and 11 percent are college graduates.

Although loans are made for many reasons, literally thousands have been made to finance school tuitions, Davis said, and added, "Welfare Finance is always happy to help these many young people to further their education."

The health and welfare of the adult Center member is never overlooked. A comprehensive health and physical education program, directed by Kenneth Solomon, offers the adult, man and woman, a variety of recreational and skill programs.

For the women, Mrs. Lynn Nateman offers an extremely popular slimnastics class on Tuesday and Thursday mornings. A gym and volleyball night is scheduled for women on Monday evening. Co-ed sports programs include badminton, Sunday couples' gym night and a couples' bowling league.

The two proposed charter amendments would, if approved:

• Give council the authority to appoint one of its own members or even any qualified elector of the city to the post of interim mayor, providing council president could not assume duties of the office in the event it would become vacant. In its present form the charter provides that only the president of council could serve as mayor.

• Give council the authority to remove the duties of safety and service director from the office of the mayor, should it become necessary in its selection of someone to fill the mayor's office until the next general election.

Presently the charter provides that these duties must be performed by the mayor.

Nicklaus Joins Firestone Golf Field; Brinks 'Alerted'

The American Golf Classic people, eager to promote their dripping rich go-around ($100,000) in Akron Aug. 23-29 pass along this information on Jack Nicklaus, who has officially agreed to tramp around the Firestone layout later this month:

Since joining the tour in 1962, Jack has:

(a) won 16 official tour championships, including the Masters, Memphis Open, Thunderbird Classic and Philadelphia Golf Classic this year.

(b) collected nearly $390,000 in official money (the other kind spends just as well, incidentally) to rank behind only four players in the modern era.

(c) won more than $166,000 in both '63 and '64 and has added up $114,000 this year with some of the richest prizes on the tour still to be claimed.

(d) became the youngest man ever to win the PGA, Open and Masters in a lifetime.

(e) won the first two "World Series of Golf" at Firestone Country Club in '62 and '63.

Nine years ago when Jack was 16, he won his first important title — the Ohio Open. Following his OSU career (where he won the NCAA golf championship), he announced on Nov. 8, 1961, that he was turning pro.

Shortly later he made an inauspicious debut at the '62 Los Angeles Open where he tied for 50th and collected the grand total of $38.38.

SINCE THEN, however, he's done a bit better — finishing in the money 28 consecutive times and 72 times out of his first 76 tournaments.

This year, Jack turned 25.

WHAT'S NEW IN THE WBB

Young Jerry Melton of the Major League Tigers apparently has found a home on the pitching mound.

Jerry fired a no-hitter last week against the Yankees, 18-0, striking out 13 and disposing of the remaining battes in the five-inning game on ground outs.

STANDING 4-1 in the won-less column this summer, young Mr. Melton pitched only one inning before arriving in Whitehall from France where his dad was stationed.

It's not too hard to figure out why the Red Sox are on top in the Minor League (14-1). Board Hears Recommendations Of Civil Rights Council

Improvement of racial balance in the city schools was termed an urgency by Columbus Civil Rights Council in a set of recommendations made to the school board Tuesday.

The suggestions were drafted as the result of the Conference on Racial Balance in Schools held in May, and attended by representatives of the council's 53 member organizations, school superintendent, Dr. Harold Eibling and his administrative staff.

The board was asked, in a paper represented by Russell M. Jones, executive director of the Civil Rights Council, to consider:

• By the fall of 1966 some schools be "paired" to effect racial balance by assigning kindergarten through third grade students to a school in a predominantly Negro district, while pupils from both districts in grade four through six would attend the other school in the "pair," located in a white neighborhood.

(This plan, put into effect in New York City last fall, met with considerable resentment from parents although, according to the council's report, the school staffs favor the program for a better racial balance.)

• The board should immediately appoint a citizens advisory committee on racial balance.

• The board should adopt a clear policy of commitment to racial balance in schools.

• And the board should undertake a continuing program to inform the public of the effects of racial imbalance and of the values of integrated education.

(Jones placed the responsibility of "educating" the public to avoid the resentment demonstrated by New York City parents, on the school board.)

Attending the session, although he did not comment on the matter, was E. Harold Klingel of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission.

Julio Suarez of the Franklin County Anti-Communism Study Group was present and protested any plan that would change the neighborhood school district concept.

In a paper distributed to school administrators, board members, council members and the press, the issue of improving racial balance in schools was termed the "very heart of the civil rights problem . . . in northern communities."

The issue was cited as the focus of civil rights action this summer in Chicago, where the superintendent of schools was charged by civil rightists for doing nothing to correct de facto segregation, and as the cause of unrest in Cleveland.

Corrective steps being considered by the Massachusetts legislature and those being undertaken in New York City, and court litigation on the matter were all called "indication of the seriousness . . . and the urgency."

SUPREME COURT CASES CITED

Twyford Rejects Young's City Tax Opinions

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford is sticking to his charge that Columbus is collecting an income tax without legal authority to do so. And Twyford has added some supporting testimony from the Ohio Supreme Court.

The original charge was revealed in The Spectator editions of Aug. 12, when Twyford said the Columbus city tax ordinance expired on Dec. 31, 1952, and the city has since been without legal authority to impose the tax. He also said that the 1956 vote to limit council's income taxing authority to one percent without a vote of the people was a ruse to gain "implied" authority "to continue and increase the tax."

Columbus City Attorney John C. Young said he did not feel Twyford's contentions would stand up under a court test.

"The 1956 Charter amendment," Young said, "clears up any doubt about an initiative or referendum petition being necessary for re-enactment of the Columbus municipal income tax."

Young maintains the 1956 vote gave council the authority to impose a one percent income tax. He says, further, that the original vote on the income tax ordinance in 1948 marked the defeat of a referendum attempt to repeal the income tax ordinance.

Young and Twyford both agree that those who are paying the city tax can't collect any substantial rebate if a court ruling invalidates the tax. Young said a one-year limitation governs the amount any taxpayer could hope to recover, and that the tax must be paid under protest to make the claimant eligible for a refund of any monies illegally collected.

Twyford categorically rejected Young's contentions that the 1948 vote constituted the rejection of an attempt to repeal council's original city tax ordinance; that the 1952 ordinance was a new law, and that the 1956 vote on the one-percent limitation made all other questions moot.

"If John Young really believes what he says about the present city income tax law, it indicates only that he has not properly researched the question," Twyford declared.

"The 1948 ballot was very plainly marked with two choices 'For the Ordinance' and 'Against The Ordinance.'

John C. Young

George W. Twyford

A majority voted for the ordinance. And they voted for an ordinance with an expiration date of Dec. 31, 1952.

"Young is dead wrong when he claims that the council enacted a new ordinance in 1952. What they did was amend an existing ordinance to continue it for another four years. And the city charter specifically prohibits the amending of an ordinance passed by a vote of the electorate, except by another vote of the electorate."

Twyford was just as emphatic in refuting Young's claim that the 1956 vote gave council the authority to raise the income tax from one-half percent to one percent.

"The people were told very clearly" he said, "that their vote would not affect council's doubling of the income tax. In fact, council got away with an illegal tax hike for the third quarter of 1956, and that helped condition the people to the erroneous impression that council had the right to increase the tax without a vote of the people."

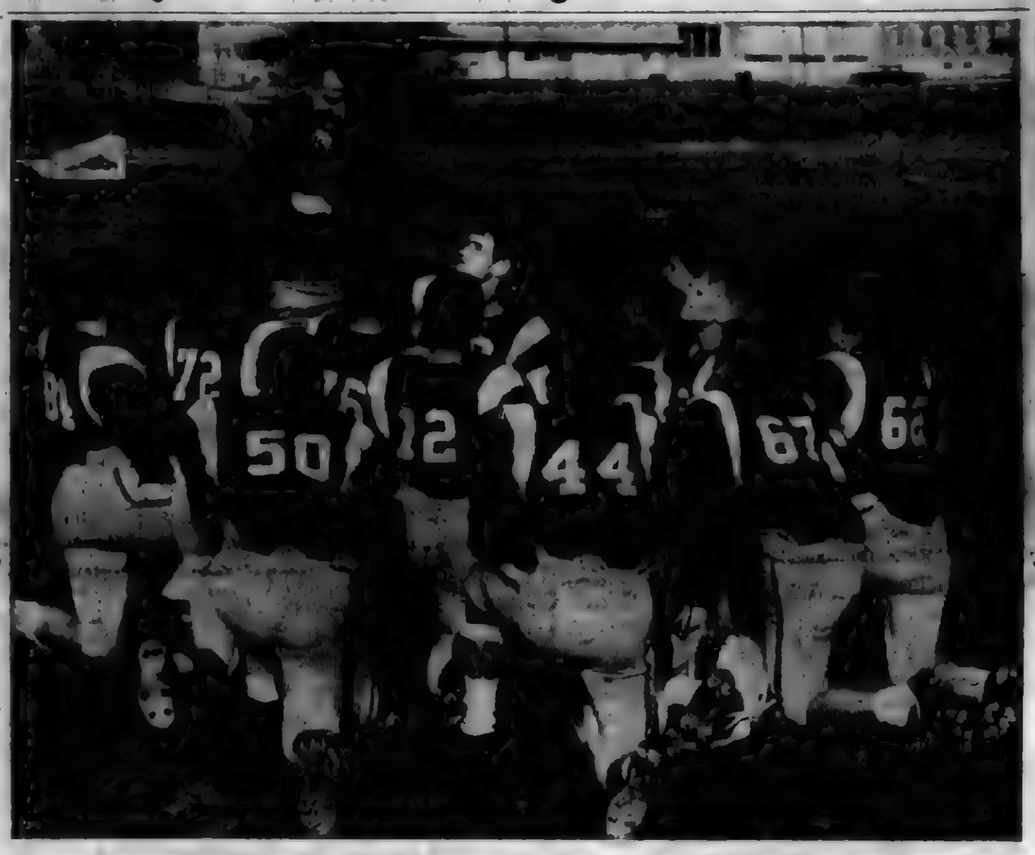
Twyford claimed support of the Ohio Supreme Court for his contention that any question of City Charter intent in tax matters must be weighed in favor of the taxpayer rather than the legislative branch of government.

He quoted a 1950 Ohio Supreme Court ruling which invalidated a Dayton income tax ordinance, and said in part:

"We are of the opinion that a court should construe strictly the Charter powers conferred upon a municipality to levy taxes. In other words, where the authority of the municipality is ambiguous it is our duty to construe it strictly against the taxing authorities and in favor of the taxpayers."

And in denying Young's contention that the 1956 tax limitation issue gave council authority for increase in the tax to one percent, Twyford cited the following passage from a 1955 Ohio Supreme Court ruling:

"Trivial nonconformances with the statues have been overlooked where the purpose of the ballot enabled the voters to clearly reflect their choice of candidates. They will not indulge such liberality of construction of ballots containing unauthorized statements or misrepresentations where bond issues or tax levies are the subject of the ballot. In the latter instance the form of the ballot and all procedural steps are conditions precedent to the validity of the election. The failure to attend the submission of the issue with such procedure is fatal."



Twyford said the whole question revolves on the right of the electorate to preempt council action in specific areas. As an example, he cited the part of the City Charter (Section 45) which says: "Ordinance rejected or repealed by an electoral vote shall not be re-enacted, in whole or in part, except by a vote of the people."

Twyford maintains that the same right prevails when the voters exercise their referendum right to repeal or approve a council ordinance, as was the case with the original council income tax ordinance.

"You can't give the people this right in one paragraph, and then take it away from them in the next," Twyford concluded.

BLAME APARTMENT BOOM

Traffic Concerns Whitehall Council

Whitehall's apartment construction boom of the early 1960's was cited by a city official as the main cause of present congested traffic conditions on E. Main-st, between Hamilton and Country Club-rds.

Council will meet in special session at 7:30 p.m. Monday in an effort to relieve the problem.

Proposed is an extension of Mound-st from the rear of the Whitehall Park apartments to Shady Lane-rd. Apartment developer, Seymour Luckoff, has told city officials he will construct the road to city specifications on a 30-foot right-of-way owned by the city.

If approved, the project would call for a 20-foot roadway, which would be dedicated to the city when completed.

Several area residents have indicated they will attend the Monday meeting to protest construction of the road. They complain that it puts their homes in an "island," with roads at both the front and rear of their residences.

Tuesday's regular session of council included rejection of a rezoning request to permit a car wash at 4318 E. Main-st and approval of a new contract with Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. calling for reduced rates for Whitehall subscribers.

In other action, Council:

• Approved a resolution authorizing C&SOE to install 2500 lumen street lights along Fountain Lane, Irongate Lane, Brickwall S. and Brickwall N.

Tabled an ordinance requesting the state director of liquor control to restrict further issuance of liquor permits in Whitehall.

Referred to the safety committee of council a proposed ordinance to provide penalties for those convicted of harboring noisy animals.

BOOST BEXLEY BOOSTERS

"Boost the Bexley Boosters" night will be held Wednesday, Aug. 25, 8 p.m. at the Bexley Swimming Pool.

There will be diving exhibitions by Bexley Junior and Senior High students, and dancing to records. Admission is 50 cents.

All Bexley parents are invited to attend and support the Boosters' work. Proceeds will be used for the athletic program at Bexley High.

WHITEHALL'S 'STORAGE' LANES TERMED 'SUCCESS'

Charter Changes On Bexley Ballot

By unanimous decision, Bexley Council members, meeting in special session Friday, approved ordinances to place two amendments to the city charter on the fall ballot.

If passed by voters, the amendments will allow flexibility in the succession procedure and the duties of the mayor, should the office become vacant during an elected term.

Each elector in the city will receive a letter outlining the amendments at least 30 days before the election, in ample time for their careful consideration and study.

The amendments will also be posted in their entirety at each polling place because the wording on the voting machines, necessarily brief, may be confusing.

Council also passed a measure Friday outlawing loud and unnecessary noises in the city, accepted a reduction in Bexley's electric rate and approved a new city budget.

Major change in the budget was the establishment of a $5000 maintenance fund for the municipal building, now about ten years old, to keep the building in good repair.

The matter of placement control on outside air-conditioning units in order to reduce their nuisance factor to neighbors was not included in the anti-noise legislation. This issue is still under study by committee and will be presented in a separate ordinance.

Fines up to $50 were fixed for violation of the anti-noise measure, and sources of "loud and unnecessary noise" range from radios and televisions to motor bikes.

The two proposed charter amendments would, if approved:

• Give council the authority to appoint one of its own members or even any qualified elector of the city to the post of interim mayor, providing council president could not assume duties of the office in the event it would become vacant. In its present form the charter provides that only the president of council could serve as mayor.

• Give council the authority to remove the duties of safety and service director from the office of the mayor, should it become necessary in its selection of someone to fill the mayor's office until the next general election.

Presently the charter provides that these duties must be performed by the mayor.

to YOU . . .
. . . who have become so discouraged with Sunday School that you have quit. It's not that you are not interested in Bible study — you are, in fact, you quit because you were not really learning the Bible. You are tired of jumping around from subject to subject, always studying but never really mastering the Scriptures.
I invite you to a Sunday School where you study the Bible the way it was written, by books, chapter by chapter. In this way you come to understand the Bible and can go back any time and read the Bible with understanding and profit.
I promise you, it really works.

WHITEHALL BOYS COP RECREATION DEPT. TITLE

THE ETNA Road entry in the 13-15 boys' division of the Whitehall Recreation Department's summer softball program recently wrapped up the title in its league. Team members include (kneeling, from left) Rick Sott, Brookie Wilson, Mark Sander, Steve Southworth and Matt Sander. Standing: coach Ed Metzger, Bob Grimm, Walter Theiss, Butch Martin, Gary King and Ray Armbruster.

Rec Boys Hope Lightnin' Doesn't Strike Twice

"Showdown" will be spelled Recreation Department vs Darnell Sunday on the Rosemore diamond at 3 p.m. as the Whitehall Slo-Pitch League moves into its final week of action.

Doubleheaders are scheduled for all six clubs in the circuit bu the "big" one figures to be the aforementioned clash which pits the first round champ against the second round co-leader — the revenge-seeking Recreation boys.

DARNELL WON the first round in one "dark" afternoon for the Recreation Department, sweeping a twin-bill which bumped the latter out of the initial title picture.

A city championship game will be played at Rosemore (2 p.m.), Sunday, Aug. 29, unless Darnell makes it two rounds in a row Sunday.

The Recreation Department warmed up impressively for its upcoming match with Darnell last Sunday with 22-8 and 17-5 wins over the Police and Fire Departments respectively.

THE WINNERS, who seemed to have little trouble connecting, had no real standout. Tom Trace of the Police Department was a standout in defeat with a fine defensive game and four-for-five at the plate.

Keeping pace was Darnell, who downed Holy Spirit, 13-10, and outslugged the WBBA Coaches, 16-15.

Big blow in the WBBA contest was a bases-loaded homer by Kay McDonald, Bill Darnell's three-run four-bagger and Walt Harrington's seven-for-eight effort.

GOLDEN ARM Jack Gilmore, who now sports a "yeller" ribbon on his uniform sleeve, won both ends of the twin-bill on the mound for Darnell.

In other action Sunday, WBBA Coaches smoked out the Fire Department, 11-3, while the Police Department pistol-whipped Holy Spirit, 15-2.

Here is the schedule for Sunday:

Recreation vs. WBBA Coaches (at Whitehall-Yearling's north diamond, 1:30 p.m.)
Recreation vs. Darnell (at Rosemore, 3 p.m.)
Fire Dept. vs. Holy Spirit (Rosemore, 1:30)
Police Dept. vs. Darnell (E. Main St., 1:30)
WBBA Coaches vs. Holy Spirit (E. Main St., 3 p.m.)
Police Dept. vs. Fire Dept. (Whitehall-Yearling north, 3 p.m.)

To Our Eastern Spectator Readers:

As an intelligent buyer you know that no automobile dealer can sell cars, new or used, without making some profit. If there is no profit a dealer cannot stay in business.

ARTHUR C. COHEN
Vice Pres. & Gen. Mgr.

Yet right now and during the next few weeks, some dealers will claim to offer savings of $300 to $900 and even more during the final clearances of 1965 models.

Remember this, regardless of the discount, you may be offered — the larger the discount, the less you'll get for your present car.

And what is your used car really worth? What it is really worth will determine the difference you pay between your present car and the new car you buy.

At Spitzer-Cohen your car is worth more money. Why?

- Because many new car dealers do not retail used cars.
- They either resell them to other dealers or sell them at wholesale dealer's auction prices. These dealers therefore, can only allow you what your car would be worth to another dealer who must clean it up, fix it up and then resell it at a profit.
- Spitzer-Cohen does retail used cars.
- We recondition your trade-in and offer it for resale to our retail customers.

Spitzer-Cohen can afford to sell new '65 Dodges for less because of volume sales. And we can offer you more for your present car because we have a ready market for it.

By paying less for your new car and getting the full value from your present car, you pay the lowest cash difference at Spitzer-Cohen.

Does this mean Spitzer-Cohen saves you money? You bet it does! Not just $5.00, $10, but actually as much as $100 to $500.

So step up to Dodge quality, now, while there's still a good selection of new '65 Dodges.

Knights Take Title, Playoff Is Tomorrow

Despite the fact that the three top clubs in the Reynoldsburg Girls' Softball League took losses last week, the final second round standings weren't shuffled considerably.

The Lucky Shamrocks lost to winless Red Devils, 23-18, thus forfeiting their chances to gain a round tie with the Black Knights, who dropped their initial round verdict in a squeaker to the Miss Fits, 13-12.

In other action, the White Angels won their third straight of the second round, dropping the Blue Jeans, 22-8.

The first round winner (White Angels) will play the second round champs (Black Knights) tomorrow night to decide the league champion.

In last week's action, Pam Lewis (Miss Fits) and Vicki Heater and Cathy Keller (both of White Angels) banged out homers while Carolyn Doherty (Knights) and Yvette Carmen (Angels) turned unassisted double plays.

Welders Nab Old Timers Crown; Wilson's Champs Close Unbeaten

In an exciting Old Timers game, Brad Salt Realtors won the second round of league play (5-0) by edging Susil Construction, 10-9.

Both teams had big innings early which left the game tied, 9-9 after six. In the last of the seventh inning Salt first baseman Dale Falknor hit a triple and took home on a throwing error to win the game.

SPARKPLUG for the Salt team was leftfielder Jerry Walke who stole at least one run from Susil with a circus catch besides adding a home run and a single. Other standouts for Salt were infielders Hal Ridenour and Bob Weissinger both of whom contributed two hits and fine fielding performances.

Susil's losing effort was highlighted by the hitting of Melvin Miller, (home run and two doubles) and Ross Miller (three singles).

First-round winner Central Ohio Welding suffered its fourth loss of the second round at the hands of Bexley Methodist, 14-8. Jack Prather, Ron Brandt, Bill Manierre and Jack Shelton led Methodist slugging with three hits apiece.

IN THE evening's third game, Christ Lutheran pounded out 25 hits en route to a 17-10 win over Dollar Federal Savings. Leading Lutheran hitters were Leo Gerhold (four hits), Sam Gingrich (two home runs and a single) and Dale Helmick (home run and two singles).

Howard Johnson and Jim Zikas with four hits each and Gene Millard with a home run and a double were the top hitters for Dollar Federal.

Championship Game

Ken Hush and Mike Kilbroune, with a home run and a single each, and two singles apiece by Dave Little and Don McCaulsky accounted for the main part of COW's attack.

Paul Lindquist (four singles) John Jones, Bob Weissinger, Stand Maxwell and Bill Sutton all with a pair of singles led Salts' hitting. But COW pitcher Don McCoulsky gave Salt only one extra base hit while holding the losers to their lowest run output of the season.

ALL PLAYERS of the Old Timers' League are reminded of the banquet to be held Aug. 24. Those interested in more details should contact their team manager.

UNDER THIRTY

Wilson Auto Parts won the second round and summer championship in the Under Thirty League by edging Superior Die and Tool 10-9.

Elsewhere the Pussycats surprised Williamson Furniture, 11-8, and the Red Dogs romped over 'Them' 21-10.

Wilson Auto finished summer play with a perfect 10-0 record, but had to come from behind to save that record Wednesday.

SUPERIOR DIE and Tool, behind the long ball hitting of Nick Cooper (home run and single) and Dick Holstein (home run and double) jumped into an early lead.

But Wilson hitters' Bob Benjamin (home run and two singles), Don Wilson (home run and two singles) and Stan Brown, (triple, double and single) slowly pecked away at Superiors' lead to gain the victory.

The Pussycats got lots of longball hitting to upset Williamson Furniture. Ted Kolva led the way with two home runs and a single while Steve Cartwright and Jack Brown added a home run and a single apiece.

HOWEVER, Williamson got some power hitting of its own from Jeff Gold (home run, double and single), Mark Topy (home run and single) and Bernie Weston, (home run).

The Red Dogs had a field day against 'Them' as every player in the lineup hit safely. Chip Greene's home run, triple and double, and Cal Hamrich's home run and double were Red Dogs' big hits.

Lantern Parades Are Final Event Of Playground Season

The annual Lantern Parades conducted by the Columbus Recreation Department will be held Tuesday, Aug. 24, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

All 85 playgrounds operated by the department will participate. They will close at 5 p.m. that day to prepare for the event.

The parades will be held around the lakes located in the following five parks: Westgate, Linden, Schiller, Whetstone and Franklin.

These lantern parades, which are one of the most colorful events of the playground season, are open free to all. Each playground develops its own theme, then the children work on their own lanterns and in many cases, on an additional large one for the playground. Many of the children have been involved in lantern-making for the last two weeks.

Lanterns are made of a variety of materials — cardboard boxes, milk cartons, ice cream containers, chicken wire, papier mache over balloons, etc.

Each playground will have a sign carrying its own name preceding its entry. Many of these signs will be lanterns, too. The lanterns will be lighted by candles and, in some cases, by flashlights.

Masters of ceremonies for the parades are as follows: Westgate — Earl Green, WTVN-TV; Linden — Hugh DeMoss, WLW-C TV; Schiller — Miss Tito Black of WTVN-TV who emcees the department's show, "Fun For Everyone;" Whetstone — Les Spencer, WBNS Radio; Franklin—Ann Walker, WVKO Radio.

During the week of Aug. 16 to 21, the recreation department playground softball tournament is being conducted. Championship games are scheduled for Monday, Aug. 23, at Sunshine Recreation Center. Time schedule is as follows: junior girls — 2 p.m., Diamond 3; junior boys — 2 p.m., Diamond 2; intermediate girls — 5 p.m., Diamond 3; senior girls — 5 p.m. Diamond 2; intermediate boys—6 p.m., Diamond 1; senior boys — 7:30 p.m., Diamond 1.

Many of the playgrounds are holding end-of-season events and family nights. They will close at 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 26.

Following are local playground reports:

Hosiery, handbags and other matching accessories are also available.

Mrs. Kitchen says parents who have visited the new Teen Haven have been very complimentary on the department's merchandise.

COFFEE BREAK

Check Your Shoes At The Door Please

By ADELINE DALEY

It may be an overstatement to say that our "New Look" home is the greatest restoration of ruins since the Parthenon of ancient Greece was rejuvenated, but quite a few of our friends have expressed that very opinion.

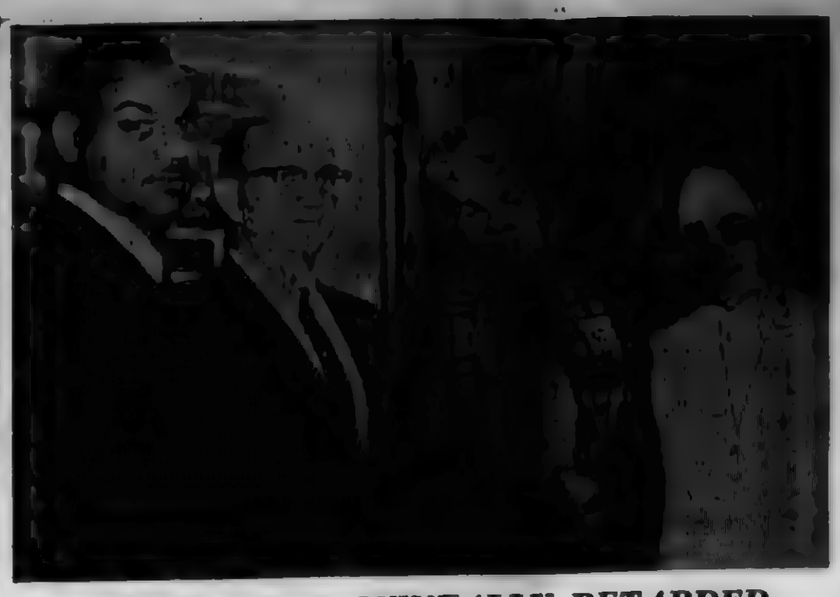
We have been taking them on personally conducted tours (every hour on the hour, admission free) in order that one and all can admire the newly-painted rooms, wall-to-wall carpeting and such innovations as new bathroom faucets which do not spray like a geyser when turned on, as the old ones did.

I guess this explains, incidentally, why my husband keeps remarking he "feels like a stranger in his own home."

We have opened up a portion of our home which had been previously blocked off from the viewing public. Our kids' sleeping quarters, until now, bore no more of a resemblance to a "Better Homes and Gardens" bedroom than the Black Hole of Calcutta.

I hope that the novelty of our modernization program does not wear off, because some of our kids have even taken to making their own beds — without anybody in them.

Of course, a lot of people have asked if we've come into an inheritance. With all of these improvements we do resemble the plot of "Ma and Pa Kettle Strike It Rich." Unfortunately, the sequel would have to be "Ma and Pa Kettle Take Out an Improvement Loan."



You can readily see that these startling changes have brought about a new way of life around here. And it isn't easy for our kids to adjust to the fact that they can no longer eat in the living room, nor prepare their peanut butter and jelly sandwiches there.

That's why we deemed it necessary to show the house off as quickly as possible before it returns to its old state, in about two weeks. Moreover, I don't know who is going to win the war of nerves in trying to keep the kids from applying their fingerprints to the walls like flies in a police laboratory.

But perhaps we are a little too strict, especially in trying to keep our rugs intact. Maybe we should stop asking guests to remove their shoes before entering the living room.

VOICE RECITAL SET

Louise Chambers Dibble has announced a recital to be held on Aug. 29, 3 p.m. at Summers and Sons Music Store, second floor studio. She will present the following students: Evelyn Reed, Kay Cessor, Jodie Moore, John Mcilhargey, Lynn Fitzpatrick, Evelyn Stebbins, and Suzanne Hamiel.

CHECK HELPS MENTALLY RETARDED

MRS. THOMAS C. FITZPATRICK, chairman of Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, and Sister Paul Michael, P.C.J., religious adviser to the group, recently accepted a check for $250 from Lloyd Rinehart, Grand Knight of Pope John XXIII Council of the Knights of Columbus. The check will be used in the CCD in reaching the mentally retarded and emotionally disturbed children. Rinehart emphasized that this is one of many ways in which the Knights of Columbus will aid the CCD. Also pictured is Harry Paine, who as chairman of the committee of the Confraternity, is busy organizing members to attend the school to be held at St. Charles Seminary. The committee will also assist the parishes in the South Side in providing transportation for the pupils, recruitment of students, registering classes and acting as teachers' aides.

WORLD-RECOGNIZED COLLEGE OF ART AND DESIGN SET FOR LARGE ENROLLMENT

MORE THAN 700 art students will attend classes this year at the Columbus College of Art and Design located at 486 Hutton-pl. The school, an affiliate of the Columbus Gallery of Fine Art, is recognized as one of the nation's finest art colleges offering an extremely wide curriculum, according to Sy Clopper, supervisor of the Fine Arts Dept. Sculpturing in all media (left), painting (center), interpretative study (right) plus the graphics make up only one division — Fine Arts — of the school's extensive activity. Other divisions are Advertising Design, Industrial Design and the Division of Magazine Illustration. Integrated within these divisions are specific directions in interior design, fashion illustration, cartooning, photography, industrial and engineering design, the advertising arts and other work. In the classes, instructors stress actual work methods used in today's studio, agency and industry. The faculty is composed of staff artists and designers with extensive experience in professional studies and teaching in leading art schools, colleges and universities. The college is co-educational and is composed of three schools — the professional day school, the evening school and the Saturday school. Established in 1879 as the Columbus Art School, the Columbus College of Art and Design is incorporated as a non-profit educational institution and is approved by the Ohio State Board of Education, the Veterans Administration and, since students are received from all over the world, by the United States Department of Justice, Immigration and Naturalization Service. Last year three students, George Gaadt, Fred Kleinsmith and James Wylie took three national top awards offered by the Society of Illustrators in New York.

The year before Ronald Butterfield received the national honor — one of the most sought after by artists throughout the world.

The local winner and her chaperone will be flown to Dallas, Tex., Oct. 23 for the Miss Teenage America Pageant and Coronation finals, to be televised live from Dallas on CBS-TV Oct. 29.

Prizes for the new Miss Teenage America will include a $10,000 four-year college scholarship to the school of her choice, a Comet Caliente convertible, 50 shares of stock in the Dr. Pepper Company, 10 shares of American Airlines stock, and $5000 cash, guaranteed from personal appearance fees. The first runner-up will receive a $4000 scholarship.

In addition to the trip to Dallas, the local winner will receive a $500 wardrobe from Sears of Northland. The four local runners-up will receive wardrobes ranging in value from $50 to $200.

Starting Sept. 4, 25 girls will compete in each of four semi-final eliminations to select five finalists for the Miss Teenage Columbus finals on Oct. 3. The first semi-final will be held at the Youth Center during the Ohio State Fair while the remaining three will be at the Sheraton-Columbus Hotel.

Entry blanks for the Miss Teenage Columbus contest are available at all Sears Stores, Lincoln - Mercury dealers, American Airlines ticket offices, in Dr. Pepper six packs and at many record stores.

Mrs. George O. Petrie, public relations and Mrs. Marjorie Hewitt, president, will greet the guests. This is a Ways and Means project for the year 1965-1966.

New Group Interested In Cleft Lip, Palate Children

The "Bright Promises" will meet on Tuesday, Aug. 24, 7:30 p.m., home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hille, 3817 Morris-rd.

Dr. Fred Haring, orthodontist, will speak and show slides. A question and answer period will follow.

"Bright Promises" is a group interested in the problem of the child with the cleft lip and/or cleft palate.

The group was started earlier this year by three Columbus mothers, Mrs. Gerald R. Bott, 711 S. Broadleight; Mrs. Albert Castrodale, Jr., 898 Carolyn-av and Mrs. Hull Taylor 3511 Dresden-av.

There are aproximately 25 couples now belonging to the group. They meet monthly at the home of one of the members and have a guest speaker, whose work is related to some specific phase of the problem.

John Terry, M.D., William Porterfield, M.D. both Columbus plastic surgeons, and Robert Stimpert, speech pathologist at the Hearing and Speech Center of Columbus and Central Ohio, are the professional advisors for the group.

A cleft lip (or hare lip) is a cleft of the upper lip, which can occur on either side or both sides.

A cleft palate is an opening in the roof of the mouth, caused by the failure of the two palatal processes to fuse.

The cleft lip and/or cleft palate occur in approximately 1 in 750-800 births in the United States. It is one of the most common birth defects.

Much can be done surgically to help these children. The cleft lip is usually repaired when the child is two or three months old. The cleft palate repair is accomplished at about 18 months.

Anyone desiring further information about the group may contact Mrs. Bott, Mrs. Castrodale, or Mrs. Taylor.

In many businesses, today will end at five o'clock. Those bent on success, however, make today last from yesterday right through tomorrow.

Columbus Tax: How Local?

The legality of the Columbus city income tax has been challenged by Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford, an attorney and foremost local advocate of statewide city income tax reform legislation. Columbus City Attorney John C. Young says Twyford's contentions would not be sustained by Ohio courts.

It may take a court action to clarify the question of legality. But there is no denying that Twyford's contentions are stirring considerable interest — particularly among non-residents of Columbus who must pay the tax.

Virtually no one will question the need for the city income tax in Columbus. There is a fair amount of support for the idea that non-residents who earn their living in Columbus should not totally escape the income tax; that they should compensate the city for enjoying basic city services.

The controversy centers on a Columbus income tax ordinance which virtually preempts such a tax in most suburban communities. Notwithstanding a recent Ohio Supreme Court ruling allowing both the city of employment and the city of residence to tax the same income, local government leaders are reluctant to take such a step. And well they should be! Such "double taxation" would surely result in a voters' revolt which would knock out the good tax with the bad.

But fairness demands that the plight of the suburban communities be considered. They, too, are growing. They face problems similar to those faced by Columbus when the "core" city went to the income tax. The suburban communities, too, face the problems of needed expansion of city services, capital improvements and recreational facilities.

Some Columbus city officials answer the problem by saying the suburban communities "never should have happened," or they give the cure-all answer "Let them annex to Columbus." The more realistic approach would be to realize that these suburban communities "have happened," and that, for most, the question of annexation is long since a dead issue.

Twyford's latest "blast" in his two-year campaign reminds us of the story of a farmer who sold a mule to a neighbor. He told the buyer that the animal would work best if treated with understanding and kindness. The neighbor returned the following day to complain that the mule just wouldn't get up.

The former owner went to the mule and hit him solidly over the head with a plank, whereupon the mule arose to the task at hand. "I thought," said the new owner, "that I was to treat this mule with understanding and kindness."

"That's true," said the former owner, "but you've got to get his attention first."

Whatever else Mayor Twyford is doing in challenging the Columbus city income tax, he has certainly gotten attention for the problem of most suburban communities. Let's begin to treat the problem with understanding and kindness before Twyford beats that poor old mule to death.

THE OTHER SIDE Of The Story

By Robert W. Relder

THE PROPAGANDA war has never been more intense. Group Research, Inc., founded four years ago as a private, non-profit organization to counteract the John Birch Society and others of the extremist stripe, has been getting out an effective news letter.

Its current effort points out that the latest entry in the radical-right stream of paperback books is called "That Man From Minnesota" and is a slashing attack on Hubert Humphrey. The cover of the first 25,000 copies had a swastika in the field of an American flag, along with the question "Will Hubert Humphrey put a swastika on our flag?" Later editions deleted the fascist emblem and the question.

Author of the 128-page job is Richard P. Jennett, a free-lance writer whose work has appeared in the John Birch Society magazine and other far-right publications. Jennett created the "Joyce Press" for the occasion and also runs — with his wife, Joyce — a post office box in Holliston, Mass., called "The Spirit of '76 House" which deals in Bibles, pen-shaped tear gas guns and right-wing literature.

Jennett's theme appears on the opening page: "Humphrey has, despite his good intentions, strayed down paths blazed earlier by Fascist and National Socialist (Nazi) dictators Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler."

And Ray Bliss wonders why he has problems? ? ?

To the Editor:

The residents of Harris and Vanderberg-avs wish to thank the Division of Traffic Regulation and Engineering and in particular, Mr. Robert D. McMillen, for honoring our petition to put a stop sign at this corner.

To the Editor:

Thank you so much for your wonderful co-operation in using the material our Girl Scout Roundup Correspondent, Cheryl Porter, sent back from Idaho.

There was something very comforting to parents of the girls and indeed all of us to see the stories in the paper. From what I've heard the girls were so busy at Roundup many of them didn't take time to write home! The stories you carried gave us all a chance to know they were doing fine without running water and all our accepted conveniences.

Eloise M. (Mrs. L. F.) Gruber

Want you to know how I have enjoyed reading Cheryl Porter's Girl Scout roundup articles.

She has given us a wonderful description of their activities, writing in a very easy style. Hope she can continue writing.

An Editor's Outlook . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

'Letting Down The Bars' Breeds Trouble

Under the present McCarran-Walter Immigration Act, the United States is the most generous of all nations in its immigration policy. It not only admits about 200,000 more newcomers a year than any other country, but it is one of the few countries on earth that excludes no nation.

Jenkin

Yet the Johnson Administration is mounting a massive attack on what restrictions we have and Congress may, indeed, be stampeded into a "liberalized" bill that will open the gates to an inflow from the backward the poor and the overcrowded nations of the world.

Briefly, the proposed bill ends the preference for immigrants from the British Isles and northern Europe. It claims to increase by less than 7,000 the present annual immigrant quota. True, but a weasel. For it transfers all non-used quotas into a common pot. Since North Europe and the U.K. fall by 50 to 60 thousand a year to use their present quotas, this would be added to the number of newcomers admitted.

But there's much more. Non-quota status would be extended to all parents, wives and children, not merely of U.S. citizens, but of resident aliens, as well. A man with a permanent visa to the United States could bring over the whole family without any restriction. Present prohibitions against the immigration of mental defectives, the insane, the epileptic, etc., would be eliminated.

All Latin America would remain quota-free. Any Latin proposing to take up permanent residence in the U.S. is supposed to satisfy an American consul as to his financial responsibility. But this is easily evaded. Right now, we are getting a lot of World's Fair "citizens," i.e. Latins who buy a 10-percent-down plane ticket to New York, ostensibly to see the fair, and who then refuse to go home.

It is further proposed to add Jamaica, Trinidad and Tobago to the quota-free Latin America list. Trinidad has the largest Hindu population in the western world. Right now, Britain is stiffening its immigration policy toward these islands even though they are part of the British Commonwealth.

There are approximately a million Chinese in Latin America. These are currently counted as Orientals, but the new law would make Latins of them. The birth rate of American Chinese is three times the birth rate of white Americans.

We are already the most generous of all nations when it comes to letting in political refugees quota-free. Between 1948 and 1961 we admitted 715,000 displaced persons. We have added 250,000 Cuban refugees. Leaders of crowded countries may soon be tempted to start persecuting any unpopular minority on the theory that Uncle Sam will take them in.

This fraudulent bill is being sold to Americans on the ground that our present law hurts America's "image" in the eyes of the world. We are told we must divest ourselves of ethnic favoritism in immigration if we are to remain popular. Popular?

Let's look at a few samples of immigration restrictions imposed by foreign nations:

USSR — no immigrants except by special arrangements. Australia — no non-whites. Switzerland — no immigrants. Argentina and Venezuela — no colored immigrants. Canada — Asiatics practically excluded. Central America — no Asiatics or Middle Easterners. Jordan, Morocco — long residence and must know Arabic. Israel — only Jews invited. Liberia — no immigrants who are not of Negro descent. Turkey—must have Turkish background. Japan — no immigrants.

Now, let's grasp a nettle. The new-think claims that a man must stand convicted of bigotry if he believes that the people from one country might make better American citizens than people from another.

Why should we check our brains in fear of this charge? Who thinks America would be what it is today if it had drawn its immigrants largely from Arabs or Hottentots or Mongolians or Sicilians? There are certain requirements for making a highly-industrial representative republic work, and certain peoples are just plainly better at it than others.

In March, 1924, The New York Times said editorially:

"A country has a right to say who shall and shall not come in. It is not for any foreign country to determine our immigration policy. The basis for restriction must be chosen with a view not to the interest of any groups in this country, whether racial or religious, but rather with a view to the country's best interests. The great test is assimilability. Will the newcomers fit into American life readily? Is their culture sufficiently akin to our own?

"Certain groups do not fuse easily, but endeavor to keep alive their racial distinctions when they settle among us. They seek to create foreign blocs in our midst."

The New York Times has since changed its mind, but a lot of Americans will think that's a mighty fine editorial.

Talk About Escalation!

Frosting on the Cake

BY "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

The advances in physical well-being of school children right from the start is a refreshing exception to some of the faults of elementary education. Children are being discovered early in school who can't see, can't hear, can't demonstrate any degree of motor-sensory dependability. Now, at too long last, some intelligent attention is being given to the emotional age graph of youngsters.

The doctors and dentists and hpysical therapists are doing an amazing job—and more power to them.

We still hear far too much about the "old-fashioned teacher" who is "behind the times." Much of that griping is silly because many of them learned out of experience things about children that no theoretical professor can teach or put into a book.

The various schools for counselors are beginning to realize that "no two kids are alike." Despite the constant conformistic mania now sweeping the country, every child is an individual and that singleness of identity is something to preserve.

The question of discipline has started to come back into sane focus. It is too bad when some able and dedicated teacher, who truly loves kids, blows her stack and "takes the little ruffian apart" and some lamebrain parent has the teacher arrested for assault and battery. No wonder we can't build reform schools fast enough or big enough to handle our crime splurge.

Bells Will Toll Soon

"Parents' Independence Day" falls on Sept. 8 this year. That's when school bells ring to open the fall term for most of the area's students. The event will be celebrated on Sept. 7 in some areas of Franklin County.

Most schools are now in the process of registering pupils and setting class schedules. To paraphrase a typing exercise familiar to most students: Now is the time for all good parents to come to the aid of their school district.

This means, simply, to avoid the last minute rush. If your "little genius" is entering school for the first time, get all the enrollment procedures out of the way before opening day of school. Check now with school officials to determine that he has the proper immunization shots required by state law.

Early enrollment of first-time pupils is a help to both the parent and school officials. But more important, it will ease the stress, strain and frightening confusion for the little ones who are entering an entirely new world.

Students new to a district, or who are transferring from one school to another within a district, must register prior to opening day. Ohio's immunization law requires that those entering junior and senior high schools must have, or be in the process of receiving, a successful smallpox vaccination and three injections for poliomyelitis.

The various school districts follow specific procedures for pupil registration. The wise will be prepared through early registration.

OUR PRESIDENTS

Here are a few facts good to know about our Presidents.

Thirty-five men have been President, but with 36 administrations, because Benjamin Harrison was President between the two terms of Grover Cleveland.

Beginning with George Washington, 20 Presidents have been of the Republican persuasion, 15 of the Democratic. This allows for changes in party labels and political philosophies.

The Presidency has existed 176 years from 1789, when Washington took his first oath, to 1965. During that time, the average Democratic term has been longer, or rather the Democrats have served more years than have the Republicans.

The longest tenure was that of F. D. Roosevelt, just over 12 years. With four inaugurations, he was the only one with more than two. The shortest term was that of William Henry Harrison. He died after only one month in office.

Eight Presidents have died in office, four of them by assassination. W. H. Harrison, Taylor, Harding and F. D. Roosevelt were the four to die of sickness. Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley and Kennedy were assassinated.

Of the eight elevated from the vice-presidency by a President's death, four were elected President in the following elections. They were T. Roosevelt, Coolidge, Truman and Lyndon Johnson.

The oldest President at death, in or out of office, was John Adams, at 90. The youngest was Kennedy at 46. Twenty-eight were over 50 at inauguration, eight under 50. Cleveland was in both numbers, being 48 his first term, 56 in his second.

It says here . . .
No woman has ever been President.

Guest Pulpit . . .

The oldest book in the world, the Bible, is still the world's "best seller." Its circulation is now reaching toward the three-billion mark.

No other book, in whole or in part, has been translated into as many languages — more than 1,165! No other book has traveled all over Africa, reached the heart of Asia, found its way into remote islands of the far-flung Pacific, penetrated the frozen wilderness of Eskimo-land, and, besides, is found on the shelves of every scholarly library in the world. No other book has exercised such overpowering influence on the lives, history and culture of whole races of people.

Brehmer

The historical value of the Bible cannot be overemphasized, for no other book reaches into the past as distantly or gives such a detailed account of ancient happenings. In its opening chapters, written more than 3,470 years ago, it quotes nearly a dozen written documents dating back hundreds, some thousands of years earlier. Whereas there are only fragments, or possibly one or two manuscripts of other ancient history books, the Bible can boast of having more than 14,000 manuscripts in the libraries today, some of which were written before the birth of Christ.

In literary value, scholars give the Bible the highest rating as the world's finest literature. They say it surpasses the writings of Homer, the orations of Cicero, the poetry and lyrics of Pindar, and the philosophy of Plato. The finest specimens of narratives, historical records, legal documents, songs, poetry, proverbs, oratory, sermons, romances, dramas, and other literary forms are found in the Bible. However, surprising as it may seem, this book's greatest worth to us does not lie in its historical or literary merits.

It was created and preserved for a purpose. "For all the things that were written aforetime were written for our instruction, that through our endurance and through the comfort from the Scriptures we might have hope." (Rom. 15:4) God in his mercy saw fit to preserve the experiences of those ancient people that such might serve "as examples," and as "a warning to us upon whom the ends of the systems have arrived." (1 Cor. 10:11) We therefore do well to give heed to them, as it is further written: "All Scripture" is "beneficial for teaching, for reproving, for setting things straight, for disciplining in righteousness," that we may be "completely equipped for every good work." (2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

No doubt about it, "the sayings of Jehovah are pure sayings." — Psalm 12:6.

ONE MAN'S Opinion . . .

The current fad among the "young, angry set" is a flagrant refusal to answer the draft call.

The popular kiddie music of the day has even dedicated a song to the woes of the aspiring young man, nipped in the bud by his nasty Uncle Sam.

Wittenmeier

I'm not fooling anyone with a fervent, personal embrace of the military. I'm counting the minutes until my duty days have elapsed.

In five and a half years you learn that most of those old jokes about the military aren't really jokes at all.

It is unfortunate that a young man, fresh out of college and ready to plunge into his life's work must delay his plans for two or three years.

Sure it's unfortunate— but so were Munich, Pearl Harbor and Viet Nam.

The sad thing is not that the objectors "don't want to" but that they've failed to accept the responsibilities of growing up.

You probably can count the youngsters on one hand who like to brush their teeth every day or eat spinach before they get their slice of cake.

But someone wiser has decided clean teeth and leafy vegetables are vital to good health. Doing what they're told then is an early lesson in responsibility.

Every club or organization has rules and obligations to follow in order to maintain membership. If you don't like the rules, you get out of the organization.

Military service in this country is an obligation. Nobody pretended to be overjoyed about it at Valley Forge, Gettysburg or Iwo Jima.

But they choked down the spinach to make sure they'd get their cake.

Most unfortunate today is the growing belief among too many of the younger generation that soon not only will they be given the cake with no-strings-attached — but somebody will be along right about suppertime to spoon-feed them.

Little Buckeye Gridders To Register Tomorrow

The Little Buckeyes football team, the returning Key West, Florida Bowl champs and two-time defending champions of the Ohio Valley Conference, will have registration and tryouts tomorrow (Friday) at 10 a.m. at the Johnson Park Junior High School playground.

All boys ages 11 through 14 who do not exceed 120 pounds are eligible to participate with the Little Buckeyes. (The team is not confined to East Side youngsters as was once the case).

IN EVENT of rain, all candidates should report the following day (Saturday) at the same time and place.

For further information, contact Athletic Director Tom C. Krieger (BE. 1-1777) or coaches Tom Ellifritz (BE. 7-1296) or Ron Allen (BE. 7-0940).

Besides their annual Labor Day camping trip at the Big Brother's Camp in the Hocking Hills (two days of hiking, swimming etc., intra-squad game on Labor Day), the Little Buckeyes have some big plans for the '65 season.

THE LITTLE Bucks will stage a benefit bowl game Sept. 18 at Eastmoor High against an out-of-town team to raise money for the Eastern Kiwanis Club.

Also on tap is a return trip to Florida to defend their Key West Bowl title — if the Little Buckeyes compile a winning season.

MAVERICK

By Richard L. Pough

WITH MUDDY SHOES

At the February convention of the Outdoor Writers of Ohio, Governor Rhodes spoke at great length about the recreational future of Ohio. At that time he broke the news of the Wonderful World of Ohio magazine that was to replace the hide-bound Conservation Bulletin which had been losing popularity for the past five years. He told in glowing words how his administration would tell the world of the outdoor joys to be found in our home state.

I'M SURE there were many starry-eyed scribes who took that promise back home to their readers. It sounded good, real good. For many years OWOers have been wooed by other states. Alabama, Florida, Kentucky (twice) and North Carolina (twice) have sent buses into Ohio, filled them with outdoor writers and taken them to those competing states where they were wined and dined for many days. I have been in attendance at all the trips and although I was treated like a king, I had a bit of a guilty conscience for writing of states that were competing with my home state for the all-important tourist dollar.

I was delighted to hear those February promises for this, I thought, was the beginning of a good fight to hold our own vacationing residents. Little did I know I would, myself, prove these promises false.

Outdoor Writer Vice-President Ken Kern of Oberlin was contacted by a public relations man for Ford Motor Company. The plan advanced to the writers was for a Ford camper caravan to tour several state parks, starting at the new Atwood Lodge and winding up at Hueston Woods near Cincinnati. We all liked the idea and the plans went along smoothly until the time arrived to make sure we could get camp space at Lake Hope to stay over night.

WE ALL FELT that at last we could write a few yards of copy for our home state and do away with any guilt complex left over from the out-of-state trips. Ken had arranged for the campers for each writer and my job was to make sure the writers would be hosted by someone who could explain the facilities at each stop. When I started calling the Division of Parks to get things moving, I was chagrined to say the least.

Not only was it apparent the Parks people weren't interested in seeing us at the campsites—they wouldn't even reserve space for the writers or guarantee that space would be available at all.

It would have been nice to get the dozen campers parked as a group for the always-present bull sessions and to trade comments on each park. I was even assured that the writers would have to pay the standard fee to enter each campground.

I knew that, if the writers were subjected to such offhand treatment, there would be more than a few yards of copy written and it would all be adverse publicity.

I started about halfway up the ladder, calling Parks people, trying to get things ironed out. After five phone calls, I gave up. Not until later that day, after due pressure had been applied, did I get a call from the higher-ups assuring me that the proper welcomes would be waiting for my scribes.

IN THINKING BACK over the episode, I can only suppose that Governor Rhodes had failed to tell his underlings about the "Wonderful World of Writers," and how he desperately needs their cooperation.

With all the odd-smelling changes going on this year in the Natural Resources Department, I would imagine that the guiding officials would be eager and willing to get the writers out of Columbus on a long camping trip.

Grandpa always said "You're never a hero at home"—and I guess he was right.

SEQUOIA'S UNBEATEN SWIM QUARTETS

Shell Dealers Offer Patrons Jet Tickets

With an eye on filling Jet Stadium for the local IL entries' final Sunday doubleheader of the season, the Shell Oil dealers of Greater Franklin County have purchased all the general admission tickets for the Columbus-Jacksonville twin-bill Aug. 29.

The tickets are available at all Shell stations which display a baseball in the window for only 40 cents each with the purchase of eight gallons of gasoline.

One lucky Shell customer will drive home in a new 1965 Ford Mustang which will be given away at the game.

Your neighborhood Shell dealer, who wishes to show his appreciation to his customers, offers this opportunity for you to help boost the Jets home to a first-place finish in the '65 International League pennant race.

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Jim Lorimer Revisited . . .

The U.S. gals' track victory over their Polish counterparts last week in Warsaw was a lot bigger than their two-point win spread.

Maybe this first feminine American win over the Poles since 1960 wasn't exactly the shot heard round the world but the volley might traverse that distance by the next track Olympics in '68.

THERE'S ONE guy around the Capital City's who's chirping a brighter tune about U.S. Olympic stock — galwise — these days.

Wittenmeier

"This country's women track competitors have improved considerably in the last couple of years," beamed Jim Lorimer last week as he talked about the progression of the U.S. women's track and field programs.

Lorimer, president of the Ohio Track Club and one of the state's most avid cinder promoters, has more than an average interest in U.S. Olympic talent.

A COUPLE of years ago Jim had a sad story to tell at a Civitan meeting we attended. America's female track and field program was pretty ragged, with the future not much brighter.

What made the recent Warsaw victory so significant was (1) the Polish women's team was stronger than usual and (2) the U.S. lost out in the sprint events (where we were considered strongest) and still had enough to win.

The gradual improvement of a women's program over the past two years has been the result of a broader base of participation for U.S. gals, according to Lorimer.

IN FACT, the rate of development and improvement has bypassed that of the male athletes. "In the recent meet with the Russians, the U.S. women actually narrowed the point gap while the men were getting beat for the first time," Lorimer added.

To bolster Jim's point was the '61 showing of our women athletes in Poland. A first and second in the middle distance events last week were swapped for the third and fourth four years ago.

A first in the javelin event this year showed marked advancement over a fourth in '61.

FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD Californian Marie Mulder, who turned in a 2:10.2 to win the 800-meter run at Warsaw, already has logged a 2:07 in that event which Lorimer tabs "tremendous for a woman competitor."

Jim figures the Coast teenager will be a real threat to her Russian opponents in '68 when she will be the ripe old age of 18.

Lorimer admittedly was satisfied with the local public response to the National AAU gals championships held in Jim's back yard (Worthington) last month.

"WE'D SURE like to bring the '68 Olympic trials here," Lorimer added. If this could be arranged it would take care of one of Jim's big headaches — finding nearby competition for his Ohio Track Club team.

Jim sent six of his charges to Buffalo last weekend and still laments "too few opportunities" for his club members to compete without traveling great distances.

Lorimer blamed America's recent defeat at the hands of the Russians on a number of things but basically on "overconfidence" and "miscalculations."

DISAGREEING with one popular belief that the NCCA-AAU squabble was to blame for the defeat, Jim suggested that the "good will" side tours before the Russian meet took their toll, concluding that our athletes were not in the best of shape, physically and mentally for the meet.

"Remember too," Jim added, "that this is a post-Olympic year. There's a new crop of athletes coming in who won't be 'peaking' for two or three more years."

On that NCAA-AAU conflict, Lorimer sees it resolved by the '68 Olympics, pointing to approaching hearings by the Senate Commerce Committee as a solution.

"PERSONALLY, I would have preferred to see executive action," Lorimer said. "President Kennedy's handling of the situation was good. But he was an exceptional executive in his perception of the physical needs of this country."

The OTC prexy also threw bouquets in the direction of the local Recreation Department Junior Olympic programs.

"Some 1000 girls participated in the program locally this summer. It gives us an opportunity to study results and recruit one or two of the best prospects into our Olympic Development Program," Lorimer said.

"WE PUT our own kids in the competition. They usually do real well and make a good impression on their competitors. We have no difficulty in recruiting as a result."

"The really unfortunate thing is that, in too many communities, no one is watching the results," Jim concluded.

Lorimer is also encouraged by the grass-roots expansion of girls' track programs on the high school level locally. Several meets have already been scheduled for next spring with some 15 to 20 Central Ohio teams involved.

"WE'RE MAKING some big gains locally," Lorimer said proudly, pointing to two of his own OTC members.

Jim speaks highly of Worthington's Laura Luedemann, a 15-year-old lass highly skilled in a number of track events, and Upper Arlington's Julie Farr, a high jumper who could become a real challenge to Columbusite Estelle Baskerville.

But the proof of the pudding has to wait for 1968 when the speculation on U.S. Women's Olympic advancement will be proven fact or fantasy.

BUT FOR now, the Jim Lorimers of the USA can afford to take on new optimism and the hope that Aug. 8, 1965, at Warsaw was a pleasant preview of coming attractions.

Electric Company Asks For Decrease In Rates

The Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company filed an application with the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio early this month requesting reduction in its electric rates for "optional high use residential," All Electric Home" and high voltage general service customers throughout the company's service area.

The rate decrease is the second step in a system wide reduction of rates that will total $2,650,000.

The company stated that in spite of increases in local taxes in the various political subdivisions in its service area, and recently increased labor costs, it is making the reduction due to improved operating efficiencies, increasing industrial growth, greater use of electric energy by its customers, and the lowering of the federal income tax.

The new general service rates will not only mean a reduction in cost to present major industry and encourage their expansion in the 25 county area but will be a healthy factor in attracting new industry to the area the company said.

New "All Electric Home" rates are especially important to the building and electrical heating industries. It will mean a savings of more than five percent on an average 1100 to 1200 sq. ft. total electric home bill per year.

COMPTOMETER figure-specialists such as Millicent Ciancone, 58 N. Sylvan-av, are found in every major industry and every major city in the world. Millicent is a graduate of Comptometer School here and now works for her alma mater.

School Has Courses About Comptometers

The increasing reliance on computers and systems automation in industry and business has created a broad new horizon for comptometer figure-work specialists, according to Mrs. Ellen Clark, manager of Comptometer School at 79 E. State-st.

"Comptometers and electronic brains have tremendously increased the need to compile and prepare vital statistical data. Much of this today is prepared by comptometer specialists."

Many of these specialists are graduates of the local Comptometer School.

Located in the Hartman Theatre Building for over 30 years, it is one of 62 company schools and 30 franchised schools owned and operated by the Victor Comptometer Corporation.

Mr. Georgie Bartoe, day school instructor, says most students master the comptometer with amazing speed. Graduates, apparently, are much in demand and find additional benefits.

Comptometer School now offers day and night classes, and expects to start Saturday classes by the end of this year.

IBM key punch training has also been recently added to the school's curriculum to meet an increasing demand.

Recently, too, the Victor Corporation has entered the Temporary Office Service field. This activity, known as Victor Temporaries, not only offers graduates assistance in finding employment but also provides local businesses with typists, stenographers, bookkeepers, key punch operators and other office personnel. Inventories, payrolls and other calculating services are also available at Comptometer School.

Night classes for students are held Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 9 p.m., under the instruction of Mrs. Betty Rae Holley.

Harris has been named manager of the new Youth Opportunity Center which offers youths between 16 and 21 specialized professional assistance in job-finding, counseling and guidance, testing and training. The facility is part of the Ohio State Employment Service, a division of the Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation.

Lazarus '65 Business Report Is Optimistic

At a meeting Tuesday some 200 members of the Columbus press, radio and TV heard Charles Y. Lazarus, president of the F & R Lazarus and Co., predict an upward trend in business nationally for the balance of this year and into the early part of 1966.

"Columbus will continue to do a little better than the country as a whole," he said. "Total employment, in the Columbus metro area, is forecast up three percent over a year ago, and consumer income is forecast about six and one-half percent higher than a year ago."

This favorable business outlook will be reflected at Lazarus by greater emphasis on the consumer desire to be creatively individual in fashion and home decorating. As a result, a series of new speciality merchandise shops and size specialty shops will open soon in Lazarus Downtown store.

Announcement was also made that Eastland Shopping Center, in which the fourth Lazarus store will be located, will be open on S. Hamilton-rd in 1967. Eastland is to be the first completely air-conditioned closed mall shopping center in this part of the country.

'Back-To-School' Celebration Set Next Week At Lane Ave. Center

This is the time of year when fairs around the country are getting headline attention.

One fair, of a somewhat different nature but holding equal appeal to children, young adults and parents, is the "Back-To-School" Fair which is being staged Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Aug. 26-28, at the Lane Shopping Center.

Forty managers of the 40 stores there have put their heads together in a cooperative effort to create a "Back-To-School" Style Center where the very newest in school necessities will be introduced during the three-day "Back-To-School" Fair.

Like all fairs, besides the wide array of latest merchandise from the country's leading manufacturers, there'll be other attractions. One will be the Haircut-Snapshot Contest for boys and girls. Parents will want to bring their camera along for this event.

Candid snapshots taken of their children in the Center's barbershop or beauty shops may win a valuable merchandise coupon. In addition, winning pictures will appear in the Spectator.

Some lucky visitor to the Back-To-School Fair will win merchandise certificates worth $25, $50, $75 and $100, with nothing to buy, no jingles to write, no puzzles to solve.

The Back-To-School Style Center has been created by the merchants at the Lane Shopping Center to provide a convenient one-stop location for the pre-school, high school and back-to-college crowd. The Center is located on W. Lane-av between Olentangy River-rd and Scioto River-rd.

News Stories Aid Twyford

By FRANK RYAN

It has been almost 18 years since Columbus City Council passed the first income tax ordinance. Subsequent events in the life of a rapidly growing city have dimmed memories of those who helped bring the tax into being and city residents who voted approval of the tax.

But there is one memory source that is neither dimmed by time, nor altered from its original impression. That source is the printed page of the newspaper — the recorder at the same time of both current events and history.

And in the newspaper accounts of 1947-'48 and 1956, Mayor George Twyford of Reynoldsburg can find some strong support (as this reporter did) for some of the main points he has stressed in claiming that Colmbus is without legal authority to impose an income tax.

Council met in special session of Nov. 28, 1947, a Friday evening, to conduct a public hearing on a proposed city income tax. The session lasted until near midnight and ended with council casting a unanimous vote in favor of a one-half percent income tax, effective Jan. 1, 1948. The measure was immediately signed by then-Mayor James A. Rhodes.

Opposition was particularly strong among local organized labor. CIO leadership was unalterably opposed to imposing the form of income tax passed by council. AF of L leaders called on council to let the voters decide the issue. It was a "foregone conclusion," newspaper accounts said, that the issue would be decided by a vote of the people.

Held Special Election

In January, 1948, council yielded to petitions and set a ballot date of June 8, 1948, for a special election. Council purposely avoided putting the question on the May Primary in a presidential election year when a record 133,000 Columbus residents were registered voters. The CIO was working toward a heavy voter turnout for the choosing of state and national candidates in the May Primary. News stories recounted that council wanted no part of opposition geared to an important primary election get-out-the-vote drive.

One daily newspaper repeatedly reported that both the Communist Party of Franklin County and the Progressive Party local leadership joined the CIO in opposing the city income tax measures. (The Progressive Party was pledged to the presidential candidacy of former vice-president Henry Wallace).

Local AF of L leadership gave an 11th-hour endorsement to the city tax issue, but not before being assured that the one-half percent tax would not be raised by council subsequent to approval by the electorate. One form of protection was a public pledge from councilmen, by resolution, that they would not hike the tax for the life of the ordinance.

But, perhaps an even more important factor was a published comment concerning Section 45 of the Columbus City Charter which specified then, as it does now, that no ordinance approved by the electorate may be repealed, amended or supplemented, except by a vote of the electorate.

With less than 40 percent of the city's eligible voters going to the polls, the ordinance carried by a vote of 34,000 to 24,000. It carried an expiration date of Dec. 31, 1952.

Extended By Council

The next official action on the income tax came in 1952 when council, by ordinance, extended the life of the one-half percent tax by four years. The voter-approved tax expired on Dec. 31, 1952, and the council-imposed tax began Jan. 1, 1953. And therein lay the "rub" and the nub of the taxing authority controversy.

Did council amend a voter-approved tax by extending its life? If so, it would seem to be a clear-cut violation of Section 45 of the City Charter and, therefore, invalid. City Attorney John C. Young says that the question here is "academic" only because the voter action on the city income tax in 1956 gave Council the right to impose a one percent tax.

If what Young says is true, what the voters did in 1956 has, until now, been one of the best-kept secrets in the annals of city government. Certainly, few, if any, of the electorate could have realized the proposed 1956 City Charter amendment was a request by council to double the city income tax.

Final and best evidence of this is the vote by which the amendment was passed—76,007 to 32,080. That's a majority of better than 70 percent, and Old John Q. just doesn't vote that strongly to double a tax he is paying. Besides, all publicity on the City Charter amendment emphasized that the voter's "X" for the amendment would mean a limitation of council's power to tax.

In fact, the Columbus Sunday Dispatch of Nov. 4, 1956, made the issue ever so clear with a two-column story (reproduced as part of this story). And if there were some who placed less than full confidence in what they read in the Dispatch, there was a story by Kenneth Campbell in the rival Columbus Citizen which carried the following information:

"THE VOTE WILL NOT decide whether the tax is increased to a full one percent. This has already been ordered by City Council and the city will begin Jan. 1 to collect the one percent . . .

"IF THE MAJORITY of voters ballot FOR the amendment, it will mean that council cannot boost the tax beyond the one percent it has already approved.

"IF A MAJORITY vote AGAINST the amendment, it will mean that council can approve an additional increase, beyond the one percent, at some future time, if it deems it necessary."

What Did '56 Ballot Do?

The wording on the 1956 ballot (also reproduced in this story) gave no indication that Columbus voters were being asked to increase a tax. Nor does the approved amendment—listed in the City Charter as Section 36—say anything about the increase in tax. It says:

"The power of council to levy an income tax shall be limited to a tax of not to exceed one per centum (1%) per annum."

It is certain that council has been told by the voters that no tax in excess of one percent may be levied without an electoral vote. It would also seem clear that council has never gotten from the people the authority to levy anything beyond the originally approved one-half percent income tax.

A basic question is whether council can place an issue in the hands of the voters, and subsequently take the right of decision away from the electorate. The answer is clear when the voters reject or repeal an ordinance. The City Charter says, "Ordinances rejected or repealed by an electoral vote shall not be re-enacted, in whole or in part, except by an electoral vote."

Does the electorate enjoy the same rights in approving issues that it does in rejecting them? All this reporter knows is what he has read in the papers, and he hasn't seen the answer to that one yet.

AMENDMENT WILL PUT CEILING ON CITY TAX

The proposed city charter amendment concerning the city income tax is proving to be the most confusing question to be decided Tuesday by Columbus voters.

Many residents erroneously believe the question is whether the income tax shall be increased. The question is whether a limit shall be placed on the tax that City Council may levy.

A vote "for" the amendment means that City Council cannot increase the tax beyond the one per cent which goes into effect Jan. 1. Any additional increase would have to be voted by residents.

A vote "against" the amendment means that City Council will retain its existing authority to levy any amount of city income tax it deems necessary.

The one percent tax goes into effect Jan. 1, regardless of Tuesday's vote.

Columbus Dispatch story of Nov. 4, 1956, pinpoints income tax City Charter Amendment presented to voters as a limiting matter only.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CHARTER OF THE CITY OF COLUMBUS

Shall the Charter of the City of Columbus be amended as provided by Ordinance No. 1924-56, passed by the Council of the City of Columbus, Ohio, on July 30, 1956, providing for the adoption of Supplemental Section 36 to read as follows:

Sec. 36. Income tax. The power of Council to levy an income tax shall be limited to a tax of not to exceed one per centum (1%) per annum. Schedule: That the adoption of Section 36 shall take effect and be in force from and after January 1, 1957.

and further providing that such proposed amendment submitted to the electors for their approval or rejection.

FOR THE AMENDMENT

AGAINST THE AMENDMENT

QUESTION BALLOT—Typical of a question ballot in the questions and issues ballot style is this one to be received by all Columbus voters after they sign poll books Nov. 6. It asks if the City Charter shall be amended to limit city council's income taxing power to one per cent.

The Nov. 6, 1956 ballot presented to Columbus voters gave no indication that electorate had any choice in doubling tax from one-half to one percent.

WBBA Standings

It's the Red Sox vs. the Braves in the Major League and the Red Sox vs. the Tigers in the Minor League playoff for all the Whitehall Boys Baseball Association marbles this week.

In the Major circuit, the Red Sox swept the best-of-three series with the Dodgers, 3-2 and 9-2, getting top-notch pitching on both occasions.

GARY MOBERLY picked up the first Sox victory on a five-hit, nine strikeout performance with teammate Dave Brobst providing the offense with a triple and double.

Dave McDonald hurled a six-hitter and fanned four in defeat.

The Sox pounded out 11 hits (two by Dave Heinmiller) to back up the two-hit hurling of George Thomas to sweep the series.

It was pretty much the same format in the Braves-Senator faceoffs, the Braves slipping by in the opener, 3-2, before finding the range in the second game, 17-4.

A pair of homers by Dean Miller and another by Mike Clickinger provided all the runs in the first win for the Braves as Miller checked the Senators on five hits.

Clickinger took over mound duties in the second tilt and served up a carbon-copy five hitter while his teammates collected 15 big hits, including four-baggers by Bobby Kennedy and Randy Morgan.

DAVE GETREU hit a homer for the losers—the latter named to the All-American WBBA team which will play an All-Star team from North American later this month. Teammate Bobby Trojack will be an alternate on the team.

Minor League action required the full three-game set but the American Division of the loop came to the fore with two AL representatives meeting in the playoff finals.

The Tigers took it on the chin from the Dodgers in the opener, 10-4, before sweeping the next two, 8-7 and 4-0.

DODGER HURLER Don Norris allowed 10 hits but only four runners came home in the opener as he bested the Tigers' Bruce Wallace.

Rick Percy and Dave Grover banged out triples for the Dodgers while Mike Tedrick did likewise for the losers.

Kenny Wellnitz whiffed 11 Dodgers and weathered a homer by Mark Huffman and a triple by Grover to pick up the Tigers' "equalizer."

WALLACE AND Gall cracked triples for the winners as Percy took the mound loss when Bobby Vogt knocked in the winning run with a triple.

Vogt continued his heroics in the rubber tilt in a big way — plating all four of the game's runs with a grand-slam homer in the very first frame.

Marty Glass picked up his second shutout of the season, fanning 13 and checking the Dodgers on five hits, the biggest a triple by Kevin Jessup.

GROVER TOOK the loss for the Dodgers despite sitting down 12 Tigers on strike-outs.

Tiger coach Frank Wellnitz praised the play of the Dodgers who gave his club a run for its money in the three-game series.

The Minor League Red Sox snapped back from an opening 11-10 setback at the hands of the Braves to take the series with back-to-back 7-1 and 9-7 verdicts.

THE SOX spent three pitchers in the opener but couldn't stop the Braves who capitalized on doubles by Billy Boyd and Steve Barker and the one-hit, 10-K hurling of Steve Gunter.

Errors hurt the Sox cause as the Braves got only two earned runs on six hits. Tim Stead collected the lone hit off Gunter.

Phil Harris and Bruce Phillips combined for a no-hitter as the Sox came back in a big way in the second tilt.

HARRIS TOILED for five frames, walking but one while whiffing 14 Brave batters. Harris and Tim Smith got triples for the winners while Chet Funk and Tim Dockery collected doubles.

Boyd went the distance for the Braves, striking out 13 and allowing three earned runs on eight hits.

RESNICK TURNED in the defensive play of the series in the first inning of the final game, making a somersaulting catch of Barrett's fly ball to left field.

Boyd had a triple and Barker a double for the losers. Tony Wolsfer, who struck out seven, took the loss.

Second place in both the Majors and Minors will be decided in a best-of-three series between the Braves and Dodgers and Dodgers and Senators, the same script which will be used to decide first place in the two WBBA loops.

Jewish Center Sports Roundup

Harv Wasserman was Gray's star player as he led his YYA team to a very narrow 18-17 win over Dick's Barber Shop. Hahv batted five for five and collected a home run.

Men who collected three hits were Hani Hara, Neil Rosen, Dick Levin, Rick Bender, Mike Goodman and Maury Topy.

HABOLD POST collected three long home runs and batted four for five to score as Dick's star player for the evening. Mike Honinberg went four-for-four and collected one home run for the losers.

Phil Finke, Joel Engelman, Jerry Topy, Mike Stein and Mike Honinberg were credited with three hits each for the Barbers.

In another close game Raybo Vending edged Richfield Construction, 20-19. Harv Handler, Steve Goodman, Mike Bernstein, Marty Kaufer, Ken Soloman and Jon Kaplin collected three hits each to keep their team ahead.

JEFF GOLD, Mel Finke, Henry Gutter, Gary Beim, Larry Shkolnik and Mark Levine tried hard to keep ahead of Raybo but just couldn't get Richfield Construction's name in the winner's column. Gutter batter four-for-four and was credited with a home run.

Construction To Start Soon On New Church

The last Mass in the temporary church of the Christ the King parish will be offered this Sunday, Aug. 22 at 5 p.m.

After that the 18-year-old church will be demolished so that a new church can be built on the site. Masses will be held in the school auditorium during the construction.

The new church, contemporary in design, is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1966. It will seat 1000 in the upper church and 400 in the lower church.

The parish was founded by Bishop Michael J. Ready in 1946, and Fr. Leo Brehm was named pastor. The present church was built in 1947 from two government barracks left on the parish's property.

In 1962, Fr. Brehm saw the need for a new church as the temporary one became more and more overcrowded. He began a fund raising campaign at the time.

The present pastor of Christ the King is Msgr. Francis Schwenderman, who succeeds Fr. Brehm after his death late last year.

In the boys' nine to 12 league Kae Avenue defeated Etna Road by a score of 5 to 1 and in the boys' 13 to 15 league Etna Road defeated Norton Field by 24 to 1.

In the girls' nine to 15 league Beechwood defeated Etna Road by a score of 19 to 1.

Norton Field...

Girls and junior boys softball teams at Norton Field lost their first games in the tournament to Kae Avenue. Senior boys softball teams beat Beechwood to go into the semi-finals where they lost to Etna Road.

A bike-decorating show was held Friday afternoon with over 50 entrants in the two categories.

Winners were as follows:

Most attractively decorated bike—Sandy Fletcher, Craig Burns and Butch Darnell; most unusually decorated — Jeff Fletcher, Brent McIver and Bobby Fletcher.

Kae Avenue...

Kae Avenue boys rallied after a less fortunate season to win the city-wide softball tournament. After defeating Norton Field in their first tournament game, they moved on to soundly defeat Etna Road 5 to 1 in the championship game.

Randy Morgan assured his team's tvictory with his home run against Etna Road. Mike Lowell was the winning pitcher in both games.

The girls' softball team did not fare as well. After winning their first game against Norton Field, they were defeated in the semi-finals by Etna Road.

Cathy Hickle and Sherry Meighen presented a troll on a key chain to Mr. Richards, and a pin in the shape of a blue furry cat (named Wollikins) to Mrs. Griffith.

Beechwood...

For the second year Beechwood girls' team is city champion. The girls were undefeated — both this year and last.

During the tournament they defeated East Main and then Etna Road to win the championship.

Both boys' teams were defeated in their first games of the tournament. The boys nine to 12 were defeated in their first game by Etna Road and boys 13 to 15 were defeated by Norton Field.

Senior Citizens

Highlights of the Senior Citizens bowling at Holiday Lanes on Aug. 12 were the 75 and 71 games of Hugh Parker, who is president of the Senior Citizens.

Mrs. Araminta Devis had games of 62 and 58 while Mrs. Irene Stupp had a good game of 64.

COLUMBUSITES IN WINDSOR — Columbus civic leaders stand in front of the seven-passenger Lear Jet of the Executive Jet Aviation Company Monday in Windsor, Ont. They are, from left, Clair Stebbens, aviation writer; J. Philip Gibbs, chairman of the airport commission; Kline Roberts, president of the Greater Columbus Chamber of Commerce (partly hidden); Bill Craig, co-pilot of the jet; Warren Cremean, Columbus service director and Tim Swearingen, pilot. The 570-mile-an-hour jet made the 352-mile round trip in less than an hour.

BACK IN THE STATES — Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner and Columbus C. of C. Executive Rosemary Martin combine to slice a piece of celebration cake. The beautiful pineapple-flavored, vanilla-frosted cake, declared Port Columbus has "gone International." More than 100 celebrants were on hand for the program.

FRANK ROAD SITE EYED

$700,000 Earmarked For Airport

Already Ohio's busiest airport, Port Columbus may have a little brother by the end of 1967—if $700,000 in the city capital improvement budget earmarked for use before the end of 1966 is put to work.

Long-time aviation studies have shown that with the rapid development of Port Columbus and its great use by commercial, private and various business craft, such a secondary airport as now being advocated is needed for Franklin County.

John Clifford, assistant airport superintendent, conceded that the most preferable site for a second air facility would be "in the southern part of the county—possibly in the Frank-rd area."

Bringing new attention to the air picture here was the official designation of Port Columbus as "an international port-of-entry" Monday, with a roundtrip Executive Jet Aviation flight to Windsor, Ont., and the cutting of a ribbon on the new U.S. Custom office here.

The international designation means that flights may come directly into Columbus from anywhere in the world without stopping first to have passengers and cargo processed at Cleveland.

Pilots need only to radio ahead to have custom inspectors at Port Columbus. Within a year, Port Columbus is expected to be a full-fledged international port, which would mean that inspectors would be on hand there night and day.

Congressman-at-large Robert Sweeney, Columbus Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner and Airport Superintendent Jack Bolton, who had worked to get Columbus the international status as far back as 1960, are all in agreement that Columbus in the next few years will need a secondary airport.

The secondary airport would be primarily for private and business aircraft. If it were situated in the southern part of the county, city officials generally feel that such a facility would spur the growth of this area in many new industrial and research type of industries which add hundreds of new jobs to area payrolls.

IN WHITEHALL

Apartment Road Concerns Council

Zoning "oats" sown by Whitehall's 1963 council in its last session of that year — the final meeting for lame duck members—are now being reaped by the city solons.

Rezoning to permit construction of Whitehall Park Apartments, now nearing completion at 4669 E. Main-st, just east of Whitehall Discount, was approved six to one at the special meeting held Dec. 21, '63.

The current council is now faced with the need to forestall the problem of added traffic from the 192-unit apartment on the busy Main-st artery, already congested at that point with Whitehall Discount shoppers.

The proposal of another access road behind the apartments — an extension of Mound-st from Shady Lane west — made by developer Seymour Luckoff is strongly protested by Ludington-st residents.

They object that the plan would make their homes an "island," with the new road at the back of their lots.

The proposed Mound-st extension, 20 feet wide and 315 feet long, paid for by Luckoff, would amount to a private drive, serving only as an access to the apartments.

Council delayed decision on the issue at Monday night's special meeting by tabling the matter, at the recommendation of Service Committee chairman Loren Mason, until the next regular meeting Sept. 7. Mason explained that more time was needed to study the problem.

The protesting residents and Seymour Luckoff, expecting that the issue was the reason for the special session, were on hand but were not invited to air their views.

Only official action taken at the meeting was the approval of curb cuts for Whitehall Park Apartments on E. Main-st, and for Rite Rug Co. at 4831 E. Main-st.

Paul Haytcher, city solicitor, Tuesday charged that the problem was "an example of imprudent zoning . . . caused by haste.

"Council," he continued, "has a real problem. And the solution proposed (for the access road) seems the best solution."

Councilman Ray Shipley believes that the apartments do not cause an appreciable increase in traffic. "It's shoppers who add to traffic," he said, "not apartments."

He added that he would not favor insisting on the Mound-st extension over the protests of residents.

An alternate suggestion, being considered by council, is the extension of McAllister-av, also dedicated as is the Mound-st extension.

CATV, Electric Firms Will Sign Poles Pact

A joint use agreement, to permit use of electric poles for cable television installations in Whitehall, was to be signed today, Aug. 26, at 1:30 p.m. at the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. office.

Expected to be present at the signing were the president and other officers of Multi-Channel Cable Co. as well as electric company officials.

The agreement brings the total number of franchises held by Multi-Channel to eight. Only two of the operations are actually in service.

Signal surveys for the location of an antenna locally are in progress this week with three sites being considered for a final selection. One location is in Whitehall, and the other two are near the city.

The firm will also establish an office in Whitehall.

Paul Haytcher, Whitehall, city solicitor, confirmed that Multi-Channel had delivered all documents relative to their agreement including a payment of $1000 to the city as the franchise fee, contract, performance bond and proof of insurance and of workmen's compensation.

In addition to the initial payment of $1000, Whitehall will receive more than three percent, or $2 for each subscriber's annual payment for the service. Multi-Channel will also make one free installation at each of the city's public and parochial schools, the police station and the fire department.

The firm has promised that cable television will be available in Whitehall by the Christmas holidays.

JAMES RD. LIGHTS GO ON FRIDAY

Columbus will "throw some light" on the high crime and accident rate on James-rd—factors that determine priority for new lights in the city's street-lighting program — on Friday at 8:30 p.m.

All civic and business leaders in the vicinity of James-rd from Broad-st to Livingston-av are invited to the lighting ceremony, when more than 50 new 250-watt mercury vapor lights on James will be turned on.

Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner will pull the special switch, installed about 200 feet north of Main on the east side of James-rd.

Also present at the ceremony will be Howard Stemm, electric superintendent, and other city officials.

The installation on James-rd is part of the city's $2 million lighting program for 1965 through 1970 — first in three five-year phases of a 15-year plan to light the entire city.

Only about 480 miles of Columbus's 1200 miles of street are now lighted, and only 80 of the 480 miles have modern mercury vapor lights.

Streets without lights include some in new developments, and in some of the areas annexed to a city whose territory has grown from 41 square miles in 1954 to more than 100 square miles at the present time.

Mayor Sensenbrenner now has an ordinance before council requiring developers to put in lights and sidewalks, and some water and sewer lines.

Under the 15-year plan to completely light the city, about 400 miles of new mercury vapor lighting must be installed in each five-year period.

Priority of installations is determined by three factors—accident and crime rate, availability of underground and overhead cable connections, and in keeping with an orderly program working from downtown out, covering major arteries.

Many of the old incandescent type of lighting will also be replaced, during the 15-year program, with modern, mercury vapor lights.

Sections of streets in eastern Columbus that have already received vapor light installations are, Nelson-rd from Broad-st to Rt. 62, Livingston-av from Nelson-rd to Courtright and Lockbourne-rd from Livingston-av to Groveport-pk.

Slated for installation in 1966 are Bryden-rd from Parsons-av to Nelson-rd, Fairwood-av from Frebis to the southern city limits, Koebel-av from Lockbourne to the railroad tracks west of College-av and Watkins-rd from Lockbourne to the railroad tracks west of College-av.

Programmed for 1967 in the eastern area are Main-st from Kenwick east to the Norfolk and Western Railroad at Whitehall's corporation limit, Broad-st between Bexley and Whitehall, Champion-av from Oak-st to the New York Central Railroad about four miles south of Livingston-av, Ohio-av from Frebis to Oak-st and Frebis from Washington to Lockbourne.

In 1968, the vapor lights will be installed on 17th-av from the fairgrounds to Port Columbus, and on Hamilton-rd from the New York Central Railroad south of Livingston north to Main-st.

Intersections Record High Accident Rates

High accident rates during the first two weeks of August were recorded at the intersections of James at Maryland cording to Francis C. McWilliams, captain of the Traffic Bureau of the Columbus Police Department.

Klan Cross Burns In Ohio

By BETTY DAFT

A flaming cross, fiery sign of the Ku Klux Klan, lighted the night Saturday in Medina County.

And the sight of a 30-foot symbol of Christianity wrapped in flames against a dark sky is awesome, its impact unbelievable.

Klansmen audibly responded with mumurs that rose to a roar, sympathizers to the cause rushed to recruiters waiting in a nearby restaurant Some were uneasy.

And others were deeply appalled.

It's the emotion present at such a spectacle that is missing when viewed on television. The scene is not quite believable when seen in news coverage. It's a little like a movie, almost fantasy.

But reality is stark in the moment after a torch turns the towering crossed tree trunks into a cross of fire.

Reaction to a cross in flames is an intensely personal experience.

Spectator pictures and coverage of Saturday's Ku Klux Klan rally are inside. Many from Columbus were among the concerned and the curious who flocked to the rally.

Dear Mr. Kreger:

Your letter of August 13, has reached the Governor, and he has directed that I answer.

We have established a standing policy of not preparing columns for any newspaper, or group of newspapers, for the reason that once such a policy is commenced, there is no limit on the number of similar requests from other newspapers, and even other media.

I am sure that you will understand that once such an avalanche commences, neither the Governor nor any aide has sufficient time to prepare such material.

We are most appreciative, however, of your gracious offer.

Sincerely,

Rhodes Cites Urgent Need For City Tax Reform Law

A last ditch effort to push city income tax reform legislation through the 106th Ohio General Assembly may result from a call by Gov. James A. Rhodes for legislation guaranteeing reciprocity agreements between taxing districts.

Rhodes' first public comment on the city income tax question came when he sent back to the lawmakers, without his signature, a bill exempting the legislators from payment of the Columbus city income tax. In allowing the measure to become law, Rhodes said:

"I am allowing amended Senate Bill 411 to become law without my signature. I do so because the leading intention of the measure is not to avoid liability for municipal income tax but to limit it to collection by the municipality of residence. Additionally, the circumstances giving rise to passage of the bill by the Legislature point to the urgent need for a law guaranteeing reciprocity in the levying and collection of income taxes as between different municipalities."

Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford, a Democrat, said he welcomed the support of Rhodes in efforts to change state statutes governing city income tax ordinances.

"I agree with the governor," Twyford said, "that there is an urgent need for legislation in this area. And I don't think it is at all impossible to enact before the present Legislature adjourns.

Should Act Tuesday

"With the governor's strong advocacy for action, there is no reason why the legislators cannot act when they return on Tuesday to complete the business of this session. The state's Senators acted in a matter of only hours to exempt themselves from the Columbus city income tax. And they did so without any encouragement from Governor Rhodes."

Twyford called attention to a bill he earlier charged was "buried" in a Senate committee. It called for a 25 percent rebate to the resident city of non-residents who pay city income taxes. The bill is a milder measure than the guaranteed reciprocity urged by Rhodes.

(Under a reciprocity agreement, cities imposing the income tax would be bound to a sharing arrangement. In Franklin County, only Columbus and Whitehall currently levy an income tax. With reciprocity in effect, the non-resident worker in each city would be permitted to pay one-half of the one percent tax to his "home" community.)

Twyford has maintained that the Columbus-imposed city tax is "arbitrary and inequitable" because it fails to recognize any form of reciprocity or tax sharing with suburban communities. The Columbus tax, Twyford says, virtually preempts the use of such a tax in the financially hard-pressed suburban communities.

Gains Others' Support

Joining Twyford in hailing Rhodes' stand on the need for city income tax reform legislation was State Senator Ed Garrigan, Summit County Republican. Garrigan and Senator Ray T. Miller, Jr. (Cuyahoga) were co-sponsors of the measure calling for the 25 percent tax rebate to the "home" communities.

Commenting on the Governor's call for action, Garrigan said:

"I would be happy to urge such action in view of the Governor's stand. In the 105th General Assembly I had a reciprocity bill, but couldn't get it out of committee."

Garrigan said the bill exempting legislators from the Columbus tax probably was responsible for the current stand by Rhodes. "He (Rhodes) started to devote some time to this subject and realized the seriousness of the problem," Garrigan said.

But the Akron lawmaker was not optimistic about chances of any action by the present Legislature.

"With current knowledge of the opposition in the core cities," he said, "I feel it would be somewhat of a miracle if we could get them to move on a reciprocity bill in one day's time."

Garrigan said he thought the planned final day of sessions on Tuesday would be "a good time" for the legislators "to announce the start of a drive to gain city income tax reform in the next regular or special session."

He said he would introduce a resolution to this effect if no other action is taken, and that he would recommend a study of the problem by the Legislative Service Commission.

FIRE DAMAGES SHOE STORE

A FIREMAN (center) dons an oxygen tank and gets ready to go in to fight a fire at the Holiday Shoe Store at the Town and Country Shopping Center on Aug. 19. The fire, believed by Whitehall officials to have been started by a cigaret, caused damage estimated at between $4000 and $5000 to the shoe store, and smoke damage to Rogers Jewelers and the Boston Store, on the right. Three firefighters, Norman Eader, Kenneth Vance and Douglas Robinson, were given oxygen for smoke inhalation at the scene. (Staff photo by Bob Kiebel)

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Whitehall Resident Blames Zoning For Traffic Woes

To the Editor:

As a result of your article on "Traffic Concern of Whitehall Council," I believe I can set that official straight.

The traffic congestion is the result of the store located on south side of E. Main-st, and not the result of apartment construction.

The area beyond the normal commercial depth was rezoned to permit the store to be built. Residents in the area protested the change. The former mayor of Whitehall was quoted as saying it would not present a traffic problem. As soon as it opened police had to be sent there during certain hours to control the abnormally high traffic.

Going west on Main-st from Shady-ln the center lane becomes a left-turn for this store. The only through lane is now down to one lane, the curb lane. This evening for example there were at least two policemen between the store and west to Hamilton-rd directing traffic. Strange there weren't any police directing traffic at Shady-ln or Country Club.

If it was the apartment construction boom why are there not traffic tie-ups where the apartments are located?

It seems to me that council could and should do a better job on rezoning than they have. The E. Main-st strip makes this area out here look like a junkyard. Oh, yes, if it is the apartment boom as this city official says it is, and he was in office during the past administration, how did he vote on apartment rezoning?

There's an ad in today's Spectator saying only 75 days to election. Why not check residents to see if any of these people are in favor of more commercial rezoning of residential property before they are elected?

Playground Reports:

Leawood . . .

Leawood was very busy last week working on lanterns for the Lantern Parade which was held at Schiller on Aug. 24.

The Traveling Zoo visited Leawood Aug. 17 at 2 p.m. and stayed 45 minutes for the children to observe and for the children to ask questions about each animal.

Leawood had a busy week preparing for the pageant which was held at Central High School on Aug. 13.

Leawood's act was entitled Cinderella's Little Helpers. Members of the cast were Kathy and Richard Mills, Jo and Suzie Mutter, Ronnie and Leon May, Danny and Pam Fox, Pam Wilson, Jimmy Blosser, Lorraine Walker, Rose Anna Held, Brenda Wicks, Donna Schiff and Kim Towns.

Leawood's junior girls softball team finished its season on Aug. 9 with a loss to Woodcrest. The game was an exciting one with Donnice Spencer hitting a home run in the fourth inning with the bases loaded. The game ended 6 to 5. Leawood's juniors now stand in second place in their league.

Courtright . . .

The playground closes today, Thursday, Aug. 26.

The Lantern Parade was held last Tuesday at Schiller Park. Courtright's theme was an "Hawaiian Luau," with 22 children participating in the event.

The senior boys made it to the semi-finals of the city tournament by beating Palsgrove by the score of 14 to 6 in six innings. Rain held up the game Tuesday and finally cancelled it altogether until Wednesday.

Courtright participated on Aug. 5 and 6 in the track meet held at OSU.

Valerie Hawkins, who scored all the points at the South track meet, also scored Courtright's only point at the OSU meet. Valerie placed fifth in the standing broad jump with a jump of 5 foot, 11 and a half inches. She also competed in the 50-yard-dash.

In Junior Jet, Team 3 is in first place by one game. The team owes its success to the fine pitching of Valentine Cowgill.

Team 4 is in second place, and will meet Team 3 Aug. 18, 6 p.m. for the league championship.

Courtright's good fortune didn't last because the boys lost the next day to Willis Park 6 to 4. The boys had a four-run lead going into the last inning and then gave up six runs on four errors.

The Willis Park game was to see who would represent the east end in the tournament.

Senior Boys started tournament action Aug. 16, and play Palsgrove in the first game. This is the fifth year in a row that the boys are in the tournament.

The pageant was held last Friday at Central High School. Girls who participated were Marianna McCullough, Sandy Allen, Debbie Barry, Angie Stapleton, Valerie Hawkins, Kathy Yantes, Joanne Linderose, Robbin Ricks, Kim Scott and Sue Cowgill.

Fairwood . . .

As the playground season draws to a close, Fairwood has stepped up the pace. Following the pageant, in which Darlene, Sharlene and Sharon York, Connie Tanks, Angie and Kelly Bowers, Kevin and Clarence Campbell, and Cheryl and Tira Ray, did an outstanding job, came a doll show. Thirty dolls were on display. Prizes went to Diane Rivers and Suzy Becker for prettiest dolls; Benita Yarborugh for smallest; Gail Banks, best costume; Rhonda Cooper, best foreign and oldest (43 years); Zeta Murphy, biggest; Donna Hamiter, saddest; Terry Scott, cutest; Brenda Gann, most unusual and Cheryl Murphy for honorable mention.

Other youngsters attended a puppet show presented by Larry Jones, Connie Tanks, Keith Jackson and Ricky Jones. The boys made their own puppets, costumes and scenery. The show was based on the fairy tale, "King Thrushbeard."

Lantern Parade work continued, meanwhile. Fairwood's theme was "Sea Fever." A huge whale preceded lanterns depicting mythological as well as real sea creatures. Special mention should go to Brenda Gann, Larry Jones and Ken Hamilton and their lanterns. The Lantern Parade marks the end of another summer. We hope that the children have enjoyed it and will return next year.

Eastgate . . .

Softball season has reached its climax and regular league play is at a standstill.

Eastgate's junior girls represented the district as their league champions in tournament play. Team members were Glenda Boyd, Susan Brown, Venita Burkes, Carolyn Byrd, Opal Byrd, Brenda Bythewood, Billie Jean Ferrell, Connie Foye, Michele Hall, Lynne John, Cheryl Jordan, Denise Long, Patty McCutcheon, Diana Plummer and Karen Ross.

Eastgate's youngest team, the Pee Wee team, consisted of the following boys: Andy Flewellen, Bobby Blount, Miguel Super, Dana Morrison, Jay Morgan, Pablo Santiago, Peppy Smith, Clarence Newsome, Steve Brinkley, David Harper, Rodney Holland and Rayburn Carter.

The coach's helpers were Charles Byrd, Don Byrd, Tim Byrd, Dave Brinkley, Chris Cokes, Mark Cokes, Darryl Morrison and Earl Smith.

In the final softball game of the season for junior boys, the district championship game, our boys lost in a heartbreaking game to Felton, 7 to 11.

Pinecrest . . .

At the east side pageant, held Aug. 12 at 7:15 p.m. at East High School, Pinecrest presented a play using black light.

Youngsters who participated were Loretta Miller, Pandor Miller, Linda Miller, Paula Brigner, Miles Rudder, Diane Donavan, Susan Lewis and Karen Koehler.

The Junior Olympics Track and Field Meet which was partly rained out Aug. 7 at Ohio State University Stadium, was re-scheduled Saturday, Aug. 14 at Brookhaven High School.

A lot of Junior Jet baseball was played this past week at Pinecrest as the season came to a close.

Team 3 wrapped up the minor league by defeating Team 2. Their final record was 7 to 5.

An all-star team consisting of the coaches' choices from the other two teams played the league champs, Team 3.

The all-stars, consisting of Gary Creachbaum, Keith Hartstein, Ronnie Marshall, Tony Bellville, Greg Shore, Ray Barnett, Gary Boller, Gary Elzroth, Jeff Cunix and Jack Kasai, ran away with the league champs by a score of 32 to 12.

Tony Bellville, Ron Marshall, Gary Creachbaum and Jeff Cunix supplied the necessary batting punch for the all-stars while Mark Potts, John McCann, Larry Bisutti and Vincent Shore helped the league champs Team 3.

In the major league (10, 11 and 12-year-olds) Team A was beaten by Team C in a tight one, 10 to 9. This was the only league game.

The loss didn't mean anything for Team A as they already had the championship sewed up. This made the final standing 9 to 3.

An all-star team was also selected to play Team A. This game, which went nine innings, was won by the all-stars, 13 to 6.

The all-stars consisted of Mike Endicott, Richard Frost, Chris Wegenka, Tony Shore, Steve Frost, Tom Coss, Tom Mulchay, Tom McCann, Dick Bisutti, Gary Elzroth, Terry Colburn and Jimmy Marcantonio.

Sammy Collins and Robert Grodhaus combined their talent for a fine pitching job for Team A but it wasn't enough for the power-packed all-stars. Some of these sluggers were Mike Endicott, Chris Wegenka, Tom Mulchay and Tony Shore.

Mr. Shipman was coach of Team A, while Mark Shore and Wegenka were coaches for the all-stars.

Touch football is now the major activity for the boys at the playground.

During the week of Aug. 8 thru 13, much time was devoted during arts and crafts periods to the pageant. However, there was still time to make paper masks and figures, key chains and potholders.

Softball season has come to a close for another year.

For the intermediate girls who practiced and tried to do their best, a special thanks is extended to the following: Helen Grubb, Jamie Detamore, Vickie Green, Chris Koehler, Miriam Bain, Peggy Theado, Maria Mormino, Peanut, Debbie Kimble, Karen McNeeley, Ene Oro, Sue McKee, Karen Shrieves, Susan Sauner and Diane Fink.

Girls who helped manage and organize the teams were Cheryl Mox and Chris Koehler.

Woodcrest . . .

The gals won their league with a 6-5 playoff win over Leawood. That win broke the deadlock between the two playgrounds.

Leawood took the first verdict in opening round play, 11-10, but were trimmed in second round action, 10-7.

In a battle for the Far East berth to the city-wide tournament, the gals fell to Scottwood, 23-3. This was the first year that Woodcrest fielded a junior girls' team.

The Team Five Dodgers rolled to the Woodcrest Junior Jet League baseball championship with a tight 2-1 win over the Team One Reds.

In a game that featured tough pitching througout, Don Bateson bested Eddie Zoog. Bateson gave up five hits while fanning 15 and walking two. Zoog yielded only three hits. He whiffed 14 and walked three.

Bateson batted the Team Five Dodgers into the favorite spot with a two for three afternoon. The winning hit, however, came from the stick of Eric Zoog, brother of pitcher Eddie. Eric's single sent home Bateson for the winning run in the last of the fifth.

In final standings, Team Five ended up with eight wins and one loss. Team One closed out with seven wins and two losses, and Team Six ended third with four wins and five losses.

James Road . . .

Junior boys and girls softball teams finished the season in second place in their respective leagues.

A chess tournament was held Aug. 13.

The winner, Jack Poe, even though Friday the 13th is considered to be an unlucky day, defied tradition and beat champion.

Junior Jet season has come to an end. In the 10 and 12-year-old league, Team Two won the league championship with a record of eight wins and four losses.

They were closely pursued by Team One whose final record was seven wins and five losses.

In the eight and nine-year-old-league all teams ended with identical records of five wins and five losses.

Fairmoor . . .

Fairmoor entered the Drama Festival held at East High School Aug. 12.

The intermediate girls play this week in the city softball tournament.

Fairmoor was in third place in the Junior Olympics when had collected a total of 41 points, trailing only Schiller and Weinland.

Fairmoor was led by the state's number one miler, Ken Schwartz, and Eastmoor star,

FAIR SIDELIGHTS . . .

Fair Board Thinking About 1966

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

New board members were elected Friday, Aug. 20, to serve on the Franklin County Fair Board. They'll play a big part in planning next year's fair — big shoes to fill after this year's extravaganza.

Elected to serve for three years are the following:

Bailey Bradley of Hilliard, Richard Holt of Hilliard, Jean Dill of Lockbourne, George Hoeflinger of Hilliard, G. A. Burke of Hilliard, Roy Hoffman of Columbus, and Ted Kaltenback of Amlin.

Serving on the board for two years are:

Glenn Anderson of Hilliard, Gary Dever of Hilliard, Edward Parker of Hilliard, Robert Rarey of Columbus, Ron Eberhard of Grove City, Vernon Tharp of Hilliard, and Del Shafer of Hilliard.

Serving on the board for one year are:

A. E. Bogen of Columbus, Clyde Herron of Groveport, Paul Lehnert of Galloway, Tom McClure of Groveport, John Hoffman of Hilliard, Vance Hendricks of Orient, and Roland Pestel of Westerville.

★

The West Franklin Kiwanis Club and the Weskiwans presented trophies to the Franklin County Fair Junior King and Queen. They are, Tom McClure, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McClure, Rt. 1, Groveport, and Linda Dean, 16, daughter of Mayor and Mrs. Charles Dean, 3170 Brice-rd, Brice. Both are Groveport-Madison students.

Members of the court are as follows:

Judy Stacy, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Stacy, 4784 Valley Forge-dr; Jenifer Basom, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Basom, Rt. 1, Westerville; Robert H. Hoover, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth B. Hoover, 64 W. Columbus-st, Canal Winchester, and Jim Yoder, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell D. Yoder, 5593 Havens Corner-rd, Gahanna.

★

A bit of national scope entered the Franklin County Fair picture last week as the 1965 National Wool Needlework Contest was held.

Finalists now eligible for national judging are Mrs. Paul Benedetti, 144 E. Deshler-av, Mrs. James Torrie, 250 N. Harris-av; Mrs. Charles Bennett, 1661 Walsh-av, and Mrs. W. B. Long, 1330 Jones-rd, Galloway.

Judges also presented a special engraved trophy to Mrs. Torrie whose winning design in the contest was judged "Best of Fair."

★

Winners in the 4-H horse competition aren't through yet. They'll go on to Ohio State Fair to vie for further honors.

According to the judges, winners had to qualify and win in four preceding horse shows, plus the recent county fair. There are, reportedly, 289 horses in Franklin County and one winner for each 50 horses goes on to the State Fair.

★

Harness racing was limited to a single day at the fair this year due to a thunderstorm which cancelled races on Wednesday.

Green Meadow stepped home in front, a surprise winner of the first section of the three-year-old pace Tuesday night to return $89.60, $32 and $7.20 across the board.

The winner was timed in 2:15 for the mile over the track that was dulled by earlier rains. Miss Buckeye Lind was second and Project Appollo third.

★

Showing animals in the Franklin County Fair is sometimes as nerve-racking for the livestock as it is for the showers.

Just ask Artilla, a two-year-old Brown Swiss cow. She got so nervous she needed a tranquilizer.

Artilla belongs to Loren and Louise Crumley, Rt. 1, Groveport. She was taken care of by Crumley's son, Howard, a Groveport-Madison student.

★

One of the largest 4-H horse clubs in the state has a problem. It's the Trojan 4-H Club of Gahanna, under the direction of Robert Turner.

The Trojans have received — through donations, largely—enough lumber to build a clubhouse in Gahanna. All they need now is an acre of land, according to President Anne Hitt, 126 Sierra-dr.

YOU MAY THINK it's difficult to get sentimental over a sow but it happened to 4-H'ers during Fair Week. This boy probably wishes now he wasn't taking his "pet" down the chute to be sold.

MALINDA WELLS, 15, 4513 Cosgray-rd, strikes a pose with her Grand Champion Hereford steer, "Big Red." The steer brought top money at the livestock auction — $1.50 a pound. It was sold for $1072.50 to Big City Center, Groveport. Malinda is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Wells of Amlin. She will be a sophomore at Hilliard High this fall, and is a member of the Buckeye Farmers' 4-H Club.

WHAT ARE FAIRS made of? Crowds, mainly. Over 30,000 attended this year's five-day Franklin County Fair in Hilliard. Treasurer Zail Kemp says this isn't bad when you consider that severe thunderstorms hit the area Tuesday and Wednesday, blowing over a display tent and dampening grounds—but not spirits.

FLIPPO, the WBNS-TV clown, delighted the Fair youngsters on Tuesday, Aug. 17, in the Activities Tent.

PAM RICE, 3540 N. State-rd, Westerville, poses with the best white New Zealand Senior Doe Rabbit (nearly as big as Pam) on the Franklin County Fairgrounds.

MOMMY DON'T CRY!
A recent report from the Cosmetic Congress discussed an interesting paper on the effect a mother's irritability, depression, and general unhappy behaviour might have on very young children. An adult recovers much more easily from such temporary experiences. Very sensitive children are sometimes so emotionally damaged at the sight of a beloved parent's unhappiness that their own adult emotional life can be endangered.
What has that got to do with a beauty salon? Perhaps a lot! Sometimes when a woman finds herself in the doldrums, a concentrated long-term beauty program has a marvelous therapeutic value. The trick seems to be in putting up a front — in going through the motions of caring—and suddenly you find things really are better. If you can't care enough to try it for yourself, do it for those you love.
WAKE UP LIFE'S FLAVOR
We have fun sometimes checking with our patrons to find out if their self-image is the same one we have of them. Often we have very different ideas of the real "She." But we have come to the conclusion that that is probably because most women are a lot of different women at the same time.
We have developed 5 different guides to form our opinion. Try them on yourself but I'm willing to bet (something modest) that you'll belong in most of them come of the time. They are:
1.) Do you love quiet evenings at home doing pleasant little chores with the family all about you?
2.) Do you love Chopin, candlelight, cologne . . .
3.) Do you love ballet, dinners in time, champagne?
4.) Do you love the frug, the Beatles, neon lights, loud music and laughter?
5.) Do you love Antiques, gallery openings, English tea, and very correct behaviour?
Why not vary your appearance with your mood?

LILLY VELIZ

Lilly Wants A Pharmacy Says Husband Can Wait

By Mrs. Martha Newton

Perhaps the final objective in a woman's life is to fall in love with the right man and to have a home and family. But Lilly Veliz, a graduate pharmacist from Lima, Peru, says, "I want to have my own pharmacy first."

Lilly Veliz's father is a professor in a private elementary school in Lima, Peru. Her mother is an artist. Lilly is the youngest in a family of seven children who have set high educational standards for each other. They all have advanced scholastic degrees, or are presently taking graduate work.

"While one of my sisters was studying medicine, and another was preparing to become a dentist, I became interested in biological science. For five years I studied pharmacy in the oldest university in South America—Universidad Nacional Mayor de San Marcos, in Lima, Peru."

After working for two years she came to America, like others of her family, for further education. "There are very few graduate courses taught in Peru," she said.

"I like America. The customs are different. America is beautiful; it is clean. And I like the parks. Peru has small square parks, no big ones, and no national parks."

Last winter Lilly was enrolled at Columbus Evening High School to gain proficiency in the English language preparatory to entering Ohio State University. In September she will again enroll at Evening High for courses in English and Speech. At OSU she will be studying hospital pharmacy and pharmacy management.

Because Lilly is ambitious and thrifty, because her parents love her, and because her family believes in her, Lilly Veliz will realize her goals.

Traffic Commission Bans Through Trucks

The Columbus Traffic and Transportation Commission prohibited the use of Country Club-rd and Noe Bixby-rd from Livingston-av to Main-st by through trucks at a recent meeting, and recommended that the traffic engineer study the problem.

In other action the commission approved a 35-foot curb cut on Ridgeway-av for use as an entrance to a car wash, and a 35-foot curb cut on Nelson-rd for use as an exit. The decision of the commission will stand if it is accepted by the owner of the car wash.

Ahavas Sholom Synagogue To Observe Ancient Ritual

On Sunday, Sept. 19, at 11 a.m., a Siyum Hasafer will take place at the Ahavas Sholom Synagogue, 2568 E. Broad-st. Mr. and Mrs. Moses Block of Circleville, are donating a Torah to the Heritage House Synagogue in honor of their son, David Block.

Long before the days of the printing press, the words of the Torah were spread far and wide among the children of Israel. It was considered a "mitzvah" (virtuous deed) for every man to make a copy of the Torah for himself and to pass on to others, even though he already had a Torah. A "Siyum Sasafer" took place each time a new Torah writing was completed.

"Siyum," a Hebrew word meaning "end," or "completion," is used in combination with other words to denote festive occasions of a religious and scholastic nature. Writing a Torah by hand (the only method ever used) is both a religious and scholastic achievement. When a new Safer Torah (Book of the Torah) has been written and donated to a synagogue, a joyous celebration marks this ancient custom.

And so, a new Torah having been written, it will be donated and both events celebrated with psalms, wine, and cake at the Ahavas Sholom Synagogue.

Sisterhood To Dine In Synagogue

Paid-up members of the Sisterhood of Congregation Ahavas Sholom will partake of a luncheon to be held for them on Wednesday, Sept. 8, in the new synagogue at 2568 E. Broad-st. All members who have not as yet paid their dues, and prospective members who wish to join the Sisterhood, will be welcomed on payment of their dues.

The program will feature a staff member of Jo's Hair Fashions, Miss Susie Roth. Miss Roth will style the hair of some lucky lady, and will discuss styling and hair problems with all guests.

PLAYGROUND SEASON CLOSES IN WHITEHALL

* * *

The city-wide play pageant Aug. 18, highlight of the season, was the closing event in Whitehall's summer playground program.

All playgrounds participated in the pageant, presenting plays on the general theme, "America, Our Land."

Norton Field . . .

The other big news around the playground was the mother-daughter softball game. The mothers dropped an 8 to 3 decision.

Juanita Williams played a steady game for the mothers. Mrs. Rose, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Schmidt and Mrs. Toughry also saw their first action of the season.

East Main . . .

East Main's play for the pageant had four last minute substitutes: Joe Griffith, Ricky Vogt, Dave McDonald and Bruce Summers in the Tom Sawyer act.

East Main's final big event of the season was the all-playground picnic held at Blacklick Woods.

Beechwood . . .

Beechwood children participating in the citywide play pageant presented a play on the eastern part of America. The three skits were "Pocahontas," "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," and "East Side — West Side." The children also helped make costumes and props for the pageant.

Whitehall Plans Fall Recreation

All junior and senior high students wishing to participate in the fall and winter recreation program in Whitehall must have a membership card.

These will be available at the Recreation Department in the basement of City Hall on Yearling-rd, in September. They may be picked up any afternoon after school, or from 7 to 9 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The cards are necessary for admission to dances and other recreation programs.

Chaperones Needed

Parents who will volunteer their services for junior and senior high dances are urgently needed.

Anyone interested may contact John LaCorte, recreation director, at city hall.

Whitehall Patrol Day Set Sept. 1

Whitehall boys and girls who will serve on school safety patrols this coming year should register immediately for the day-long workshop to be held in Blacklick Woods Wednesday, Sept. 1.

Consent slips, mailed to all prospective patrol members, should be filled out and signed by parents and returned to the Whitehall Police Department on Yearling-rd.

School buses will leave the police station at 8:30 a.m. Sept. 1, and will return the patrol crews at 5 p.m.

Sandwiches and cold drinks will be furnished at noon, and entertainment and recreation is planned after lunch.

Nothing is more injurious to the character and to the intellect than the suppression of generous emotion. — John Chapman.

School-Parks Planned For Community

STOCKBRIDGE SCHOOL-PARK, first of two outdoor recreation areas being planned in the eastern part of the city by the Recreation Commission with the cooperation of Columbus Schools, was designed to make the best possible use of adjoining school and recreation land. Under the plan, unique in the nation, a relatively small park area is purchased adjoining a school site. Part of the school ground and the park site is then developed under one master plan to provide a larger and better outdoor recreation plan for the school children and for the public. Tentative plans are submitted to the School Board for final approval, and the agreement provides that, should the school need the land in the future for expansion, it will be cleared of the park's facilities. Plans have been approved for Stockbridge, and work will get under way immediately.

Anti-Poverty Crusade Shifted To Home Front

You can't fight poverty from an ivory tower.

In line with this viewpoint, Dr. Samuel Stellman and his staff are working overtime on a program to employ eight "area coordinators."

This latest proposal of the Columbus Metropolitan Area Community Action Organization, which is spearheading the local anti-poverty program, will be presented to the CMACAO Board of Trustees next Monday for approval.

From there it will immediately go to Chicago and Stellman indicates it can be put into action within 90 days.

It involves placing six coordinators in the eight poverty pockets of the city and one each in southeast and southwest sections of the county which are also target areas. (The city pockets have been pinpointed as the Near East Side, South Linden, the Bottoms of the West Side, Near North Side, Downtown, East Central, near South Side and South Side.)

$7,200 to $8,000 Salary

It is suggested that these coordinators hold a master's degree in social work or related fields or have the equivalent experience. The salary is tentatively set at between $7,200 and $8,000 annually.

These coordinators will work from settlement houses and churches in the city, and schools in the county.

Each will be responsible for the training of neighborhood workers (of which 30 are planned); the coordination of the neighborhood program with that of other neighborhoods, the area and the county; the building of leadership among the poor themselves and the development of an Area Center.

According to Stellman, it is easy at a glance to see the problems of poverty such as poor housing, ill health, high crime and delinquency rates, lack of education and unemployment.

Understanding Needed

But from the ivory tower, it is not so easy to understand the problems in the terms of the people who live there. This understanding will be one of the primary duties of each coordinator.

The residents must be helped to see their own needs, and to draw up a program to meet them. The CMACAO has already faced the fact that what will work in one neighborhood may not be tailored to another.

Further, the coordinators will work with organized groups already functioning in their communities (local civic associations as well as the newly organized Neighborhood Discussion groups).

Also to the coordinators will fall the task of bringing the poor to serve in advisory capacity and to help set up the Centers.

Research done by the United Community Council this summer shows that although the eight areas within the city account for only about one-fourth of the county's population, they produce 56 percent of the families with socio-economic problems. These range from 82.3 percent of male unemployment to 77 percent of the case load of the Franklin County Welfare Department.

A final duty of the coordinators will be to supervise periodic community surveys to learn how these problems are changing and to evaluate the programs being made in the fight against them.

Doug Rodibaugh. Both were double event winners.

Ken ran away with the mile run, winning by over 12 seconds while running a calm 4:31.5 mile.

Then Ken came from behind in the last 200 yards of the half-mile to eke out a narrow win in the blazing time of 2:01.2 for the distance. Both Ken's time's 4:31.5 in the mile run and 2:01.2 in the half mile were Junior Olympic records for the 16-17-year-old division.

Rodibaugh won the low hurdles in 22.0 and repeated with another victory in the high hurdles with a 15.5 clocking.

Tom Findley finished third in the mile run and fifth in half-mile with 4.44.2 and 2.09 times.

Jack Perry placed third in the discus with a throw of 117 feet. Rick Lewis finished fifth in the pole vault.

In the nine and under boys' division, Monty Hannah finfinished third in the softball throw; and Jerry Bett fifth. Monty also placed fifth in the 50-yard dash.

In the girls division, nine Team One won the eight to nine-year-old division, with an 8-3-1 record, followed by Teams Two, Three and Four. The league champs will now face the All-Stars.

In the 10, 11 and 12-year-old division, Team Four won the league with an 8-4 record, followed by Teams Two, Three and One. sLeague champs will also face the All-Stars.

The All-Stars are composed of: Team Two — George Buechner, Dougles Mason, Larry Nordman, Kent Zanon, and Steve Voshall; Team Three—Tim Kauffman, John Hoffman, Robert Hand, Scott Bever, and Terry Marsh, and Team Four — Bobby Hylton, Donald Weibacher, Kenny Brown, Eddie Dembar and Mark Munsell.

Whitehall Asks Bus Stop Change

A request to change the bus stop from the northwest corner of Seigman-av and Etna-rd to a point about 100 feet south of Etna, on the east side of Yearling-rd, has been filed wih the Columbus Transit Co.

The request was the suggestion of Councilman Gilbert H. O'Shaughnessy who cited safety factors as his reason.

More light on Yearling-rd would offer more security for bus passengers after dark, and the change would relieve traffic congestion which sometimes occurs when the bus turns and stops, O'Shaughnessy said.

'CHARGE' SOUNDED FOR AREA HIGH GRIDDERS!

AT WALNUT RIDGE, as well as some 40 area high schools this past week, preparations got under way for the '65 high school football season, opening in your neighborhood, Friday, Sept 10. Above, head Scottie grid master Ralph Webster gives the "charge" call to three of his big linemen (from left): 200-pound end Pat Beveridge, 210-pound tackle Bob Duringer and 210-pound tackle Phil Sachs.

WHAT'S NEW IN THE WBBA?

The Braves and Red Sox are respective 1965 champions in the Major and Minor League divisions of the Whitehall Boys Baseball Association this week following playoff victories last week.

The Braves swept a pair with the Red Sox (12-4 and 5-0) while the Red Sox did likewise at the expense of the Tigers (11-3 and 17-4).

MIKE CLICKENGER yielded 13 Red Sox hits but was stingy in the run department in the Braves' first win. Battery mate Bobby Kennedy provided Mike with a big assist by throwing out five Sox runners in steal attempts.

Kennedy also was an offensive standout with three-for-four. Randy Morgan and pitcher Clickenger also poled homers, the latter also chipping in with a pair of doubles.

IN THE second game, Dean Miller fanned nine and spaced seven hits while blanking the Sox. Miller aided his own cause at the plate with three hits in three appearances.

Red Sox hurler Steve Bays fanned 13 in a losing effort, also hitting a double. Dave Brobst gathered three of the seven hits off Miller.

THE MINOR League Red Sox were equally as impressive as the Braves, sweeping the playoff set.

The Sox backed Bruce Phillips' pitching with 22 hits in the first game with Mel Hardin setting the pace with four-for-four, including a three-run homers.

SOX INFIELDERS Phil Harris, Chet Funk and Chet Ziemianski accounted for 11 putouts in the game, including one double play.

For the Tigers, Mike Tedrick and Kenny Wellnitz had a pair of hits, the latter getting a double and triple.

Sox hurler Phil Harris whiffed 11 and scattered eight hits in winning the second game. Harris got all the batting support he needed from Tim Stead who was three-for-four, including a grandslam homer. Stead knocked in six runs.

FUNK COLLECTED a pair of doubles, good for four RBIs while teammate Hardin whacked a triple and double.

Tiger pitchers Marty Glass and Kenny Wellnitz combined to fan 11 Sox batters. Don Radkoski hit three doubles for the losers.

The Dodgers rallied from an opening game setback to take the series from the Senators in the battle for third place in the final Major League accounting.

DAVE GETREU'S two-hit, 14-K mound job earned the Senators the opener, 9-2, adding a double to the efforts of teammates Bill Saunders and Bob Tuttle, who did likewise.

Dodger pitcher Dave McDonald, who struck out nine while allowing only six hits, accounted for the loser's only two runs with a two-run homer.

McDonald and John Conley also added doubles for the Dodgers.

MIKE GILMORE'S three-hitter bested a nine-hit effort by Steve Grabovich as the Dodgers squared the series at one-all with a 5-0 win.

In the clincher, Mark McEvoy pitched a 7-5 win for the Dodgers who got doubles from Gilmore (two), Rusty Wilson (two), McDonald, Gary Clark and McEvoy. Tony Chellis (5 Ks) took the loss.

Jeff Mauk, Craig Stickle and Bill Saunder also hit two-baggers for the losers.

THE DODGERS and Braves traded scripts in their battle for third place in the Minor League, the accent on pitching in the first, on hitting in the second.

The Dodgers won both games, 1-0 and 13-10.

In the opener, Billy Boyd's single spoiled Don Norris' hopes of a no-hitter. Norris, who fanned nine, scored the winning run after tripling, racing home on a single by Larry Mason.

MIKE BROWNING and Steve Gunter shared mound duties for the Braves, whiffing five Dodgers between them.

In a game which saw the lead see-saw back and forth till the final frame, Dave Grover ((11 strikeouts) nabbed the win for the Dodgers.

Steve Michael (two triples), Rick Percy (double, triple) and Grover (double) were Dodgers hitting stars while Browning, Boyd and Gunter each whacked triples for the losers.

TONY WOLSFER and Boyd pitched for the Braves, fanning five.

ADDITIONS to the Keller's Home Run Club are Rod Bankes and Dave McDonald of the Major Dodgers and Dave Getreu and Robbie Trojack of the Major Senators.

THE MAJOR League champion Braves outscored their WBBA opponents, 190-33, this past season while compiling an 18-2 (including playoffs).

Braves' pitchers hurled seven shutdowns during the season and Mike Clickenger, Dean Miller and Randy Morgan each turned in a one-hitter.

The Braves socked seven homers in their four playoff games. Home run leaders for the season on the Brave team were Clickenger (eight), Morgan (six) and Miller (six).

WITH ALL the "crownings" of champions in the WBBA this week, The Spectator hopes the organization reserves one for Ginny Phillips who has provided the newspaper with information this season.

17 RUNS, ONE 'ERROR':

Recreation (Almost) Wins Slo-Pitch Round

Recreation Department downed Darnell, 17-7, Sunday in the Whitehall Slo-Pitch League — or so the scorebook said.

But that isn't the way it will go into the record book.

The Recreation Department surrendered its title win following a Darnell protest that Recreation had employed the services of an ineligible player in the second round.

AS THE result of the forfeit, Darnell stands atop both rounds of the loop with no playoff necessary.

Before it got hit hard in the roster, the Recreation nine did most of the hitting itself, never trailing Darnell after a four-run second frame dissolved a one-all tie.

A seven-run seventh iced the contest and apparently sewed up the second round for Recreation.

JOHN LACORTE and Larry Gornall each blasted three-run homers, the latter going four-for-four. Gino Kaska and Eddie Nash also collected four bingles each.

Darnell's "golden arm" pitcher Jack Gilmore, who dazzled Recreation twice earlier this season, found his flipper (sprayed gold for the "big game" Sunday) somewhat "tarnished" by Recreation's potent bats.

Everything finished on a happy note, however, as Bill Darnell of the champions invited the Recreation Department nine over to his home for a post-game celebration.

RECREATION Director John LaCorte complimented the league on the fine degree of sportsmanship exhibited this past season, adding that he expects a stronger and expanded league next summer as a result.

In other Sunday games, Don Sapp's four-for-four set the pace as Recreation tuned up for the Darnell clash with a 16-8 win over the WBBA coaches.

A late-inning tie-breaking rally by Darnell set up the title clash via a 7-4 verdict over the Police Department. In another game, the Fire Department "smoked out" Holy Spirit, 6-4.

YANKEES TAKE ST. CATHARINE 'B' TITLE

THE YANKEES recently wrapped up the championship in the "B" Division of the St. Catharine Little League with an 11-0-1 record. The "B" Division consists of boys in the third, fourth and fifth grade age level. The Yankee club includes (kneeling, from left): Bob Essig (holding mascot, Princess Katrina), Andy Connor, Greg Essig, Eric Essig, Danny Reinhard and Jim Connor. Standing: head coach J. P. Kurgis, Kevin Kurgis, Joe Goss, Tom Simmons, Tom King, Gerard Berry, Jay VanHeyde and Judge Joseph VanHeyde, assistant coach.

Shrine Twin-Bill Set Tonight At NAA Park

Four area Little League teams will slug it out for charity tonight in the tenth annual Brotherhood Night doubleheader at the North American Aviation Park on Hamilton-rd.

In the first of two, four-inning games, the Whitehall All-Stars will oppose Christ the King (6 p.m.) with a game between the Jewish Center and North American Jets following intermission.

Intermission entertainment will be provided by the Aladdin Temple Shriners, and will include a parade and performances by the Chanters vocal group, the Picadors string band and a brigade of clowns.

Proceeds from the event will buy braces and special equipment for the crippled children of Central Ohio. The 1964 Night benefitted the Aladdin Temple Fund more than $1700.

Tickets will be available at the gate (children under 12, 25 cents; under 18, 50 cents, adults, $1). In case of rain, the program will be rescheduled for Thursday, Sept. 2.

Jets Wrap Up Season At Home; Eye IL Flag, Attendance Mark

The Columbus Jets, racing down the stretch in their bid for the '65 International League pennant, wrap up their IL season this week with a decisive final home stand.

Toledo's Mud Hens make their last appearance in the Stadium tonight at 8 p.m. before turning the visitor's dugout over to the league's two Southern entries — Jacksonville and Atlanta.

THE SUNS provide the opposition for the Jets with single evening games (8 p.m.) tomorrow and Saturday before joining the Columbus nine for the final twin-bill of the season Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

Atlanta's Crackers complete the local IL entries regular schedule with single night games Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday (8p.m.).

International League playoffs will begin Friday, Sept. 3.

SEVERAL special "nights" are scheduled during this final homestand in hopes of breaking the Jets' "best-ever" attendance mark (204,531 in 1955).

Before the opening of the current home stand (Aug. 24), home attendance stood at 158,795. The turnstile would have to spin at a 5000-plus clip during the nine game stand to eclipse the old mark (discounting playoff home dates).

Tomorrow night will be "Coca-Cola Night" and Saturday will be "WTVN Agency and Defense Construction Supply Center Night".

"SHELL DEALERS Day" will mark Sunday's doubleheader with tickets available at local Shell service stations. A Ford Mustang will be given away to some lucky fan at the Stadium.

Tuesday's game with Atlanta will be the annual "Fan Appreciation Night" with everyone admitted to the upper grandstand for $1. (Children under 12 will be admitted free when accompanied by parents).

Jewish Center Sports Roundup

The B.V.D. team, winners of round one in the A. K. League, are leading the league in round three with two consecutive wins. The leaders aided their cause last week by edging Hardman Realy, 9-7.

The offensive punch for B.V.D. was supplied by lefty Ray Hoch and reliable Stan Freedberg. Providing the tight defense were Stan Vogel, Abe Cooperman and Jack Gaiser.

ONTARIO, winners of the second round, had to pull one out in the bottom of an extra inning to squeeze out Friedman, Cummins and Stern. Hero of the night was Jules Vogel who bombed one out of the park with two runners on base.

This was Jules' second home run of the game and third hit in five attempts. Aiding the cause for Ontario with timely hits were Dave Sinai, Larry Lawrence and Benton Block.

In the third game Martin's Market created a four-way tie for second place by downing Len Immke Buick 10-3. The big surprise of the evening was supplied by newcomer Kal Lazear who pitched a scoreless game for five innings.

Leading hitters for Martins were Sandy Lester, Hal Block, Herman Eiseman and Aaron Dachner.

* * *

A FIRED-UP Epsilon team tromped Pops Dworkin 10-7 Sunday to move into undisputed first place in the second round of the Teen League (3-0).

Leading hitters for Epsilons were Henry Gutter, Mark Masser and Harlan Rubin. For the losers, Herb Braverman supplied most of the offensive fireworks.

In the other game played on Diamond one, Capital upset win-minded Heart of Ohio, 10-8. Joe Engleman was the big stick for Capital while Steve Goodman and Eric Zitron led the way for Heart.

THE LEAGUE has one remaining game for this round as Epsilons meet Pegasus in the "big one." If Epsilons win this one, then they will meet Pegasus for the championship the following week.

If Pegasus wins, then a two-way tie for round two will exist and the teams will play this game the following Sunday.

And, once again, several lucky youngsters will be selected for places of honor during "open house" at the sprawling air base. Lockbourne is home of the Tactical Air Command's 317th Troop Carrier Wing.

Kids Day attendance in recent years has ranged between 120 and 140 thousand. Aside from many displays, demonstrations, and fly-overs, there are always crowd-pleasing appearances by radio and TV stars.

Right now, however, is the time for local boys and girls to register for the various honorary "commander" titles: base commander, troop carrier commander, tanker commander, air policeman, head nurse, fire chief and 87th Fighter. Fill out the coupon accompanying this story and mail it in before the deadline, midnight, Sept. 20.

Names will be selected in advance of Kids Day and families will be notified. On the big day the "commanders" will be given special introductions and personally escorted tours of the air base. They will receive some fine surprise souvenirs.

Grounds Renewal Outlined By Mayor

A new revamping of the two acres of City Hall grounds to allow greater public use in connection with the planned Civic Center beautification was announced by Mayor Sensenbrenner and the Parks and Forestry Chief Emerson Betz on Tuesday.

Moyar Sensenbrenner told city officials and civic leaders on a recent return from Washington that the President's Conference on the beautification of America's cities should begin at the heart of congested cities and spread outward.

"Here in Columbus," he said, "already much is being done by citizens and private groups in our outlying areas. By revamping the City Hall's grounds — which are now among the most beautiful in the nation—we hope to utilize more of the space for art, flower shows and civic celebrations."

To encourage ideas on how the grounds can be revamped, Betz and the mayor recently held a contest among landscape architectural students at Ohio State University.

Douglas Greig of 1105 Oxford-rd, Hamilton, O., came up with the winning design. Other highly thought-of OSU student designs were submitted by John Deeth of Tupelo, Miss.; Mark Kibena, Latrobe, Pa.; Tom Neiman, Cincinnati, O., and Robert McClain, 57 E. Woodruff.

Assisting the mayor and Betz in judging designs were professors in the landscape architectural department at OSU, and Foster Franks, chief horticulturist for the city's park of roses; Douglas Strang, chief landscape architect for the city, and Roger Well, landscape architect.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

What About Autumn Meat Prices?

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruits — seedless grapes, summer apples, peaches, nectarines, cantaloupes.

Vegetables—tomatoes, potatoes, sweet corn, peppers, cabbage, salad greens.

Meat, Poultry—broiler fryers, eggs (medium and small), beef "specials," ground beef, turkeys, beef liver.

Other Foods—dairy products, frozen orange juice.

As all food shoppers well know, meat prices jumped in May and June this year — about 6.5 percent according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Mrs. Franks

Essentially smaller supplies of both beef and pork are responsible for the higher prices. At the same time demand continues to increase with population and income. Both choice steers and top hogs at Chicago are now selling just under the high level of late June and likely will show some additional reduction at least by September and October. This means you probably will see lower meat prices during the fall months, but don't expect the drop to be drastic.

Pork supplies will increase seasonally this fall as the spring crop is marketed. These hogs will begin to appear late this month. However, expected slaughter will acerage 10 percent or more below last year. Fall retail prices likely will be somewhere between present prices and those of a year ago.

With the exception of bacon, current pork prices are down a little from a month ago, although still well above last year. Bacon prices are up 25 cents from last August, chiefly because production fell at the time everybody wanted it for cookouts and for bacon and tomato sandwiches.

Wholesale beef prices in generally are lower than a month ago. Supplies should increase in the months ahead as nine percent more cattle were on feed July 1 than a year ago. However, the cattle will be marketed at lighter weights than last year when prices were lower, which trims the supply somewhat. But meat dealers expect to offer you better beef buys during the fall months.

The lamb market will increase seasonally during the autumn as spring lamb crops are ready for marketing. But this will be down from last year's supply, so no unusual bargains can be expected on lamb. However, in Ohio a special promotion of lamb by producers will begin Aug. 26—a time to watch for specials on your favorite lamb cuts.

Streets To Be Closed For Fair

"The volume of traffic will increase greatly this week as thousands of motorists drive to the Ohio State Fair," according to Chief George W. Scholer of the police department.

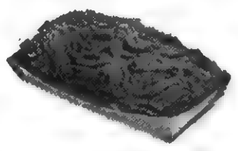
Traffic will be heavily concentrated in the area of the Exposition Grounds; therefore, it will be necessary to close off various streets and to re-route traffic in the vicinity.

Effective as of 6 a.m. Friday, Aug. 27, and extending through Monday, Sept. 6, 17th-av will be closed to all through traffic between Clark and Koebel-avs from 6 a.m. to 12 midnight each day, and Velma-av will be closed between Northwood and 17th to all traffic except fair traffic.

Chief Scholer suggests that motorists utilize the freeway Rt. I-71 and leave the freeway at the 17th-av exits where large parking facilities will be available.

All motorists not going to the Fair are advised to use Hudson-st or Fifth-av to avoid traffic delays.

Local Students On Wooster Honor Roll



Forty percent of the College of Wooster student body earned places on the Dean's List, it was announced this week by Dean J. Garber Drushal.

Among the 411 students earning between 3.0 and 3.3 were: Janet Cronin, freshman, 2565 E. Cleft-dr; Craig Ewart, senior, 278 London-dr; Carol Hackler, freshman, 75 E. 18th-av; Courtney Irwin, junior, 2251 Shoreham-rd; Barbara Kurz, senior, 196 DeSantis-dr; Eric Lien, 2854 North Star-rd, freshman; George Tyack, freshman, 69 Crosswell-rd and William Palmer, freshman, 5354 Dublin-rd.

A Good Man Etc. . . .

With the football season right around the corner, 'tis time for the Spectator Sports Department to run up its "SOS" flag.

MISSING ONE assistant from this time last year with 12 new coverage schools al- bowing into the picture seems like being behind the eight ball with Minnesota Fats chalking his cut.

Recruiting fellow workers in Witteameier the editorial department seemed like the answer to our problems.

But newspaper reporters, for the most part, tend to become highly specialized in their particular areas of endeavor.

This is where the problems come to the fore.

THE CALL to arms, however, brought overwhelming response. (Subconsciously, every journalist secretly desires to be a sportswriter).

This will be a snap, we figured. Just to be sure, however, we gave each a simple test — a few facts on a football game.

Add a little color and imagination we told each as they went diligently back to their respective typewriters.

SOCIETY EDITOR

"The Whitehall-Upper Arlington game last Friday was beautiful with the players exquisitely dressed in a black and gold and black and white theme with traces of black and blue at the end of the game.

"Since it was homecoming, the halftime festivities were elegant. The queen was gowned in a two-piece suit of football brown featuring a captain collar, three-quarter (back), sleeves and straight skirt.

"She carried a sheath cascade of stephanotis atop a miniature football with school color streamers. Court attendants looked very chic in football field green dresses with gold accessories. (Arlington won the game, 23-16.)"

EDITORIAL (POLITICAL) WRITER

"A flat refusal to attend Friday night's Whitehall-Arlington homecoming game by the mayor ignited a rumble of discontent within city political circles last week.

"Councilman Harry Schultz who will run for mayor against the incumbent next month, graciously accepted the call to duty, introducing disappointed queen and her court to the fans at the game which Arlington won, 23-16. It was the second time the mayor has etc."

DESK MAN

"Reliable sources have confirmed reports that a football game was played last Friday between Whitehall and Upper Arlington High Schools. According to an unnamed spokesman for the scoreboard crew, Arlington won, 23-16. Neither coach was available for comment."

CORRESPONDENT

Between a dinner visit and a post game party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Harris, the Harrises, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jones and Robbie, and Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Brown attended the Whitehall-Arlington game at which Dickie Harris scored two touchdowns.

"After the game cheerleaders Ginger Snaps and Patty Myway were overnight guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lowery whose daughter Julie made a beautiful homecoming queen at the game."

AD SALESMAN

"The Whitehall-Arlington game last week offered a big bargain in excitement to the jam-packed crowd who attended the homecoming game.

"Arlington won, 23-16, but not without a game-saving tackle by Jim Snerd who tackled a breakaway Whitehall halfback from behind on the two-yard line on the last play of the game, directly across the field from the Gordon's Milk sign.

"Snerd, the son of Art Snerd, president of the local Snerd Department Store, also scored a touchdown and played an excellent game on defense.

"The final score on the costly scoreboard, donated by the Gastro Cola Company, was Arlington 23, Whitehall 16."

AS YOU CAN see the choice was difficult. We finally decided on the Society Editor as an assistant. She's been assigned to cover wrestling this winter.

Next Saturday evening she's going to explain what stephanotis is and I'm going to show her a few of the more popular holds.

El Rancho Club Vs. Shamrocks For Polo Title

Columbus El Rancho defeated the Mahoning Valley Polo Club Sunday, 5-3, securing a firm hold on second place in the Mid-States Polo League.

A "brother vs. brother" duel added excitement as Dr. Albert Strouss of El Rancho rode against his brother, Stan Strouss, of Mahoning Valley in the number four power position. Each contributed one goal.

This Sunday, El Rancho hosts the powerful Cleveland Shamrocks who lead Columbus in league standings by one game.

An El Rancho victory could force a playoff for the Mid-States title. The Shamrocks defeated Columbus in Cleveland by two goals earlier in the season.

Game time Sunday is 3 p.m. at El Rancho, 961 E. Granville-rd. Proceeds will again go to the American Cancer Society.

Bischoff Takes Four Firsts At Champs Event

Becky took firsts in the 200-yd freestyle and individual medley, 100-yd freestyle and 500-yd freestyle, adding a second in the 100-yd backstroke and a fifth in the 50-yd freestyle.

Other points were garnered by Sequoia's Paul Bischoff (third, fourth, fifth and sixth), Greg Weirich (pair of thirds) and Frank Furie (third).

Other Sequoia qualifiers included Jeannie Bohlander, Angelo Vitulo, Linda Vollmer and Delores Vitullo.

To compete in the Champ of Champs, a swimmer must be in the top 16 in his class to enter the prelims. The six fastest times move on to the finals.

HOOKS SCIOTO MUSKIE

The Wonderful World of ANIMALS

By Frank Miller, D.V.M.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Sniffer, our retriever, regards our swimming pool as his own private drinking dish. We have tried to discourage him, but he won't drink water from anywhere else. He has been doing it all summer. Is this bad? —W.M.

DEAR W.M.: Apparently it isn't bad or he would have shown symptoms by this time. Your drinking dog's drink could still cause future complications, however. This would depend on just how sanitary his drinks are. From Sniffer's standpoint, the fewer chemicals — from acids to alkalies to chlorine — that you dump in the pool, the better.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is is possible to cross a Persian with a Siamese? If you can, what do you end up with? S.A.

DEAR S.A.: I assume you are talking about cats. If so, the answer is yes. The cross is called a Himalayan.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: We jut unpacked from a trip and I found two objects that my son found that look like shrunken ping pong balls. They even bounce! Could they be eggs? If so, from what?—W.D.

DEAR W.D.: I don't know just where your son found them, of course, but the description fits the eggs of the common snapping turtle.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: What can you recommend for a tank that keeps overheating this time of year? Some fish have died because of it. (I can't move the tank for I'm not home during the day.)—R.E.

DEAR R.E.: Shade windows if the tank is exposed to the sun. Use a (plastic) screen top rather than glass or reflector hood. A small fan, blowing along the water from above is helpful. Fish that can tolerate toasty temperatures include Bettas, Gouramies and Guppies.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Because our last cat was fat from start to finish, we are determined to keep our new cat's weight within bounds. How many calories a day should Mooney, an eight-month-old cat, get?—W.W.

DEAR W.W.: Cats (like other species) vary considerably in their caloric requirements. If Mooney is a big hyperactive feline, he may need a 900 calorie diet just to keep in trim. On the other hand, if he is a languid lounge cat, 450 calories daily could be too many. An average figure would be 50 to 60 calories per pound of body weight.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our problem is in the form of a lovely little parakeet (budgie) of strong, excellently bred and well-registered stock. She is more than averagely intelligent. We never have to teach her any tricks — she just watches a few minutes and has them. It is both her physical health and her "psychic" that troubles me very much.

When a blameless spinster of three years, she astonished everyone by starting to lay. I was told is she wasn't encouraged — and she definitely was unencouraged—this was very unusual. And that she would undoubtedly have an early climacteric (?). Well that hasn't happened either. At first she took it all very seriously and sat for the required number of days on her batch of eggs.

She doesn't brood any more now but she keeps producing at a steady pace. So far, she has laid over 200 eggs! How long can this go on and isn't there something we can do so it doesn't? I want so much to help her. She is a real person truly.—E.K.

• • •

DEAR E.K.: One has to admire your budgie's determination, even if it is due to "wayward" hormones. Her system is obviously well-geared to produce, but this "shelling-out" should terminate if the hormonal imbalance can be corrected.

Your local veterinarian can discreetly discourage her by the addition of hormones to her diet. You can help by drastically reducing the number of daylight hours she has to eat, play — and lay in.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: My son wants to know if it's all right to feed his ants watermelon? They like it.—N.N.

DEAR N.N.: Certainly. Watermelon contains considerable sugar. While Iridomyrmex humilis, the small Argentine house ant, is most noted for its sweet tooth, all ants have one.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: My family, two teen-agers and a husband, want to get a boa constrictor. I have never been fond of snakes but am willing to go along with the boys on this, I always do. What can you tell me about the boa as a pet?—C.A.

DEAR C.A.: Perhaps the main problem involved in keeping this snake revolves around its eating habits. It requires live, preferably warm-blooded, food. Snakes, in general, have many desirable qualities. They are clean, require little space and are about as quiet as a pet can get.

The boa constrictor is one of the more easily tamed species and it often becomes quite friendly. While the depth of its affection may be questioned, a boa is always capable of a squeeze or two.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have a big goldfish bowl left after my goldfish kept dying off. Now I want to try sea horses. I know they need salt water and all that but I want to know if the bowl would be a good home for them.—I.C.

DEAR I.C.: Not very. The delicate job of maintaining properly balanced salt water for your horses would be even more difficult if they were cramped up in a bowl. Live food, especially brine shrimp would be required, and even these could upset the water balance in a bowl-sized aquatic stable.

If goldfish couldn't stand these surroundings, sea horses would have even less chance for survival as they are much more difficult to care for.

Does your favorite animal have problems, physical or emotional? Dr. Miller will answer all letters sent to him, care of this paper, provided a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

WITH MUDDY SHOES

'Fish Can't Vote..."

I'm sure in my mind that our most pressing problem in the outdoors today is the terrible scab called pollution.

There is no river, creek or run that has escaped the rotten tide of sewage that pours forth from village and city alike. Each month that passes sees the waters dirtier and smellier.

LEADERS of business and municipality who turn a deaf ear to the worried conservationist's pleas, deserve whatever bad publicity we can give them.

I was recently privileged to read a letter from one of Ohio's better known politicians to a leader of industry along the shore of Lake Erie. The letter was to tell that industry not to worry about their dumping of chemicals into the lake and here I quote "let's not worry about it (the pollution) the fish can't vote."

Another time, I personally went to a village right here in Franklin County and took pictures of dead fish which I turned over to Ben Anderson, then head of law enforcement for the Division of Wildlife.

FOLLOW - UP investigations resulted in a fine levied on the village. When notified of the action, the mayor of the suburb said "Isn't that a shame, the poor little fishies are dead."

Apparently our elected officials will not take steps to correct the contamination of waterways in and near their towns. If we are to save what little surface water we have left, we must form vigilante groups and take over the policing of the streams.

We must uncover the violations, gather evidence and force action when our elected or appointed peoples refuse to act.

IT IS NOT such a big job to detect these infractions, it takes a sure-fire system. Here is one that really works—

Form the local conservation clubs into watchmen. Give each man a certain part of a stream or river to check once a week. These checkmen should phone reports into a given desk whether they find filth or not. People living along waterways are excellent checkmen, they have the most to lose if pollution comes and they can check each day if they wish.

Once a trouble spot develops, take color pictures. Sample a quart or more of the water, marking the location, date and hour. Keep the sample in a refrigerator, tightly sealed.

MAKE SURE you have witnesses along who are able and willing to appear in court should the need arise. Advise your local newspaper of your actions. Bad publicity is the biggest penalty of all for pollution.

Once you have the proof, go to your local game protector and present him with the package deal and insist on taking him to the spot while the infraction is still apparent. If he balks, offer to take your case directly to the Chief of Wildlife.

By law, fines can be levied only if dead fish can be found. Then the charge is dependent on how many fish and how big they are. If you find dead fish or any other types of aquatic life at the trouble spot, be sure and sack them up and freeze them for future proof. Here again, date the exhibits and have witnesses.

THIS SOUNDS like a lot of bother, messing in dirty water and wrapping dead fish but it is the only sure way we will ever stop pollution. Our public officials will not ask the people for a raise in taxes to build bigger sewage plants. They are afraid of losing a vote or two.

Through fines and bad publicity, they must be forced to go to the people and point out the falacy of improper sewage treatment and water filtration.

To prove my point, take a look at the Morse Road filtration plant. When it was built ten years ago, the only means considered to get rid of the used lime was a direct pipeline into Big Walnut Creek. Several years ago, an adjoining landowner sued the City of Columbus for ruining his land with the lime deposits.

TO AVOID the suit, they bought the land and are now filling it with the lime. Soon it will be full and the pipeline into the creek will be going great guns again. When this happens, I will advise all interested parties and see what happens.

In this case, a bond issue could be passed and a recalcitration plant could be built that would pay back its own money by making the lime reusable.

Dayton is much smaller than Columbus and has a lesser growth rate but they saw fit to install a reburning plant. How long will Columbus remain a one horse town?

THERE IS AN OLD SAYING that "Good food — like gold — is where you find it." Evidently two of West Jefferson's financial figures have found it — good food, that is — at Ann and Tony's Restaurant. Charles A. Dozier (left) secretary of the Jefferson Savings Association, and Joe C. Sheller, manager of the Central National Bank are often seen scanning the menu there.

True Success Story Cookin' In W. Jefferson

By CHARLES McDERMOTT

Whenever I hear one of these tired complaints that mass merchandising has killed initiative and opportunity in this country for the "little man," I run into someone like Tony and his wife, Ann.

Tony, in this sense, is a little man. He operates a little restaurant in a little town. And if the Era of the Giants has killed his chances for success, then the giants have gone about it in an 007 manner.

Fact is, several of them have set the stage for what might bring fame and fortune to Tony, and give his little town a stiff shot of industrial adrenalin.

Pretty soon people began to talk about the little restaurant with the clean kitchen, the good food, and the homelike atmosphere with a fireplace and clean white tablecloths.

Tourists made return stops. Townspeople became regular patrons.

Some who came, came to savor a meat and cheese spaghetti sauce, and an Italian dressing which did something different for spaghetti and lettuce. (We'll come to this later.)

The same initiative and effort that was paying off in business for Ann and Tony, was paying off at home, too. Bill their oldest son, graduated from West Jefferson High, received a master's degree at Ohio State, then a Ph.D. at Notre Dame. He's now teaching political science at Duquesne University.

Son Tom attended elementary at West Jefferson, went to Our Lady of Hope at Newburgh, N.Y., and came back for his degree in classical languages at OSU. He's now in business with his dad, Mike, the youngest, a West Jefferson grad, is now at Ohio University working for a degree in education.

The fame of Ann and Tony's spaghetti sauce and Italian dressing gradually spread. Diners began to ask for "samples" to take home. A salesman from Peoria stops in for a supply. His boss has warned him not to come home without it.

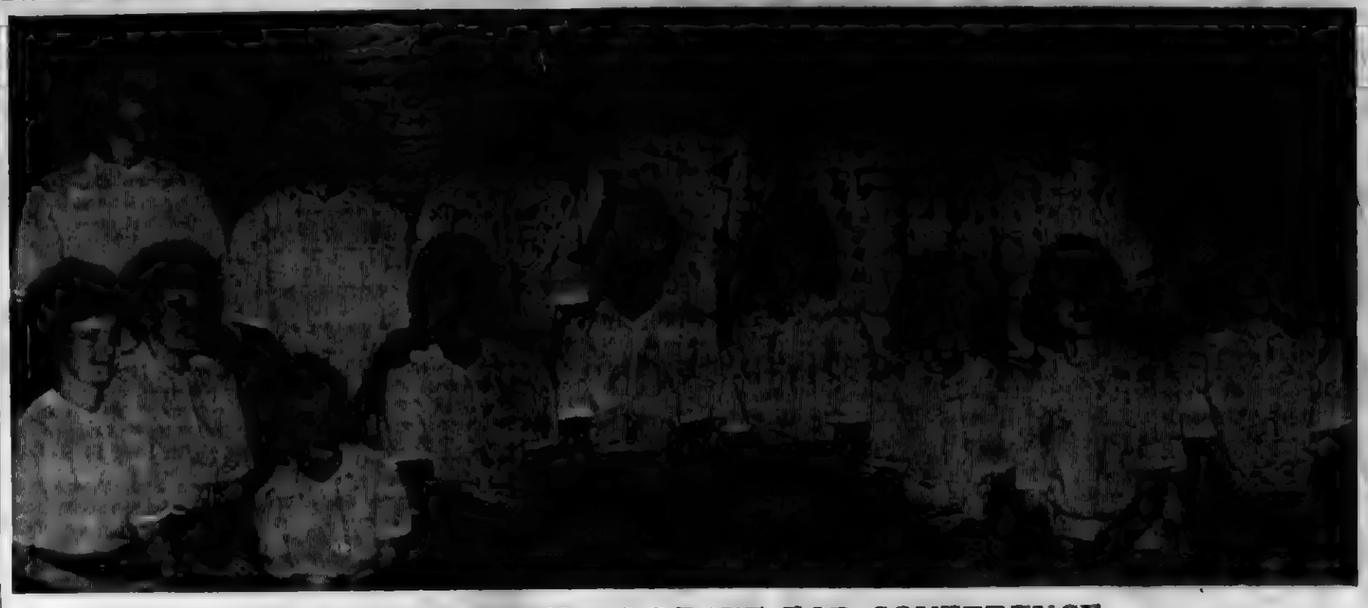
To keep up with demand, Ann and Tony now package the sauce and dressing under their own name. An official of a large outlet store nearby who happened to order spaghetti at Ann & Tony's, liked the dressing. He ordered more, a lot more.

If you're passing through the Food Pantry at Lazarus, you'll see it there, too.

Ann and Tony said sales are booming. They may have to expand. If this happens, West Jefferson will get a new industry. Tony may become a "big man."

And tomorrow, I'll hear the same old tired complaint, "There's no chance for the little man."

Urban Program Is New Industry



The gigantic task of rebuilding the older sections of the nation's metropolitan areas will assure generally high level of new homebuilding over the years ahead, according to Walter E. Hoadley, vice-president and treasurer of Armstrong Cork Co.

Hoadley, addressing several hundred members of the Ohio Savings and Loan League at a special meeting at Granville, asserted that the government's program to improve urban living conditions, including mass public transportation facilities, now looms as the greatest new growth industry facing the nation over the next two decades.

GLASS COMPANY PLANS NEW WAREHOUSE

FEDERAL GLASS COMPANY, division of Federal Paper Board Company, announces construction of a new modern 12,000 square foot warehouse adjacent to existing manufacturing and warehousing buildings on Columbus' south side at 515 E. Innis-av. The company recently completed construction and began production in a new 25,000-square-foot manufacturing building, which replaced an older glass-making facility. A complete line of molded glass manufacturing equipment is housed in this structure. This addition has enabled Federal Glass to expand its production capacity approximately 25 percent. The new modern Federal buildings such as these at their south Columbus location is an example of industry investment in the city's urban renewal program.

Near Goal In Hospital Campaign

United Hospitals Expansion Campaign officials announced Aug. 17 at the final formal report luncheon at the Athletic Club that $4,439,626 had been pledged.

They added confidently that "we will be well over our out. Only about 20 percent of goal when all prospect cards are accounted for" later this fall.

Richard M. Wolfe, general chairman of the $5.5 million drive, said slightly more than 80 percent has been raised and that officials have suspended active solicitations until the United Appeal campaign is over.

Wolfe praised the efforts of volunteers and news media and said the ultimate success depends on the follow-up efforts that will be made on prospect cards that are still the cards are in.

The report luncheon brought in $257,200 in new money, Wolfe said.

Nine Shelter Houses Seen For City Parks

Nearly $60,000 will be spent next month by the Columbus Division of Parks and Forestry to construct new shelter houses at seven area parks.

Two of the parks—Goodale and Franklin—will receive two shelter houses, according to city Landscape Architect Doug Strange.

Other parks scheduled for the new additions are Big Walnut, Woodward Memorial, Westmoor, Fairwood and Clinton Park.

W. F. Dalton Co., Inc., 4886 Dublin-rd, submitted the apparent low bid of $51,340 to build the houses. The Parks and Forestry Division decided to go an additional $2000 to add four feet of flagstone paving around the edges of the new sites.

The division will seek city council's approval on the matter Sept. 13 and, Strange said, contracts should be let the next day. The total cost of the project is believed to be some $2000 under the original estimate.

Broken down, the new additions will include:

BIG WALNUT — Located near Livingston-av, a 30 by 50 foot shelter will be constructed.

GOODALE PARK — A 30 by 20 foot shelter will be built near the lake there to serve as a warming shelter for ice skaters. And, a 30 by 30 foot shelter will be erected for for craft purposes.

FRANKLIN PARK — A 30 by 30 foot building is slated near the lake for ice skaters. It will be used for general recreational purposes. Another shelter, this one 30 by 40 feet, will be constructed in a picnic area near the new playground location.

WOODWARD MEMORIAL — A 30 by 50 foot building is slated here adjacent to the playground off Karl-rd. This will be an open shelter and used for crafts.

WESTMOOR PARK — A 30 by 40 foot building is scheduled for this new park near Valleyview Junior High School. It is the proposed site for the home stadium of the Westgate Hawks.

FAIRWOOD PARK — A proposed lake is expected to be built here in about three weeks. A 30 by 40 foot shelter will accompany it.

CLINTON PARK — One 30 by 40 foot building will be erected to eventually include facilities for canoe and boating enthusiasts. It will be an open shelter, off Fairmont-rd.

State Fair Announces Art Winners

Results of the judging in the Amateur Art Entries for the 1965 Ohio State Fair were announced today by Marion Ryan, Ohio State Fair art director. Ninety-seven entries will be exhibited out of the total 171 received.

Watch Franklinton Grow!

More and more during the past year we have heard the near West Side referred to as "Franklinton" or the "Franklinton area." There is some proud history associated with the name "Franklinton."

When the 1964 Systematic Housing Compliance program was begun as a pilot program in the near West Side, the boundaries were referred to as "part of the old Franklinton area." The program, a dramatic demonstration of the new concept of urban renewal, was highly successful.

Both the Urban Renewal Department of Columbus and the West Side Neighborhood Council received deserved commendations. The program is being continued and expanded this year — and the name "Franklinton" is becoming synonymous with the near West Side.

The Area Development Committee of WSNC recommended early this year that the near West Side promote the use of its former name. And the theme of this year's West Side Jubilee was "Franklinton — the West Side Story—Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." The Jubilee was sponsored by the West Side Board of Trade.

This isn't a belated salute to the area. Instead, our point is a suggestion for a meaningful promotion of the name "Franklinton" by the two most influential organizations in the area. Why not adopt the name Franklinton Community Council and Franklinton Board of Trade?

Franklinton is well along the way to rebirth. The dream of neighborhood unity is becoming a reality, and problems of zoning, health and youth programs are being faced with determination. In the process, a renewed community spirit is developing.

Other areas of the Franklin County community may not be moved to adopting or reverting to another area name. But they well may want to initiate some of the methods and spirit stirring progress in Franklinton.

He Owes Them This?

The man who signed the Columbus city income tax into law has permitted a self-seeking legislature to exempt itself, by law, from payment of the tax. Gov. James A. Rhodes, by withholding his power of veto, has given a little "payoff" to his fellow Republicans in the legislature.

We quote the word "payoff" because it is not our comment. A Republican member of the Ohio Senate told us shortly after the measure was passed that he expected Rhodes to let it become law without his signature. "The Republican members feel the Governor owes them this," he said.

Perhaps this act of paying off won't be too bad a deal if it encourages the Governor and the Legislature to begin paying what they owe to the people of Ohio. But we are not too hopeful it will have that beneficial effect.

An Editor's Outlook . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

'Cat Ballou' Won't Reap Alger Rewards

Among that happy breed of American scribblers who have been able to combine colossal incompetence with colossal success, none enjoyed a more gaudy triumph than Horatio Alger.

Between 1866 and 1899 the Alger plot, i.e., the rise of the poor but honest and energetic lad against the combined opposition of temptation, thieves, wicked uncles and snooty aristocrats, appeared under 113 different titles. Alger's publishers sold 150 million copies.

Jones

That his last book, "Walter Sherwood's Probation," was just as badly written as his first, "Ragged Dick," proves how marvelously some human beings can resist the enrichment of experience. Although, in his prosperous years, Alger made a couple of trips abroad, he never learned to describe anything. Sample:

"At last they reached Calcutta. Robert surveyed with much interest the great city of India, so different in its external appearance from New York, the only great city besides that he knew anything about." That's all the young reader learned about India.

And Alger's ability to get himself fouled up with dependent clauses was unmatched until Faulkner came along. My favorite passage from "Brave and Bold" reads: "Arriving in the city he took his carpetbag in his hand, and crossing the street, walked at random, not being familiar with the streets, as he had not been in New York but twice before, and that some time since."

But no polished American author of the 19th Century moulded the American dream as Alger did. He was an extension of the Revolution. His heroes were the proletarians, his villains the spoiled products of inherited wealth. But whereas Marx wanted to hang wealth from the lamp post, Alger's boys just wanted to get in on it. They made no bones about wanting money, but they were willing to take the sure road even though it lay across the desert of self-denial and through the slough of relentless labor.

Alger was a materialist philosopher. Virtue was more than its own reward. Virtue paid eight percent compounded semi-annually. But vice was a snare and delusion. Theft meant prison, sloth penury, dissipation disgrace and speculation ruin.

He reflected the fluid optimism of young America. There was room at the top for anyone willing to climb the ladder rung-by-rung. But the climbing was hard. The world wasn't going to give you anything.

When Charles O'Connor, the kindly superintendent of New York's Newsboys' Lodging House, read "Ragged Dick," he ordered bales of copies for his young paupers. To quote Stewart Holbrook:

"The boys at the House simply ate up the story. Faces shone with undictated washings. Politeness bloomed. Petty thievery stopped. Best of all, perhaps, was the fact that the boys got a hump on, as the phrase had it, and began to pick up pennies and nickels and dimes for errands, shoeshines, matches, fireplace wood."

The other evening I went to see the movie "Cat Ballou." It is slick and funny. In the row ahead of me sat a group of boys and girls about the age of the urchins, now long dead, who had read Alger in the Lodging House.

Our young movie-goers nudged each other and snickered when the fleeing rustler got into the lower berth with the heroine. They laughed when the alcoholic gun-fighter improved his aim by downing a pint of whisky. They roared when he lurched around the bawdy house, opening doors at random and getting outraged squeals. And they cheered when the heroine escaped hanging for murder and rattled away into the sunset in a stolen hearse piloted by her three boy friends.

A sophisticated satire, sure. But are our modern youngsters that much more discerning than the Old New York newsboys? What subconscious lessons do they carry home from "Cat Ballou"? What effect does Jackie Gleason's leering satisfaction at the contents of his coffee cup have on the kid who is offered his first drink? How is the high school mind conditioned when "Never On Sunday" and "Irma La Douce" make a jolly romp out of prostitution?

In his book, "The U.S. Economy," John Davenport says: "If a civilization is to progress, its advance must perforce be measured by superior values — the values implicit in morality, in aesthetics, and in religion."

The fact that Man habitually falls short of his preachments has led cynics to scoff at preachments. But the lower Man's aims, the lower his performance. When we grow tolerant of human misbehavior because misbehavior is "real" and we are "realistic," it is like neglecting a garden because gardens are contrived and weeds are natural.

A "Great Society" requires a high degree of labor, devotion and self-discipline. Give us a norm of dishonesty, laziness and profligacy, and eventually we all starve.

The painfully stilted maxims of corny old Horatio Alger helped make America both banker and nurse to the world. Where do we go with "Cat Ballou"?

Of The Story

RACIAL RIOTS that have erupted in Los Angeles, Chicago and other sections of the country in recent days are a frightening thing. More so than many of us may realize. Some of the troubled areas literally have developed into little wars. This always raises a question of what can be done to prevent a recurrence of such needless loss of lives — plus millions and millions of dollars in property destruction and wanton looting.

What sets off these racial explosions? Are they carefully plotted by extremist groups? Or are they started by seemingly minor incidents that become quickly inflated by tensions that have become so characteristic of the times in which we live?

Could a catastrophe such as that in Los Angeles strike a city like Columbus? Why of course it could. Seeds sown here and there by extremists can reap a horrible toll. There is no desire on our part to play the role of alarmist. But there is no denying that undercurrents do exist right here in Columbus. The radical right are employing all the techniques of modern propaganda—including use of inflammatory transcribed messages over unlisted telephone lines.

Certainly this is no time for a head-in-the-sand approach to one of the gravest perils to face the nation. Local law enforcement agencies need to be on constant alert to even the slightest sign of warning. If additional legislation — even at the federal level — is needed to support law and order it should be speedily enacted. In this civilized age there can be no tolerance of individuals or fanatics of any race, creed, or color taking the law into their own hands.

Frosting on the Cake

BY "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

Nine out of 10 confused men and women who come to my professional attention have no objective perspective about things intimately associated with their day-by-day existence. They blame everyone and everything except themselves, for their failure to "make out in life." The "world is agin' 'em" and how futile it is in too many consultations to disabuse their habit of life.

They just can't learn how to manage money, and suffer constantly from the burden and embarrassment of debt — but try to get any one of them to admit that "living high on the hog" for show and pretense is their own fault.

Narrow minded ignorance about rational sexual behavior is also a common fault.

Recreational indulgence is another dangerous and growing weakness in family budgeting. Couples who live without adequate and proper diet just must have two automobiles, an outboard motor, a cottage in the country. They take off right after work on Friday and get back about midnight Sunday. Such trips are not recreation. They are over-exertion both physically and financially, and the end result is unpaid bills and lapsed [illegible]surance.

Try to tell these victims to read three times as much and cut out most of the TV wasteland trash, and they are insulted. The real tragedy is that many individuals with superior mental tools never attain more than a semi-conscious awareness of what life is all about.

Thomas Wolfe and others have said in various ways, "you can't go back again." Meaning, we think, that a normal human life develops in progressive stages and that never, especially in the later ones, can any one be reconciled entirely with any of the others.

So what does one do? He is born and bred in a city or a village or the country. If he stays, as he probably doesn't, he continues to be familiar with his surroundings. If he goes, as he probably does, a time of nostalgia comes, and he goes back. What does he find?

The old swimmin' hole is gone. The water bugs no longer scamper upcurrent on a dappled woodland pool because there are no bugs, no forest, and no pool. You can't go back again. We leave this unfinished because

Today we need a call to repentance as was heard by the people in the days of Jeremiah. In the fifth chapter of Jeremiah we find the prophet preaching in the valley of Hinnon, in the temple courts and in the streets of Jerusalem; now orders are given to the prophet to go and preach before the king.

Rev. Conder

The message of Jeremiah was not to be shrouded in mystery. His job was simply to call those of the court back to repentance and to tell them the duties that were required by the Lord their God. Those duties consisted of doing all the good they could do with all the power they had. They were to do justice in defense of those who were injured, and must deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressors. They should do no wrong or violence, especially to strangers, the fatherless and the widows, and they were to turn from their vain forms of worship.

God then explained, through His messenger, what would happen if they failed to repent. The king and his court were told that their house would become a desolation. Jeremiah further declared that God would send against them destroyers and that they would have no protection.

Today we have a challenge to meet as did the people of Jeremiah's time. In this hour of world-shattering and fast-moving events, it is time we, too, had a call to repentance. God is still the only answer to the perplexing problems of the people of the world. However, we must put our complete confidence and trust in Him. Too, we must learn that our prosperity depends on honesty in trade, political morality, and a more Christ-like relationship with our fellow man. A complete return to Jesus Christ, our Divine Lord and Savior is the only way.

The Word of God tells us that Israel failed to listen to the prophet of old and his call to repentance. The doom of Israel should warn us against our continual moral decline. Now is the hour to rise to the call of our God. Let us forsake the materialistic possessions that stand in our way and turn to the spiritual blessing that are ours through Jesus Christ. May we, in a repentent attitude, pray as did our Lord in the Garden of Gethsemane:

"Oh my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not as I will, but as Thou wilt."

Hears Sound Of Bigotry

To the Editor:

Through the magic of telephone any resident of the Columbus area can get an earful of hateful and malicious diatribe leveled against the Nobel Peace Prize Committee, Rev. Martin Luther King and the entire civil rights movement. Under the patriotic sounding title, "Let Freedom Ring" a recorded message attacking King and his associates can be heard at any time of the day or night by dialing a particular number. The message concludes with an offer for a packet containing more details on the "Ugly Truth About Martin Luther King."

This hate-inspired piece of work is a sordid example of extremists' tactics, right here in the "All American City"! Listening to this malicious personal attack is obviously a very popular pastime for many people. According to the person recording the message they receive over 2,000 calls a day and average 1600 busy signals in a 24-hour period.

A call to the telephone company to complain about such a perverted use of the utility produces a polite but firm reply: "Sorry that is an unlisted number. We can do nothing about this."

It is indeed revolting that our community could produce such a piece of work and secondly, permit it to go unchallenged. Is this sort of sick and cowardly personal attack on a public figure a product of our local culture? Or worse still, is it a product of our national culture? If this is so, it is understandable what Father Duffy said a few weeks ago, in his memorial service to Adlai Stevenson, "Try as I would my imagination could not picture him (Stevenson) growing and flourishing in the soil of our local culture."

Is the apathy and cynicism of the people in Columbus so ingrained that they turn a deaf ear to pleas from the pulpit for compassion for their fellow man, but keep the other ear tuned in for bitter, sensational attacks on fellow Americans through "guilt by association" tactics? Surely we could and should counteract this sort of thing with the truth. Why not use telephone recorded messages which give the facts, not inferences, about the topics or persons being discussed by the "Let Freedom Ring" group?

I have been deeply concerned about the activity and reawakening of such groups as the Ku Klux Klan. There is too much vicious labeling and dirt smearing tactics in evidence, with the results that the air is charged with tension and anxiety. The climate becomes one of dissent and bitterness. Certainly we cannot afford to permit such scandalous, electronic-packaged attacks on American citizens and the ravings of the KKK to be our only source of "enlightenment."

Another means of counteraction could be a good healthy public forum in which conflicting viewpoints on vital issues can be expressed. But in such a way that there is ample opportunity for intelligent and thoughtful debate, and sound reflection. We desperately need to hear from the usually silent moderates as well as the conservatives and liberals. Such a forum could be sponored by churches, civic groups, etc., working together for the common good of Columbus. Is anyone interested?

'Racial News Suppressed'

TO the Editor:

In the aftermath of the worst racial rioting and insurrection in our history many conclusions are being reached. However, the storm signals were aloft innumerable times. For example, although Cincinnati is suffering a virulent attack of picketing, demonstrations, sit-ins and lie-ins not one word has appeared in the Columbus news media.

No one has benefited by this type of censorship for the Negro publications which enjoy an extensive circulation print full accounts.

What does it avail when newspapers complain of governmental suppression yet practice the identical vice?

Scientists From Battelle Present Paper In Tokyo

Plastic surfaces that will not cause blood to clot are the subject of a technical paper written by three Battelle Memorial Institute scientists for presentation at an international conference in Tokyo. Called nonthrombogenic, the plastic surfaces are of interest for artificial hearts, valves and arteries.

Dr. Robert I. Leininger, Michael M. Epstein, and Dr. Richard D. Falb are the authors of the paper which was to be delivered at a conference of the International Federation for Medical Electronics and Biological Engineering, being held from Aug. 22 through 27.

In addition to presenting the paper, Dr. Leininger will chair the conference's session on artificial organs.

Maj. Vega Earns Gold Oak Leaf

Maj. Felix Vega, 2047 McCoy-rd, was presented the gold oak leaf at a special promotion ceremony of the 37th Infantry Division of the Ohio National Guard during their annual field training in Camp Grayling, Mich.

Recently assigned as a U. S. Army advisor to the 37th's First Battalion, 166th Infantry, he just returned from a year in Saigon, Viet Nam, in the Third Corps Headquarters. A regular Army officer, he was stationed at Ft. Hayes for three and one-half years before being assigned to Viet Nam.

Maj. Vega's wife is the daughter of Brig. Gen. William B. Morr, 3345 Mountview, assistant district division commander of the 37th, who presented the major with the gold oak leaf.

EVERY COIN COUNTS

A COIN IN the fountain is an inexpensive way to bribe Lady Luck and both the superstitious and the generous constantly give it a fling at Northland. This month the change donated by Mrs. Paul Mullin, 1245 Crestwood-rd and that of thousands of others go toward the building fund which will eventually provide a new home for the hopelessly retarded children sheltered at the Peek O' Woe Ones on E. Broad-st. The haven for the helpless, now bursting to the eaves with 31 little ones, has been adopted by the business women of Beta Sigma Phi who, with Otto Heinzerling, foundation director, dream of a day when the doors instead of a waiting list will always be open to children born in tragedy. From the left are three members of the sorority, Mrs. Bruce Bishop, 4452 Kenfield-dr; Mrs. Charles Baley, 5570 Lindenwood-rd and Mrs. Mullin.

'EVERYTHING IS GO'

YMCA Meets Demand And Expands Program

A fall folder bearing the caption "Everything is Go" at the YWCA will be mailed to the more than 500 adult members of the YWCA the last of August. Copies will be mailed to non-members on request.

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Fred Duerler, a greatly expanded program is being planned for the Health Physical Education and Recreation Department. Most class periods will be extended from one half hour to 45 minutes, and to meet the increasing demand for swimming instruction and gym the number of classes has been doubled.

For the convenience of young employed members who work in the vicinity of High Street and the YWCA, a "High-Noon" program has been instituted for Mondays, consisting of an half hour's instruction period in golf, isometric exercises that may be taken in street clothes, or a dip in the YWCA pool. Coffee will be available for those who carry their lunch or members of the program may get a quick lunch at the YWCA cafeteria. For employed women, unable to participate in the noon time program, a variety of evening activities has been arranged.

Modern Dance will be featured from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday evenings. The following hour will be devoted to instruction of ballroom dancing. The ever popular slim and trim class will also be held on Wednesday evenings. This is a three hour package deal for women desiring to shed a few pounds and consists of slenderizing and stretching exercises to music, body toning, a low calorie meal, a tip-dip in the pool, and a lecture and discussion group on diet and exercise. A daytime session of "Slim and Trim" is also held on Wednesdays from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Intermediate and beginning golf will be taught on Friday mornings by Miss Carole Hayes, newly appointed director of the physical education program at the YWCA.

Self defense will again be featured in the fall program. Two six weeks courses in beginning and advanced Judo will be held on Tuesday evenings with Nick Liberty as instructor. Former students of Liberty have organized a Judo Club that meets at the YWCA every Friday evening.

Basketball instruction and practice will be given on Wednesday evenings and volleyball will be offered on Thursday evenings.

Classes in synchronized swimming will again be taught by Mrs. Edna Hines, who has been a pioneer in this field and is an internationally known authority on the subject. Classes for adults will be given on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12:30 to 1:30 p.m., and on Wednesday evenings, and for juniors on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons after school.

Her championship swimming team left recently for Mexico where they will be the guests of the YWCA of Guadalahara and Mexico City and will introduce this type of specialized swimming to the members of these Associations.

"TO INSURE THAT EACH SIDE WAS FREE to express its feelings," police officers from 12 units — counties and area municipalities — kept close, efficient control of the situation while offering no interference with the demonstration. Eighty-five, armed and in uniform, formed an effective, protective barrier for the picketing OSU students along the road in the background. Rock-throwing and attempts to cross the road by those attending the KKK rally were quickly brought under control by the law officers. An additional 150 in plain clothes mingled with the crowd. Klan Cross Burns In Ohio

By TOM W. SESLAR

The Ku Klux Klan is "very pleased" with its growth in Ohio "and especially in Columbus" in recent months, according to Imperial Wizard James R. Venable, national head of the Klan.

The Klan raised its hooded head again last weekend in its second major strike to tighten its grip on Ohio, once a Klan stronghold.

INCONGRUOUS beneath the flowing robes of a tall Klansman were his black tennis shoes. The axe handle in his hand was symbolic of his office.

A crowd of about 3,000 attended the rally and cross burning last Saturday in a field near Brunswick in Medina County. About 1,000 came Sunday. A Klan rally earlier this year at Lebanon mustered only 750 on its biggest day.

Included in last Saturday's crowd were 25 Ohio State University students who picketed the rally. A few rocks and bricks were thrown at the students, but police quickly brought the brick-throwers under control.

The crowd also included 300 police officers, 100 newsmen and 2,500 others. A few of the 2,500 were curious onlookers, but most appeared to be Klan members, prospective members or Klan sympathizers.

Imperial Wizard Speaks

Columbus' Flynn Harvey did not attend. The national Klan no longer recognizes Harvey as the Grand Dragon of Ohio because of "policy conflicts," according to Venable.

Venable, national head of the Klan, was the star speaker at Saturday's rally. Te delivered his sermon on white supremacy beneath an American flag and a Confederate flag—both at half mast because of the death of national Klan attorney Matt H. Murphy. Murphy died in an auto accident Friday in Alabama.

"We want at least one-half million brothers and sisters in Ohio," Venable said. "The Ku Klux Klan is going to win the nation, and we need five hundred thousand white Ohioans to help us with the victory."

Venable is an attorney from Stone Mountain, Ga. He said he has tried criminal and civil cases in 37 states.

Although the Klan has long opposed Catholics and Jews as well as Negroes, Venable said he would not care if a Catholic or Jew joined the Klan "as long as they're fighting for the same things we are."

However, a recording played in the afternoon attacked the Catholic priesthood for "secretly intermarrying the races." According to the recording some Protestant ministers are guilty of the same "unforgiveable, unholy sin," but the Catholic "sin" is more serious because "the priests have no choice — the orders come directly from the Pope in Italy."

Favors Speakers' Rule

Venable also said he opposed a change in the Guest Speakers' Rule at Ohio State University. He said he favored freedom of speech but hates "the thought of Communists speaking on campus while they are killing our boys overseas.

"I learned the truth about Communists and Negroes by defending them in the courts," Venable said.

The rally started officially at 10 a.m. Saturday, but even before dawn police had blockaded all roads in the area. Each car headed for the rally was stopped and searched. Police recorded all license numbers and names of drivers.

Police confiscated several weapons including shotguns, crowbars and a power mower blade. Owners of the weapons were given receipts and were told they could pick up the confiscated weapons on the next day.

Some persons — including the students from Ohio State —refused to have their cars searched until after police obtained search warrants.

The police did use search warrants in several cases, but allowed the students to enter the area without being searched after the students had been detained for 30 minutes.

More than 300 cars were parked in the rally field by 5 p.m. Klan women sold hot dogs, ham sandwiches and soft drinks inside a restaurant near the highway.

Students Picket

Outside, country - western music, church hymns and anti-Negro songs blared from loudspeakers. Klansmen clapped in unison and sang along with one recording that reframed: "America for the white, Africa for the black—send them niggers back." The record was played again and again "by popular request" throughout the afternoon and evening.

Before Venable spoke, Rev. H. G. Hill played his guitar and sang. Rev. Hill, a 72-year-old man from Stone Mountain, Ga., is the Klan Klud National chaplain).

The Ohio State students arrived at about 7:30 p.m. Several cars screeched to a halt on the highway, and the students jumped out. Immediately 30 state highway patrolmen, sheriff's deputies and city policemen positioned themselves in the middle of the highway between the students and the Klansmen.

The students, holding picket signs, faced the Klansmen across the highway. One of the signs said: "Klansmen Are American Nazis." Another said: "KKK — Poor, Stupid White Trash." A white coed held a wooden cross stained with drippings of red paint. The students, mostly white persons, sang "We Shall Overcome."

Feared Violence

Then someone on the other side of the highway yelled: "How many did you overcome in Los Angeles?" In the next few minutes several l arge rocks were thrown at the students, but no one was injured.

A police official told Spectator reporters he expected an outbreak of violence, but none developed.

A policeman said police were at the rally "only to insure that both sides are free to express their feelings."

The police forces — drawn from 12 police units — were organized by Norman Stuart, sheriff of Medina County.

Donna Trugman, one of the organizers of the student pickets, said the group protested the rally because "We feel we should fight for freedom in the United States before we worry about freedom in Viet Nam. As long as there is a Klan, we will oppose it."

A Cleveland newspaper recently quoted Miss Trugman denouncing the Klan. She said her family, which lives in Cleveland, has received several threatening phone calls since the article was published.

'Klan Won't Die'

At 8:30 p.m. the Klan crowd moved toward a huge wooden cross as the fever of the rally increased. The cross had been erected by about 20 men in the late afternoon.

Several men doused the cross with gasoline, and then lit it with a torch. The crowd roared as the cross burst into flame. Loudspeakers blasted forth with a spiritual called "There Will Be No Tears in Heaven."

One arm of the cross never caught fire, but as the rest of the cross blazed and then dimmed, the crowd began to dwindle. Cars started leaving in a steady flow.

Several cars again came down the highway, and picked up the students. The student cars raced away followed by two policemen on motorcycles.

After the rally Rev. Hill told The Spectator that the Klan could not be stopped.

"This Klan is not going to die. It is the same yesterday, today and forever," Hill said.

The Ku Klux Klan currently is under investigation by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Closed hearings have been started, and public hearings will start in October.

EAGER HANDS REACHED for the gasoline-drenched, burlap-wrapped tree trunks that were the cross; supported its weight and raised it to its 30-foot height. There was practice in the procedure of tightening the ropes to secure its position, and then tossing the loops free; lessons were learned at the rally held earlier this summer in Lebanon.

Center Opens Soon

Opening of the recreation center on Barnett-rd, adjoining the elementary just north of Livingston-av, is expected by late September, according to Nick Barack, Recreation Department superintendent.

Construction details are now being completed and, Barack said, the building will be put into immediate use when done. Dedication ceremonies will be planned at a later date.

Emphasizing that the facility is for the community's use and enjoyment, Barack said that residents will have a voice in planning the program through an advisory council, to be appointed from the area.

Service clubs, groups and interested individuals wishing to contribute to the center by supplying furnishings, drapes or other accessories are also welcome to help.

Anyone interested may contact the Recreation Department at Columbus City Hall.

The center, only public recreation facility in the city's sprawling far - southeastern area, will serve youngsters and their families from 15 schools.

A complete, year-round program of leisure time activities — social events, special interest clubs, crafts and recreation — for the community's adults and youngsters, will be available.

The center, built adjoining the new Barnett Elementary School, will share many facilities with the school.

Students will use such center services as the gymnasium, and certain classrooms will be available for the center's evening craft and art classes.

WON'T BE LONG NOW! These door will open soon, sometime late in September recreation officials expect. The recreation center will be put into immediate use when it is finished, according to Nick Barack, Recreation Department superintendent. And that will be none too soon for eager community youngsters and grownups alike. Wistfully watching building progress are Karen Walbel, 1656 Kenwick-rd, and Randy Kennedy, 2937 Hampshire-rd, daughter and nephew of Mrs. Richard Walbel, teacher at the adjoining Barnett School.

Forty-five Rosemore students entered about 90 projects in various categories in the industrial arts exhibit.

In addition, the school was awarded the trophy for the outstanding woodworking display. About 20 schools were entered in the competition.

First prize winners were, in the woodworking category,

City Golf Course Is Seeded

Granted a good growing season, East area golfers by next spring will enjoy play on the new municipal golf course on N. Hamilton-rd, now being seeded.

A combined structure, housing the clubhouse and maintenance building, also is under construction and is expected to be completed by the last of October.

The 18-hole, 71-par course is located at about 900 N. Hamilton-rd, just east of Port Columbus runway.

Cost of the clubhouse and maintenance building is $125,000, the irrigation system added $50,000 to the cost; and general construction of the course including earthmoving, fairways and tees, is $25,000.

The golf course, second municipal Columbus course, was financed from the recreation bond issue passed by voters.

School Doors Swing Wide For 106, 228

Columbus school officials, in the final countdown before the school year blasts off next Wednesday, this week announced all area systems are "go" except the new Olde Orchard School, under construction at 800 McNaughten-rd.

A "hopeful" target date of Nov. 15 has been set for the school's completion, barring unforeseen complications such as weather.

Children from Olde Orchard District will be housed temporarily at Maybury Elementary and Christ Methodist Church, and full day's schooling will be provided.

The school principal will inform each parent by letter this week of plans for busing the children to the temporary classrooms. Youngsters will be picked up at the regular bus stops.

Classes will be formed and, when Olde Orchard is completed, they will be moved intact, along with the teacher.

School officials have tallied an impressive, record-breaking 106,228 students expected on opening day Sept. 8, an increase of about 4000. This is the 18th year of steady increases in the school system.

In addition to Olde Orchard, two other new elementaries—Cedarwood and Gladstone — will join the school system this fall. Non of the three will be ready for occupancy next Wednesday.

In addition, expansions and remodelings at 17 existing schools will add another 105 classrooms to the school system, at combined cost of $2.75 million.

Half-day sessions will be held in all Columbus Schools on opening day, Sept. 8, with full schedules starting Thursday, Sept. 9.

OLDE ORCHARD ELEMENTARY school site, 800 McNaughten-rd, swarms with workmen in an intensive effort to complete the building by a Nov. 15 target date. Officials caution that this would be the earliest completion date, and would be impossible if construction were delayed by weather or other factors. Meanwhile, district children will be transported by bus to temporary quarters at Maybury Elementary and at Christ Methodist Church. Parents will be notified of arrangement details this week. School officials estimate that the student population in the fast-growing area is increasing at the rate of 400 to 500 a year.

Whitehall Council Eyes Fire, Police Pay Boost

First, tentative steps towards increasing Whitehall's police and firemen's pay scale to place the departments on a competitive basis with Columbus were taken by the city's finance committee Tuesday night.

No official action, nor general study of the proposed ordinance could be taken because only two councilmen were on hand at the session, arranged by Marvin Levine, chairman finance committee.

Council will take under study the tentative proposal that would reduce the firemen's working week from 72 to 56 hours, and raise the police and firemen's starting salary.

Columbus' recently passed ordinance brings the starting wage of the two departments $65 ahead of Whitehall's.

Discussed Tuesday night was a possible $60 a month raise for starting Whitehall patrolmen, and a shorter work week and a lesser raise for the firefighters.

It would be necessary to add a third platoon of firefighters to effect a 56-hour week for the department.

Levine protested a published report quoting a statement by Councilman Raymond Shipley that he (Shipley) would propose an ordinance raising the salaries of both divisions by $60 a month.

"This is an administration ordinance," Levine said. "Darrell Todd (safety director) has been working on it for months."

"The municipal government is not in business to make money," Levine continued. "If we have a surplus either taxes are too high or services insufficient.

"But on the other hand it must be economically feasible (to raise salaries in the city.)"

The problem of financing the program of salary wages is being studied by city officials.

Jones Resigns Civil Rights Council Post

Rev. Russell M. Jones, executive director of Columbus Civil Rights Council, has accepted a position as assistant director, Mid-West Field Office, United States Commission on Civil Rights.

He will spend two weeks of orientation in Washington, D. C. beginning Sept. 7, and then return to Columbus until Sept. 30 when he will leave for his new duties in Chicago.

No replacement has been selected by the Civil Rights Council.

Rev. Jones served on the YMCA staff from 1946 to 1956, and was then staff associated with Columbus Area Council of Churches until 1963. He was a member of Co-

TOLEDO AREA IS PATTERN

County Schools Are Hiking Trade Efforts

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Franklin County School administrators are working on a kind of "life insurance" for the more than 25,000 youngsters who will begin classes in the county Sept. 7.

Plans were formulated Wednesday (Aug. 25) during the County School's Administrators' Conference at the Olentangy Inn.

Tom Quick, County School superintendent, said he realized that "all our kids aren't going to go to college. We can't forget about them . . . we've got to insure their future, too."

What Quick is referring to is expanded vocational training which will give county children a chance to learn a trade of some kind. "This is also good insurance in case the student doesn't make it in college," Quick added.

In Franklin County, administrators are patterning vocational education along the lines of the successful Penta-County set-up in the Toledo, O., area.

Dr. William Ramsey, superintendent of the Penta-County Vocational School operation, spoke to Franklin County administrators during the conference Wednesday.

The Penta-County Vocational School includes five counties (Lucas, Wood, Ottawa, Fulton and Sandusky) plus 19 school districts.

Here in Franklin County the vocational high school concept is already being advanced. Penta-County has gone two steps further by offering (1) a two-year technical school beyond high school, and (2) a large adult evening program.

"There's a good deal of similarity between our district and the situation in Franklin County," Dr. Ramsey theorized. "We're suburban Toledo and here they are suburban Columbus."

Penta-County is cited by administrators as the "broadest, most comprehensive vocational school set-up in Ohio." They have 68 vocational units. Dr. Ramsey feels the same concept can be applied here. He said it takes "a good deal of cooperation."

According to Dr. Ramsey, only about 35 to 40 percent of high school graduates in Ohio go on to college. And, some 80 percent of Ohio students are in college preparatory classes. "It's obvious we're not meeting the students' needs," he said.

Of course, administrators don't want to go overboard with vocational training either. They don't want to make the business world seem so attractive that potential college students would change their minds.

But, a survey by the Ohio Board of Regents indicates that some 30 percent of Ohio college graduates are unemployable, Dr. Ramsey commented.

"College preparatory training is cheap," Quick says. "We can't overlook, however, the great need to prepare youngsters for a job."

Quick also added that increased vocational training is going to mean revamping many curricula in the county. "If it has an effect on dropouts and trains our children to better take their place in this world, it will be well worth the effort."

Barbara McCoy

Mrs. Roy McCoy

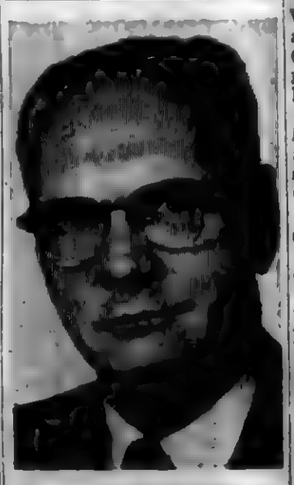
Who's The Hair Stylist? Who's The Hairdresser?

"She's a hairstylist; I'm a haidresser!" laughed Mrs. Roy McCoy, 4818 Calvin-dr, commenting on the friendly rivalry between herself and her daughter, Barbara.

They both just graduated with honors from the Nationwide Beauty Academy and are waiting upon their state board scores which will license them to "curl the world."

How do a mother and daughter wind up in the same graduating class?

Well, it's a short and sweet story.



After finishing at Walnut Ridge High School last spring, Roy McCoy suggested to his oldest daughter that she get busy and learn how to support herself.

"Fine," she replied, "but I won't go unless Mother does too."

"Fine," said Mother, who had never worked a day since her marriage, and off they went.

It proved to suit both of them to a "T", as they were two of the seven students to receive a certificate of merit out of a class of more than 100.

Eventually they plan to continue their "togetherness" with a shop of their own.

Defense Again Makes Tigers City Contender

New East football coach Chuck Robson isn't worrying too much about his defense these days — and he's got a big "thank you" for his Tiger predecessor, Aurealius Thomas.

Most departing coaches seem to have a habit of graduating most of their grid talent with them, but not Thomas.

AUREALIUS left Robson eight of the 11 defensive starters on East's '64 City League championship team to his replacement. That's no small "going away" gift when you recall that the '64 Bengals limited their opponents to a scant 70 points in nine games last fall.

Thomas wasn't so kind with the offense, however, leaving Robson only two starters, not including Sherman Lundy and Kent Schoolfield, two of the quicker halfbacks in the area last season.

Robson isn't complaining, however, not with that defense and a heavy forward wall which rates East no less than a co-favorite tag in the '65 CL running.

"OUR BACKFIELD won't be as fast as last year," Robson admits. "We've been concentrating on our offense." (East averaged 32 pts. per game while winning the City League title last year.)

But take a look at what Robson has back this fall—18 returning lettermen on a 75-man squad, 13 of them veteran seniors.

At end, Robson can choose Richard Smith (185), Tim Williams (170) or John Slappy (170); at tackle — Phil Cousins (227), Isaiah Kelley (225), Grady Bobo (235) or Jesse Shepard (215); at guard Willie Jackson (220), Bill Allen (185), and at center—Jim Moore (190).

THINGS AREN'T exactly frantic in the backfield where Robson has seven returning veterans in quarterbacks Harold Belcher (180) and Paul Stith (170), halfbacks Jim Griffith (165), George Strieklin (170) and Chuck Wright (180) and flanker backs Ronnie Bailey (160) and Rod Jones (155).

If you've counted only 17 you're right — senior Eddie Jackson (5-6, 145 lbs.) will be stationed at defensive halfback.

And if the 18 returning lettermen aren't enough, Robson has a bevy of prospects which include junior guard John Gaston (190), 6-2, 245 lb. sophomore Gene Harmon (defensive tackle) and junior halfback Harry Bass, out with a broken leg last season.

ROBSON AGREES with most City League coaches that Brookhaven will be his Tigers' chief roadblock in a title defense. Robson also listed Eastmoor, Central and Marion-Franklin as possible contenders. "There'll be a lot of big teams in the league this season," he concluded.

Biggest date on the Tiger schedule should be Oct. 8 when Brookheven comes calling at Harley Field. Forecasters see it as a battle of the top CL offense (Brookhaven's) and stingiest CL defense (East's).

RED SOX CLAIM WBBA'S MINOR CROWN

Inexperience Clips Edge Off Husky '65 Eastmoor Eleven

But Bob (who admits they're growing them pretty big in Warrior-land these days) won't be catching any 40 winks this season because Eastmoor has a few problems to take the edge off that size advantage.

PROBLEMS LIKE: only two returning lettermen in a squad of 90, 13 departed starters (offense and defense) and prospects of starting a seniorless backfield with a pair of sophomores, one tipping the scales at 125 pounds, soaking wet!

Other than that (like the guy says with one foot in the grave and the other on a banana peel), everything's rosy at Eastmoor this fall.

Stuart's problems started when three returning lettermen suddenly weren't returning at all.

WARRIOR CAPTAIN Mike Allen, a 190 lb. halfback, trotted off to Whitehall-Yearling, halfback Vince Rutledge turned up ineligible and 170-pound halfback Wayne Mixon (does 100 in 10 seconds flat) won't be available.

Add to that the graduation losses of fellows like guard-linebackers Mike Gornall and Dan Goldberg and Bob's looking around for a few familiar faces.

It doesn't take Stuart long to find them — 185-pound end Gary Cochran and 235-pound tackle Steve Gutridge.

"I HATE TO call it a building year," Stuart says, "but what else can you call it (upcoming season)?"

"We've got a lot of material but most of it is inexperienced. We've certainly got the kind of size on the line that lends itself to our system of power football," Stuart concluded.

The adequate size is clearly evident in Eastmoor's "up front" prospects. Consider the tackles — seniors Dan Ferris (6-3, 225) and Chris Lambrech (6-2, 215), junior Bill Wood (6-3, 208), Gary Stewart (5-9, 220) and letterman Gutridge (235).

THE WARRIORS' top guard prospects don't get much smaller — senior Jerry Speakman (210) and juniors Mike Ijams (207) and Rick Newpoff (190). Nobody figures to push around Steve LeFebvre (6-3, 210) either (Stuart's probable starting center).

Eastmoor's ends won't be any slouches in the weight department either. Not with senior Mike Abbott (6-1, 175), Larry Mixon (6-0, 190) and soph Jack Parry (6-3, 185) stationed at the flanks.

"Our offensive line blocking should be a definite strength," Stuart adds, "but that lack of experience, especially in the backfield, could be costly."

THE BACKFIELD speed should be better than average at worst with four of six halfback prospects listed as track sprinters in the spring.

A big question mark is quarterback where Stuart must decide between three juniors — Randy Yoakum (5-11, 160), Olaf Refsell (6-0, 155) and Bob Hamill (5-10, 165).

The traditional big fullback for a power offense is evident at E-M with juniors Steve Casto (6-0, 195) and Steve Fulton (6-1, 190) and sophomore Jim Little (5-10, 210) available.

AT RIGHT HALF, Stuart is trying to settle on either junior Bob Bainter (155-pound 10.5 sprinter), soph Rick Leck (160) or junior George Timmons (155).

Over at left half, quicksilver soph Kenny Levin (5-5, 125 lbs.) is battling it out with two junior sprinters—Phil Stark (150) and Dwight Cartier (155) for the starting nod.

Two defensive halfback specialists — juniors Mike Keim and Kermit Hawkins—should see plenty of action when Warrior opponents take over the pigskin.

LOOKING OVER the club's City League opposition this fall, Stuart sees Brookhaven (strong offense, good size up front) and East (eight of 11 defensive starters returning) as his Warriors' toughest opponents in CL play this season.

Ohio Department of Liquor Control Director Donald C. Cook has announced that two applications for new liquor permits on the East Side are being processed by the department.

Hamilton-rd, has filed for a permit for the sale of 3.2-percent beer for carry-out, and Dave Scneider, of the same address, has filed for a permit allowing the sale of beer, wine or spirituous liquor by-the-glass until 2:30 a.m. in a night club.

BELLI BRIGHT NOTE

'We're Sitting Ducks' — Gahanna's Troutman

With 13 starters departed and only seven lettermen returning from an undefeated (9-0) Mid-Eight championship squad last fall, Gahanna Lincoln football coach George Troutman is faced with a major juggling act this season.

Nobody in sight was able to cage Gahanna in Mid-Eight play when the Lions piled up 236 points while yielding only 54 to the opposition.

BUT FIVE all-leaguers, including All-State halfback Bobby Glover (leading Mid-Eight scorer), are missing from Troutman's lineup this fall.

The Lions' '65 crop did manage to salvage one all-league selection — 200 lb. fullback Dave Belli, around whom Troutman will be keying his offense this season.

One other letterman, 190 lb. Jerry Serafini, is the final backfield remnant of Gahanna's potent championship crew.

FORTUNATELY, Troutman does have some good reserve stock to look over with George Moor (165), Doug Young (170) and Ron Doran (145) available at halfback.

The big job of filling the shoes of standout quarterback Jack Shoemaker could well fall to Terry Becker, a 155-pounder also up from the Lion reserves.

Troutman, who lists an overall lack of speed as a major deficit this fall, might take a long look at newcomer halfback Alan Strickling, who showed a marked ability to "put 'em up and lay 'em down" for Ed Reary's trackmen last spring.

ON THE line, where Troutman says Gahanna will be "real small compared to last year," the Lions have a fair starting nucleus in lettermen tackles Nelson Bobb (210) and John Marsch (185), guards Barry Hennis (170) and Mike Jones (150) and end Mike Bokros (180).

RESERVE graduate Terry Luft (175) is another guard possibility with newcomer Steve Miller (160) ticketed for defensive linebacker.

Troutman sees a lack of overall speed as the Lions' number one problem this fall, pointing out the return of Belli at fullback (44 loop pts. last fall) as a major asset.

In the Mid-Eight, the Lion coach picks vet-loaded London (only '64 loss was 28-22 to Gahanna) as "most likely" to unseat his defending champions, with Mifflin also a contender.

TROUTMAN will be counting heavily on the leadership of his returning vets and the development of an "anxious to prove themselves" sophomore crop to keep his Lions in the running.

"Being defending champion puts us in a 'sitting duck' position. Everyone will want a piece of us," Troutman concluded.

SEPT. 3 AT GAHANNA:

Leukemia Bowl Benefit Pits Bisons Vs. Trojans

Leukemia, the disease that yearly seems to take its largest toll in youngsters, will be the real foe in the first-ever Leukemia Bowl Football game Friday, Sept. 3, at Gahanna High's football field.

Opponents in the bowl game, which promises to be an annual fund-raising event for the Franklin County Chapter of the Leukemia Society, Inc., will be the St. James the Less Bisons and the Gahanna Trojans, a pair of Little League grid elevens.

WINNER OF THE game, which begins at 8 p.m., will receive a rotating trophy. Tickets for the game may be obtained at the Leukemia Society's office (22 E. Gay-st, Room 889).

The entire month of September has been set aside by the Society for a fund-raising campaign to help combat the dread disease. Door-to-door canvassing is slated for Sept. 12.

Members of the Bisons are Gerry Tuttle, Mark Yinger, Matthew Piro, Robert Dolder, Mike Hummel, Mike Timmons, Terry Sabo, Mike O'Connell, Mark Smith, Carl Boyd, Tom Love, Mike Smith, Charles Pusateri, Gary Hysell, Tim Lynn, Scott Pharion, Mark Convertine, Mike Treiner, Gary Pica, Tim Varley, Mike Pizzuti, Paul Jones, Bob Carter, Matt Murtha, Jim Dennis, Mike Green and John Krieg.

INJURIES TAKE TOLL

Soph-Heavy Scots Short On Veterans

It's tough enough to lose all but three starters off a 2-7 '64 club which averaged only 10 points per game on offense while yielding 24 per on defense.

But that can be classified in the "water over the dam" category.

WHAT HURTS, however, is the fact that only three of six returning lettermen at Walnut Ridge have been able to get in much pre-school practice.

"We're so green," reports Scottie mentor Ralph Webster, pointing out that all but 39 (13 seniors, 26 juniors) of W-R's 92 candidates this fall are sophomores.

Add sub-average backfield speed and a line which will fall short of normal City League weight standards and Webster and his Highlanders could be in store for another tough campaign.

BRIGHTEST note at Walnut Ridge this fall will be the return of 6-5, 200-pound All-City and All-District performer Pat Beveridge, who will be converted from defensive tackle to offensive end this fall in an effort to beef up the Scotties' scoring punch.

Beveridge, who has missed almost two weeks of preschool practice with a torn shoulder muscle, should be ready to go when the Scots open their '65 campaign a week from tomorrow night vs. Teays Valley.

Guard and defensive end Chris Geer is one letterman who won't be back — the result of a broken leg suffered last spring.

Another letter winner — 5-10, 160-pound halfback Jay Hill — is another question mark, with a head injury.

THAT LEAVES tackle John Cruse (190), end Rick Houchen (6-0, 150) and defensive halfback Jim Waller (5-11, 165) on the list of "healthy" returnees.

Most sorely missed from that '64 club are center Jack Brown, tackles Dennis Eckton and Dave Walters, end Gary Smith, fullback Larry Baer and halfback Bill Masch.

Webster does have plenty of good prospects at each position. Opposite Beveridge at end could be Paul Gillespie Jr. (6-2, 170), Ken Anderson (6-0, 165), Mark Olson (6-1, 190) or Dave Dicken (6-0, 165).

SOPHOMORE Phil Sachs (6-1, 210) looks good at one tackle with junior transfer Bob Duringer, a 6-0, 210-pounder, currently slowed with a knee injury. Steve Norris (6-1, 175) or Bob Davis, a 190-pound soph, likely at the other.

At the two guard slots, Webster will have to pick a pair between Danny Westover (170), Craig Redderson (160), Bill Purpura (145), Berry Barton (160) and Steve Amos (165) — the latter pair transfers from Guam and Bexley High respectively.

Another transfer, Phil Roberts (6-0, 170, from Whitehall) joins reserve graduate Greg Fout (155), Brent Beveridge (165) and Joe DeWeese (165) in the battle for the opening center nod.

IN THE SCOTTIE backfield, Webster will have to pick between Ron Riggsby (145), Joe Hinkle (155) or Roy Barber (140) if Hill is unable to answer the starting call at right halfback.

Over at left half, Waller is available, backed up by sophs Bill Cater (155) and Ron Ansel (145). Although he played little offense last season, Waller (a track performer) should add much needed speed to the W-R offense.

Leading candidate for the starting fullback slot is senior Dan Arledge (6-0, 185) with juniors Lou Robbins (145) and Mike Life (150) scrapping to step up.

AT QUARTERBACK, either senior Dick Wollett (165, up from reserves), soph Roger McElroy (145, transfer from West Virginia) or junior Rick DeFourney (140) will get the call.

"Our weakness will be a lack of experience," Webster says, adding that his Scotties' passing game could turn out to be a definite strength.

In accordance with most of his fellow City League coaches, Webster selected East and Brookhaven as title favorites, with Central also listed as a contender.

LABOR DAY TIP: DRIVE IN YOUR CAR—DON'T DIE IN IT!

ONE MOMENT THE drivers of the cars above were speeding along their way. The next moment their destinations were changed. Two were on their way to the morgue, the other to a local hospital where for weeks he and his passenger were on the critical list. Each tragedy occurred this summer within a mile of Groveport-pk, and in each case there was no other car involved to shoulder the blame. Possibly a tree, a bridge abutment, a guard rail and a utility pole could be called contributing factors. But the real culprit was speed. Is the greatest difference between these drivers and yourself that "They didn't get away with it"? This weekend 38 persons are predicted to die on Ohio's highways. Speed, ignore your safety belt, or drive with a few drinks under it and the odds go up that you will be one of the 38. It is no roll of honor.
